DUBLIN SEIZES £5m IRA FUND

Link with kidnap of supermarket chief

By CHARLES LAURENCE in Dublin

THE Dublin Parliament last night passed emergency legislation enabling the Eire Government to seize up to £5 million of IRA money held at a bank in the republic.

Police sources later indicated that the money was probably linked with the kidnapping 15 months ago of Mr Don Tidey, chief executive of a large Irish supermarket chain—for whom the IRA had demanded a ransom of £5 million.

Mr Tidey was taken from his Dublin home by IRA gunmen in Nov., 1983. He was freed a fortnight later after a shoot-out involving police, troops and terrorists in Co. Leitrim. A policeman and a soldier died in the battle.

Associated British Foods, the parent company of Mr Tidey's firm, Quinnsworth, had said it would follow the advice of the Dublin Government and not hand over any ransom.

But Dublin police believe Associated British Foods had come under increasing pressure recently to pay a ransom in the region of £2 million.

Mr Tidey and his family have been closely guarded since he was freed.

Last night's emergency legislation seizing the IRA's £5 million was kept a close secret until the unnamed Irish bank closed at 3 p.m. This prevented the IRA withdrawing the funds to escape seizure.

'Funding murder and destruction'

The money will be passed to the jurisdiction of the High Court when a document bearing the seal of the Minister of Justice is presented to the bank as it opens at 10 a.m. today.

Mr Michael Noonan, the Justice Minister, told the Dublin Parliament — the Dail — that the money was "the proceeds of criminal activity by the IRA—specifically extortion under threat of murder and kidnap," and was to be used by the IRA to "fund their campaign of murder and destruction."

The dramatic move in the Dail came at the end of a major operation by the Garda, the Irish police, in which they had followed the money as it crossed several international borders.

Mr Noonan said the money had been paid to the IRA abroad and had been "laundered."

"The Garda had specific information of the handing over of large sums outside this Government's jurisdiction, and the details of its movement into the Irish banking system.

"They also had independent evidence of its origin in documentary form," he said.

The documentary evidence came from legal proceedings instigated in a foreign country, but Mr Noonan would give no further details.

"The necessity for this Bill came from a specific situation that has serious implications for the maintenance of public order in this country," he said.

The Opposition leader, Mr Charles Haughey, said his party would support the legislation as it recognised that it was in the national interest.

The Dail passed all stages of the emergency measure in 40 minutes.

It then went to the Senate and was later signed into law by the President Hillery.

The measure—an amendment to the Offences Against the State Act—provides the Government with powers of seizure for six months, but can be renewed at short notice if necessary.

Legitimate owner can appeal

Any legitimate owner of seized cash can appeal for its return. After that, the Government can apply for it to pass to the exchequer.

There was speculation in Dublin last night that victims of IRA kidnap and extortion may now appeal for the return of their money.

It is estimated that the IRA needs £2 million a year to fund its terrorism as well as its political campaign.

About £229,000 comes from the American organisation, Noraid; Col Gadaffi has also provided cash—and a considerable amount is raised by armed robberies.

Running IRA costs £2m a year

By JAMES ALLAN and A. J. McILROY

SECURITY chiefs in Ireland estimate that the Provisional IRA needs up to £2 million a year to finance its operations, on both the terrorist and political fronts.

In recent years, with the clampdown by the American authorities of the activities of Noraid, the US-based fund-raising front for the Provisionals, the IRA has not been as flush as it was.

But with nearly 15 years' experience behind it, the IRA has become adept at opening up new avenues of income as others close or dwindle.

Gaddafi helps

In Britain, collections are made from sympathetic Irish workers and through Gaelic dances and festivals.

But the IRA clearly gathers in more money from within Ireland than from Britain.

On both sides of the border, the IRA engages in kidnappings, bank and post office robberies, racketeering in the form of drinking clubs, drug-peddling and front-companies usually involved in the building trades.

Blackmail, extortion and fraud also add to the IRA's funds.

Col. Gaddafi, the Libyan leader, has made no secret of his sympathy for the IRA and has been a contributor over the years both in terms of cash and arms.

8,000 MORE BABIES BORN

Britain had a small baby boom in the last six months of 1984 with 8,000 more live births than in the same period of 1983.

But the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys report that for the whole year births per thousand women of child-bearing age were almost unchanged at 59·6, compared with 59·7 in 1983. The total of live births was 654,000.

Breakthrough hailed in Whitehall

By NICHOLAS COMFORT Political Staff

THE Irish Republic's freezing of several million pounds of IRA funds in a previously-unidentified bank account was welcomed in Whitehall last night as a major breakthrough in the fight against the Provisionals.

In particular, it was seen as the best possible news for Mrs Thatcher as she set out for Washington with an appeal to Americans to stop funding the IRA's campaign of terrorism high on her agenda.

At the same time, Government sources stressed that the action had been taken by the Dublin authorities on their own knowledge and initiative, with no suggestion of British involvement.

Nor was there any clear evidence of foreknowledge among Ministers at Westminster of a security coup which they were last night regarding with "quiet satisfaction."

Ironically the announcement came just after Mrs Thatcher had told MPs of her intention to stress during her visit to America that the IRA's campaign was directed as much against the Republic as against Britain.

The first reaction at Downing Street was that while the timing of the action against IRA funds would have been a "marvellous gesture" by Dr Garret FitzGerald's Government if planned to coincide with Mrs Thatcher's initiative, it was almost certain to have been sheer coincidence.

In the Commons Mr Kinnock, in an exchange with the Prime Minister, notably free from their rancour last week over Mr Clive Ponting, offered firm support for her attempts to stop the flow of American finance to the IRA.

Govan wins £40m order for ferry

By JOHN PETTY Shipping Correspondent

A £40 MILLION order for the biggest passenger ship to be built in Britain since 1969 was given to Govan Shipbuilders of Glasgow by P & O yesterday.

The 31,000-tonne "cruise-ferry" for the Hull-Rotterdam route of North Sea Ferries will be capable of worldwide operation. The yard's workforce of around 2,200 could be increased by up to 300 while the ship is being built.

Associated British Ports is to spend £5 million on a new terminal for the ship at Hull. It will be the biggest investment in the port for 15 years.

A similar ship is to be ordered in Holland soon by Nedlloyd, P & O's Dutch partner in North Sea Ferries, which is one of the most successful shipping companies operating out of Britain.

Union pledge

The way was cleared for the new investment by P & O's recent sale of its money-losing five-ship English Channel ferry fleet to European Ferries for £12,500,000.

The ship is to be delivered in March 1987. Union leaders at Govan saw P & O yesterday and promised to deliver a quality ship on time.

British Shipbuilders beat rivals from many parts of the world, including West Germany, Japan and South Korea, to win the contract.

Govan is also in the running for a contract to build three bulk carriers for a Turkish owner. One of the carriers will be built by Sunderland Shipbuilders if the contract is clinched.

The new ship will have capacity for cars and lorries and large public rooms. All cabins will be of cruise-liner standard. She is the biggest passenger ship built in Britain since the QE 2, 67,140 tons, was delivered in 1969 from Clydebank's John Brown yard.

BANKS TO SET UP AN OMBUDSMAN

By Our Banking Correspondent

Britain's big banks are to set up a Banking Ombudsman to deal with complaints next year in line with recommendations of the National Consumer Council.

He wil deal with personal customers only. Business customers will be expected to settle their problems directly with the banks or else go to law.

The Ombudsman will have power to make awards of up to £50,000 and deal with complaints arising from bank activity in making loans as well as providing trust and insurance services.

54 ESCAPE

By Our Staff Correspondent in Bonn

NEW RISE IN PETROL PRICES

By ROLAND GRIBBEN

A SECOND round of petrol rises in a week started last night as oil companies completed a third increase in the cost of industrial fuel so far this year amid strong protests from road hauliers.

Shell led the way with a 2·7p a gallon rise, taking the cost of a four-star gallon to an average of 194·6p after last week's 3p-4p increase. Other major groups are expected to follow suit.

The price of diesel is rising more steeply, up by 6p a gallon to 194·1p. Diesel has risen 32p a gallon since September and is more expensive then petrol at present in European markets partly because of heavy demand for heating oil.

Oil companies expect an increase in petrol duty in next month's Budget, pushing the cost of a gallon through the £2 barrier.

150 killed in Spanish air crash

By TIM BROWN in Madrid

AT least 150 passengers and crew, including two Britons, were killed yesterday when an Iberia Airlines Boeing 727 plunged into a mountainside near Bilbao, in Spain's Basque country.

The "businessman's special" from Madrid to Balbao hit a television mast and other aerials before crashing into the mountain. It was 18 miles from touchdown at Sondica airport.

The first rescuers found the bodies of passengers and the wreckage "spread like confetti" near the hamlet of Bolivar. The civil guard commander in charge said: The nearest road is a kilometre away and everything is knee deep in mud.

"It is just possible that someone was still alive after the initial impact but no one could have survived after the explosions that set fire to what remained of the aircraft."

Married last Summer

The Britons were named as Philip Moon, 30, a representative of the Oxford University Press in Spain from Burnham Beaches, Buckinghamshire, and Robert Wallis, a businessman based in Madrid. The British Embassy in Madrid was still investigatin gthe nationality of three others.

Mr Moon leaves a widow, Lesley, 20. The couple met in Portugal and were married in Oporto last summer. His parents have four other children.

Among several prominent Spaniards on board was Señor Gregoria Lopez Brava, who was a former Foreign Minister and earlier had been Minister of Industry during the Franco régime.

Fourteen months ago Spain was stunned by two major air disasters in the space of ten days. Both happened at Madrid's Barajas airport and in the first, 181 people were killed, and in the second, 93.

POUND STANDS UP TO FRESH SURGE IN $

By Our Financial Correspondent

Sterling stood up well to a further surge in the dollar yesterday and closed at $1·09¼ after dipping to $1·0880. The £ also gained 2·3 pfennigs to DM3·62¼ and almost 7½ centimes to 11·08 French francs, and its trade-weighted average rose 0·4 to 71·6 per cent.

Demand for dollars resumed on the Continent. Initial buying sent it through the DM3·30 barrier before the Bundesbank stepped in and sold about $50 million. It closed at DM3·3140, up alumost two pfennigs.

Interest rates in the London money market edged higher because of the strength of the $. Government stocks also held up well while share prices shrugged off initial uncertainties, with the FINANCIAL TIMES 30 share index closing 7·0 at 977·5.

Pit overtures revived by No 10 talks

By JOHN RICHARDS Industrial Correspondent

FRESH moves in the bid to find a basis for settling the 50-week pit strike were underway last night following an hour-long meeting between Mrs Thatcher and TUC leaders.

The seven-strong monitoring group of senior union leaders, led by Mr Norman Willis, TUC general secretary, were at Congress House, London, awaiting the outcome of behind-the-scenes contacts between the parties.

Mr Peter Walker, Energy Secretary, had been conveying the TUC's view to the Coal Board.

The TUC was maintaining contact with both the miners' union and leaders of the pit deputies, Nacods.

Today the full 24-man NUM executive is due to reconvene in London to prepare for a special delegate conference on the dispute.

Details of the peace moves were being kept confidential during the exchange transmitted via the TUC and the Energy Secretary.

Central point

But they still centre around draft Coal Board proposals reported by Mr Willis to the NUM executive last week. Attempts so far by the NUM to get these terms modified have met with a Board response that they are "not negotiable."

Mrs Thatcher also emphasised to the TUC yesterday that while the Government wants an early resolution of the strike, any agreement "must deal clearly and unambiguously with the central point of the dispute."

This was a firm indication to the NUM that Ministers will support the Coal Board in refusing to allow union amendments which delete all reference to the closure of uneconomic pits from the proposed peace formula.

It was thought that the Board

GAG LIFTED ON NUM SPOKESMAN

NUM leaders in South Wales have lifted the gag on the man who has acted as their spokesman for the past 11 months. Dr Kim Howells, 37, was ordered last week to make no further Press or TV comments after a row over suggestions that the area's 19,600 miners might return to work without a national settlement.

But yesterday, following a meeting of the South Wales executive, Dr Howells was reinstated in the role. It is understood the executive were surprised at the volume of support for him.

JOSEPH SCHOOLS 'EXOCET'

By MARGOT NORMAN Education Staff

AS the National Union of Teachers named 216 schools to be hit next week by a three-day strike over their 12½ per cent. pay claim, Sir Keith Joseph yesterday dropped a bombshell which left the employers' negotiating position in shreds.

The Education Secretary told the Commons there was "no prospect whatsoever" of funding a separate 7 per cent. package wanted for restructuring the teaching profession.

Leading members of the employers' negotiating team were stunned by Sir Keith's comments. "Good God!" exclaimed one. "He's dropped an Exocet on us. Where are we supposed to go from here?"

The team have carefully costed a package that would add just over 7 per cent. to the salaried bill before taking into account the annual pay rise.

It would have revamped teachers' salary scales and imposed tougher new contracts and regular assessments for teachers.

Suitable deal

Before putting the restructuring package to the teachers the employers' leader, Mr Philip Merridale, took it to Sir Keith and was told that if he and the teachers could reach a suitable deal Sir Keith would fight for the money needed in Cabinet. No figure was mentioned.

Sir Keith said he saw no prospect whatsoever of a 7 per cent. increase and hoped teachers' leader "will not mislead their members."

Meeting the teachers' 12½ per cent. pay claim in full would cost £535 milion, the employers estimate. The cost of a 7 per cent. restructuring package would be around £400 million in the first full year.

KIDNAP–THE IRA HEDGE AGAINST INFLATION

By A J. McILROY

THE godfathers of the I R A and the Irish National Liberation Army have extorted millions of pounds in kidnap ransoms, most of them unreported for fear of reprisals.

Security forces on both sides of the border admit that although massive publicity has been generated by spectacular kidnap cases, these are the tip of the iceberg.

Three relatively recent 'spectaculars' that went wrong illustrate just how much the terrorists rely on this activity at a time when inflation and the rising dollar have pushed up the cost of arms.

A two-million pound ransom was demanded for the return of the Derby-winner Shergar, taken in February 1983 from the Co. Kildare stables of the Aga Khan. The ransom was never paid and the stallion's fate remains unknown.

In the following summer the I R A hungled the kidnapping of supermarket chief Mr Galen Weston, and when at the end of the year they snatched Mr Don Tidey, Mr Weston's chief executive, police rescued him unharmed after 23 days in captivity, the £5 million ransom unpaid.

If all three kidnaps had worked it would have netted the I R A £12 million to finance its terrorist activities, to give money to the families of men and women terrorists in prison or detention, and to fund its political front, Provisional Sinn Fein.

The kidnappings took an even nastier turn at this time with the increasing activity of the I R A's breakaway faction, I N L A, who continue to raise many thousands of pounds in actual or threatened kidnaps in border areas.

Planner demoted

So seriously did the Provisionals take the setback over the three major kidnappings that they demoted the "mastermind" behind them, a man from Co. Tyrone, Northern Ireland, who had advocated past spectaculars that included the helicopter escape of I R A prisoners from Mountjoy prison, Dublin, in 1973.

The kidnap fear is ever-present but rarely talked about among the wealthy in the Republic, particularly executives working for multi-national companies.

Some are even paying £2,000 a year premiums to insure themselves against kidnappers.

One Dublin brokerage confirmed yesterday that it continued to have well over £1 million worth of business on its books from frightened potential targets.

Lloyd's insurance

A leading underwriter with Lloyd's of London has disclosed insuring more than a dozen Irish businessmen against the risk. A number of claims have already been paid.

Of 10 major kidnappings in 12 months in the Republic, all but one were terrorist-related according to official sources.

On Oct. 13, 1981, Mr Bernard Dunne was taken on in full view of a Customs post. He was stopped at the scene of a fake traffic accident on the Eire side and captured by armed men.

He was released unharmed five days later. It is believed a ransom of £500,000 was paid.

The first major kidnapping of recent times was that of Mr William Johnstone, a member of the Northern Ireland Police Authority.

He was taken by the Provisional I R A in December, 1972, and released without any disclosure of a ransom being paid.

Niedermayer tragedy

A year later Mr Thomas Niedermayer, West German consul in Northern Ireland, was taken from his West Belfast home. His body was not found until March 1980.

A member of the Provisional I R A later received a 20-year sentence for his part in that kidnapping. It was believed Mr Niedermayer died of a heart attack shortly after his abduction.

The I R A was also believed to be responsible for the kidnapping of Lord and Lady Donoughmore in June 1974. They were held for four days after being taken from their home near Clonmel, Co Tipperary.

The kidnappers demanded the release of the Price sisters who were being held in Britain for their involvement in the London car bombing campaign. Lord and Lady Donoughmore were found in Dublin unharmed.

In 1975 Dr Tiede Herrema, chief executive of Ferenka, was seized on his way to work in Limerick. The kidnappers demanded the release from prison of Dr Rose Dugdale and a number of others who were serving sentences in the Republic for acts of political violence.

LIBYANS' TRIAL VERDICTS SOON

The jury in the trial of four Libyan students accused of plotting to cause explosions in Whalley Range, Manchester, last March, is expected to retire to consider its verdicts at Manchester Crown Court this morning.

It will be the 13th day of the high security trial, in which the Crown alleges that a "hit squad" tried to terrorise enemies of Col Gaddafi's regime. During his summing up, Mr Justice Cantley told the jury to ignore what they had heard or read about Col Gaddafi and the regime in Libya.

PILOT NAMED

The Harrier pilot killed in Monday's mid-air collision over West Germany was named yesterday as Squadron Leader Bruce Cogram, 42, who helped train many of the Harrier pilots who flew in the Falklands campaign. A married man with three children, he was based at Gutersloh. His home was at Market Deeping, Lincs.

Men of the R A F Central Band forming a guard of honour at Lyneham, Wilts, when the bodies of 13 of the 19 airmen who died in last week's motorway crash in West Germany were flown home yesterday. The funeral service for the six other bandsmen will be held in Germany tomorrow.

PROBLEM OF BANK SECRECY

By BARBARA CONWAY
City Staff

THE action by the Dail has raised once again the question of how the movement of suspect funds can be identified and traced through the international banking system, despite virtually universal rules of strict banking secrecy.

Similar problems were faced last year by the sequestrators appointed by the courts to trace, and secure, monies belonging to the National Union of Miners.

Most of the major banks in Ireland yesterday were anxiously awaiting further details of the case raised in Parliament since it was quite possible that the bank concerned might not be aware of its involvement until the serving of the court order.

Bank officials pointed out that large sums of money could easily have been split into several individual accounts, to attract less attention, and that even sums of over £1 million would be unremarkable if they were in a business account in a financial centre such as Dublin.

'U.S. origin'

The brief account given by Mr Michael Noonan, Justice Minister, of the way that the money had reached the republic included a reference to the funds being moved "across international frontiers" before reaching Ireland, and that there was independent evidence to verify the police information because of "legal proceedings taken by an unnamed public authority in a foreign country."

Banking circles in Dublin, where many executives stayed late at the office trying to squeeze more information from the financial grapevine, suggested last night that the funds had originated in the United States and that the American authorities have been inquiring into the exact extent of fund-raising there for the I R A.

Copyright levy on all blank tapes proposed

By ROBIN STRINGER TV and Radio Correspondent

LEVIES on blank audio and video tape are recommended in a Government Green Paper published yesterday.

They would be collected and distributed to copyright owners as compensation for the home-taping of their music and their films.

The paper sets maximum limits for the levies of 10 per cent. on an audio tape and five per cent. on a video tape.

Each levy, payable at the point of sale, would yield about £5 million a year.

Mr Pattie, the Industry and Information Technology Minister, said he was seeking responses to the proposals by the end of April with the intention of incorporating them in a new Copyright Bill to be introduced during the next Parliamentary session.

But there would be exemptions, such as audio tapes of less than 55 minutes' playing time and certain groups such as the blind who used tape for purposes which did not infringe copyright.

Not justified

No exemption is proposed for education establishments but payment of the levy would entitle them to make recordings of all broadcast material for re-playing at any time during the teaching process.

The Tape Manufacturers' Group said last night: "We do not accept that a levy is justified and nor do groups like the National Consumer Council.

Video firm beats BBC with 'Dallas' episodes

By Our T V and Radio Correspondent

ADDICTS of "Dallas" unable to wait even until March 27 for the B B C's resumption of the saga will now be able to see almost all the remaining 13 episodes before then if they so wish.

Yesterday, in response to the B B C's decision to bring forward the showings from the autumn to next month, Guild Home Video said that it would now "rush-release" the episodes starting with the first three on Feb. 27 and continuing with the rest in batches of three at fortnightly intervals so that all would be out by mid-April.

Previously the company had intended to release them at monthly intervals, but the B B C decision announced on the air by Terry Wogan on Monday night made it think again.

"Clearly, our wish to bring 'Dallas' back to the public has worked well," said Iain Muspratt, Guild's group managing director, last night.

This latest manoeuvre in the long-running "Dallas" saga stems from Thames Television's original acquisition of the next "Dallas" series.

That provoked a hurt B B C to cut off its current "Dallas" series in midstream on Feb. 6 and postpone the remaining 13 episodes to the autumn when Thames planned to screen the new series.

But on Monday, the day Guild announced its video plan, the B B C countered with the new, earlier starting date for the resumption.

STANLEY STANDS FIRM

By NICHOLAS COMFORT
Political Staff

THE haze of cordite which built up during Monday's climactic Commons debate on the sinking of the Belgrano and the prosecution of Mr Clive Ponting dispersed yesterday with the Government convinced its handling of the issue had been vindicated.

Mr John Stanley, armed forces minister, whose resignation Labour spokesmen had sought for allegedly seeking to mislead the House, remained at his post after vigorously defending his conduct during the closing speech of the debate.

And the promise of Mr Heseltine, Defence Secretary, to supply the document on the sinking of the Belgrano known as the "Crown Jewels" to the Commons Foreign Affairs Select Committee was seen as having subdued charges of excessive secrecy.

Mr Kinnock, the Labour leader, insisted in a BBC radio interview yesterday morning that there were still important questions to be answered

No split

Meanwhile the Liberals and S D P were playing down talk of a split after they had taken separate courses in the second of two votes at the close of the debate.

In the first, the House rejected by 350 votes to 202, a Government majority of 148, a Labour contention that Ministers had betrayed their responsibility to Parliament

In the second, a Government motion recognised that the sinking of the Belgrano was a "necessary and legitimate action" was carried by 351 votes to nil.

The alliance parties voted with Labour in the first division, on the ground that while they endorsed the sinking of the Belgrano they felt the issue had been mishandled since.

But in the second vote the S D P sided with the Government while the Liberals, together with the official Opposition, abstained.

By MAURICE WEAVER Industrial Staff

A MASS meeting of crewmen from three coaling vessels berthed on Tyneside voted yesterday to ignore a High Court ruling, granted on Monday to shipowners Stephenson Clarke, that they should take on coal destined for Thames power stations.

They did so after Mr James Slater, general secretary of the National Union of Seamen, had told them that he and his officials, on whom the injunction was served, would not risk contempt proceedings by defying it.

Mr Slater said later: "I explained to the crew members that to avoid prosecution I must withdraw the instruction that the coal should not be loaded. But at that point my members decided to take the matter into their own hands."

Mr Vincent Allison, the union's Tyneside official, on whom the injunction was also served, said: "There is no question of our defying the law—that is a mug's game and can only lead to immense fines as we have seen in other cases.

"But what the men decide to do themselves is obviously quite different and in this case they were absolutely unanimous that the ships will stay empty."

Chartered by C E G B

The three vessels, the Pulborough and Steyning berthed at Blyth and the Wilmington lying at Jarrow, are all owned by the Stephenson Clark line which was granted the injunction by Mr Justice Staughton.

The Central Electricity Generating Board has chartered them to carry coal from the Northumberland and Durham coalfields to the London area power stations, but the unions imposed the "blacking" in support of the miners' strike.

Even if the crewmen had agreed to take on the coal, the Transport Workers Union and the Ntaional Union of Railwaymen have said their shore-based loaders will refuse to move it.

At yesterday's mass meeting of the crews in Blyth, men from three other ships — the Oswestry Grange, Garrison Point and Crusader Point — also agreed not to take on coal supplies for the power stations.

Mr Slater said: "It does seem that the serving of the injunction has had the effect of hardening attitudes at grass roots level."

DATES AGREED FOR TWO PITS TO CLOSE

The closure dates of two pits in Nottinghamshire were agreed yesterday at a colliery review meeting attended by Coal Board and union representatives. Moorgreen colliery, at Eastwood, will close on July 19, and Pye Hill, Jacksdale, on Aug. 12.

Moorgreen employed 1,050 and Pye Hill 1,070 until the management and unions, including the N U M, agreed two years ago to run down the work force. Today Moorgreen employs 410 and Pye Hill 500. About 140 employees will remain to complete salvage work.

There have been no compulsory redundancies, and employees aged up to 50 have been offered alternative jobs. Those over 50 have zeen offered the choice of voluntary redundancy or a job at another colliery.

376 more miners abandon strike

By STEPHEN WARD Industrial Staff

MORE than 300 miners abandoned the strike and returned to work yesterday, to take the total returning so far this week to 1,420.

Last week the total returning in the first two days was 1,580.

One third of the 376 "new faces" in the pits yesterday — 126 miners—went back in the North East, where the strike was solid for the first six months, but now has more than one third of the miners back at work.

46·75 pc figure

Another 107 men went back in Yorkshire, to take the number at work there to more than one miner in seven.

Scotland, a third area which was solidly on strike until late last year saw 76 miners clocking on for the first time in the 50-week-old strike.

There are now 87,000 N U M members defying the strike, out of a total of National Union of Mineworkers members on the Coal Board's books of 136,094.

This is equivalent to 46·77 per cent., close to the 50 per cent. which the Coal Board chairman, Mr Ian MacGregor has said he will regard as a majority "vote" against the strike.

The miners who returned to work yesterday were in the following areas:

	New faces	Total working	Workforce
Yorks	107	7,420	49,500
Scotland	76	5,091	12,400
N. East	126	8,308	20,200
N. Derbys	26	6,716	10,500
Notts	3	25,735	27,000
S. Mids	5	9,341	9,742
Western	18	11,693	14,200
S. Wales	14	478	19,600

There was one other new starter in a coal products plant.

The aggregate total at work does not equal the Coal Board's total nationally defying the strike because on any one day some non-striking miners are always absent through illness and rest days.

Massive bill to repair Ronan Point blocks

By JOHN GRIGSBY, Local Government Correspondent

MILLIONS of pounds will be needed to put defects in Ronan Point and other blocks built by Taylor Woodrow Anglian, the Commons heard yesterday. About 90 buildings are involved.

Mr Gow, Minister for Housing and Construction, said a Building Research Establishment study showed that the joints in the lower storey flank walls of Gowan Point did not "provide that wide margin of safety which is generally considered acceptable for buildings of this type."

The 22-storey block partly collapsed in 1968 with the less of five lives when a gas explosion blew out concrete load-bearing panels.

After it discovered small gaps where non-loadbearings panels met the floor, Newham Council decided last year to evacuate the building.

The research establishment, said Mr Gow, considered the gaps were unacceptable because they could allow fire and fumes to spread between neighbouring flats.

He added: "The conclusions drawn from the assessment of Ronan Point are likely to apply in some degree to other Taylor Woodrow Anglian buildings, depending on the details of construction in each case."

All the buildings should be appraised to find whether they could resist the spread of fumes and fire.

Of the 90 high-rise blocks of flats built to the system, 20, including Ronan Point, were of 14 or more storeys and had similar joints.

It has been calculated by Building Design Partnership, architects called in by Newham council, that it would cost £1 million to put right the defects in Ronan Point and each of the other local blocks.

The research establishment says the job could be done more cheaply but is not prepared to put a cost on the total work.

"Intensive trials of the Hyster XL convinced me the engineering was right."

"When we were looking for a fleet of small lift trucks, we naturally thought of Hyster. We've used their equipment very successfully for many years.

Hyster's 1-3 tonne XL trucks were excellently priced - we stood to make a considerable saving - but would they stand up to our very rigorous demands?

We did extensive trials and I was soon convinced that the engineering was right. We now have ten trucks on intensive work. As we do all our own servicing, I was particularly impressed by the design which allows us to do this quickly and easily."

JUDGE OUTLAWS GIRL'S DANGER TRIP TO SCHOOL

A HERDSMAN and his wife who kept their daughter home from school rather than condemn her to a dangerous country walk because she was refused a council bus pass won the overwhelming support of the High Court yesterday.

In a bitter three-year dispute with Essex county council, PETER and VIOLET ROGERS had been found guilty by local magistrates of failing to send 13-year-old SHIRLEY to school—a verdict reluctantly upheld on appeal by Chelmsford Crown Court.

But yesterday Lord Justice PARKER and Mr Justice TUDOR EVANS vindicated them completely.

Outside the court, Mr Rogers, 57, said "I'm glad someone has seen sense at last.

"My only complaint is that it's taken nearly three years. we have been harassed and messed about all that time simply because bureaucratic officials refused to admit they had made a mistake.

"We could have avoided all this if the people responsible for this stupid ruling had the courage to admit they were wrong."

106-yard wrangle

The council provides free bus passes to children living more than three miles from school.

It refused one to Shirley — then aged 11 — because the nearest available route from her cottage in Church Road, Copford, near Colchester, to Stanway comprehensive school was 106 yards short of three miles.

But that route led over a lonely pot-holed track that was often flooded. Her parents refused to let her use it — a view supported by police, safety experts, the local government ombudsman and even a Crown Court judge.

Because the family could not afford £20 a term for a bus pass, Mrs Rogers walked to school with Shirley over main roads.

Council's responsibility

But when she fell ill last year her £85-a-week husband could not get time off work, so Shirley has not been to school since September.

Yesterday Lord Justice Parker said the council was wrong not to take into account that the route was too dangerous for a young girl to walk.

"When young girls are as frequently subject to assaults as they presently are, I would have expected a local authority, whose duties include looking after the interests of children in their area, to have regarded any route the use of which would expose children to the risk of such attacks as not being an available route."

G This one involved crossing Copford Plains by an isolated, unlit and partly unmade track. In winter it was extremely difficult to cross, sometimes being passable on foot in the morning but impassable in the evening.

No responsible parent would allow a young girl to use it alone in winter.

He suspected that the council would have agreed but for legal authority of the 1954 case of Shaxted v Ward, which it believed prevented it from taking dangers into account.

But the judge said he did not regard that case as deciding that a route was "available," even if unsafe.

Council may appeal

Last May Colchester magistrates found Mr and Mrs Rogers guilty under the 1944 Education Act of failing to send Shirley to school. They were conditionally discharged for 12 months.

Later the Crown Court upheld the verdict but substituted an absolute discharge, with Judge Martyn Ward describing the education department's policy as "harsh and unfeeling" and urging officials to think again.

Yesterday the High Court sent the case back to the Crown Court with a direction to acquit. The parents were awarded costs.

Mr Rogers said last night: "I hope the council will now have the good grace to give Shirley a bus pass so she can go back to school on Monday."

An Essex Education Department spokesman said: "The question of whether or not she will be granted a pass will be taken before the weekend. We also have to consider whether to seek leave to appeal to the House of Lords against today's judgment."

Marquess is accused of burglary

By T. A. SANDROCK
Crime Correspondent

THE Marquess of Blandford, 29, son and heir of the 11th Duke of Marlborough, has been charged with burglary and will appear at Horseferry Road magistrates' court on Tuesday.

A great nephew of the late Sir Winston Churchill, he was charged in the name of Charles James Spencer-Churchill. He was described as an insurance broker of Greycott Place, Chelsea.

The marquess was arrested in a Pimlico street early on Saturday morning and taken to Gerald Road police station for questioning concerning a burglary at The Pharmacy, Pimlico Green, Pimlico Road.

Police took possession of substances which have been sent for analysis and he was given police bail after being charged.

PROSECUTION RULED OUT IN DEAD Pcs CASE

Mr Roger Giles, 18, who was told he could have been charged with causing death by reckless driving when two plain-clothed policemen were killed in a car crash after he mistook them for muggers and tried to escape, is not to be prosecuted, it was announced yesterday.

At an inquest last month verdicts of accidental death were recorded on Pcs Peter Deans, 25 and Jonathan Stapley, 27, who died when their unmarked police car skidded and smashed into a tree during the 90 m p h chase near Avonmouth on Dec. 29 last year.

Mr Giles, a barman from Portishead, near Bristol, said yesterday: "I am relieved. But they would never have died if they had carried some identification." A police spokesman said: "We are still reviewing our policy on the use of unmarked cars."

Trains swept away by Eiger avalanche

By OUR GENEVA CORRESPONDENT

AN artificially-induced avalanche roared out of control down the Eiger Wall, in central Switzerland, crashing into two empty passenger trains and killing a conductor, police said yesterday.

The train driver was seriously injured, and rescue parties with avalanche rescue dogs were searching for a station master who was swept away.

One of the trains was carried about 600ft down the mountainside by the snow.

The accident occurred when avalanche experts tried to loosen a massive build-up of snow on the Eiger near Grindelwald because it threatened the tracks of the Wengeneralpban, a small mountain railway.

Near Zermatt a French skier was crushed to death by another avalanche after straying from the marked pistes. He was dug out by companions, but could not be resuscitated.

Traffic chaos

The heaviest snowfall of the century has buried much of south-western Switzerland and the Haute Savoie region of France overnight in up to three feet of snow.

Traffic chaos continued in Geneva, Thonon and Evian, with many bus and tram lines still out of commission and all but major roads buried in deep snow.

One hardware store owner reported selling £1,000-worth of snow shovels in half an hour on Monday while many filling stations ran out of car chains.

Unlike the rest of Switzerland, Geneva rarely receives heavy snow and its residents appeared largely unprepared for the weekend storm.

The Mont Blanc tunnel linking the area to Italy was made accessible to truck and car traffic heading south,

Geneva's Cointrin airport became fully operational yesterday for the first time since Saturday night, the longest closure in its history.

WOLVES RAID HOMES

Cattle killed

ROBERT TILLEY in Munich writes: Packs of wolves and jackals are being driven by the severe winter weather to raid farms and villages in Bulgaria. Nearly 100 wolves are reportedly marauding in the area of Ivailovgrad, in the south of the country, killing many cattle and domestic animals.

Local hunters, trying to keep the animals at bay, have shot 20 wolves and jackals since January, the Bulgarian news agency BTA said yesterday.

Skating marathon

Fears that the first 110-mile skating marathon around northern Holland for 22 years may have to be cancelled because of the mild weather conditions were allayed yesterday when officials said that a sudden spell of sustained cold weather had made the ice thick enough for it to go ahead on Thursday. About 16,000 competitors are expected.—Reuter.

YOUTH STABBED AS HE HELPED POLICEWOMAN

Neil Denton, 17, a schoolboy, was stabbed in the back as he tried to help a policewoman who was being set upon by a crowd of 25 youths outside the Lasers discotheque in Torquay, Devon.

Neil, of Lower Warberry Road, Torquay, who received stitches to the wound, said: "I went to try and help her and then I felt this sharp pain between my shoulder blades. Then everyone ran off, and it wasn't until afterwards that I found there was blood running down my back."

W Ps Mary Simpson, 28, was kicked and punched in the incident but was not seriously hurt. Two youths were arrested.

EAST GERMANS BATTLE WITH THE COLD

About 20,000 soldiers, police and emergency workers are battling to maintain supplies of coal and raw materials to East German factories during bitter weather.

The Communist party newspaper NEUES DEUTSCHLAND said yesterday explosives and open fires were being used at lignite mines near Leipzig to penetrate frosts up to 4ft deep.

Lignite, a low-quality brown coal, is East Germany's only natural fuel and its production is being stepped up to conserve costly imported oil. The temperature in East Germany has fluctuated between 14 and minus four degrees Fahrenheit since the weekend.—Reuter.

FREEZING FROGS

Animal welfare organisations have launched a "frog watch" because so many are dying from hypothermia in icy ponds. Anyone finding a frozen frog should place it in a damp sheltered place, says the Somerset Trust for Nature Conservation.

Fingerprints on IRA cache found by laser

A NEW laser technique was used by Scotland Yard experts to discover fingerprints on items in an IRA cache of bomb-making materials, an Old Bailey jury was told yesterday.

Mr DAVID TADD, fingerprint officer with 17 years' experience, said he used the system to find the thumbprint of a 29-year-old elfast man, THOMAS QUIGLEY, on a birth certificate.

The mark, not visible to the naked eye, "glowed" under the laser beam system, Mr Tadd said.

Thumb mark

Mr Tadd said he also used the laser technique, in conjunction with chemical tests, to discover prints on a white plastic carrier bag from the hoard at Pangbourne.

One of them was identified as the left thumb mark of PAUL KAVANAGH.

A number of other Quigley and Kavanagh prints were found on additional items using chemical methods, the naked eye and fingerprint powder.

The items included documents, a transceiver and a wire reel.

Quigley, of Glenalena Road, Belfast, and Paul Kavanagh, also 29, of no fixed address, are accused of having been members of a Provisional IRA unit which carried out a month-long bombing campaign in London in autumn, 1981.

Between them they have denied 10 charges, including three murders.

They are alleged to have murdered Mrs NORAH FIELD, a 59-year-old widow, and an 18-year-old apprentice, JOHN BRESLIN, who both died when a nail bomb went off outside Chelsea barracks on Oct. 10, 1981, and Mr KENNETH HOWORTH, an explosives expert, who was blown up while defusing a bomb in an Oxford Street Wimpey Bar

They are also accused of attempting to murder Sir STEBART PRINGLE, Commandant General of the Royal Marines, who lost a leg when a bomb went off under his car on Oct. 17, 1981, and of causing a blast at the home of the Attorney General, Sir MICHAEL HAVERS, in Wimbledon on Nov. 13, 1981.

Mr ROY AMLOT, prosecuting, has said the prints of both men were found on the Pangbourne cache, described as "the most significant hoard of terrorist materials ever discovered in Britain."

The trial was adjourned until today.

Changes sought in kerb crawling Bill

By TERENCE SHAW Legal Correspondent

INNOCENT men could be convicted of soliciting under the Bill aimed to outlaw kerb crawling, says the Law Society.

In a memorandum to MPs on the Sexual Offences Bill, introduced in the Commons by Miss Janet Fookes, Conservative MP for Plymouth Drake, the society's standing committee on the criminal law says the Bill should be tightened to make only "persistent" soliciting an offence.

While the society's committee agrees that legislation is needed to protect women who are sexually harassed by kerb crawlers and others, it fears the Bill, as drafted, may lead to wrongful convictions.

The Bill, which received a second reading in the Commons on Jan. 25, makes it an offence for a man to solicit a woman from a motor vehicle for the purpose of prostitution.

The Law Society, the solicitors' governing body, says it is concerned that the evidence of a single observer, whether a police officers, vigilante or passer-by, will be sufficient to secure a conviction.

It was impossible not to draw a parallel with the discredited "sus law" provisions of the 1824 Vagrancy Act which were repealed in 1981. Under that Act people could be convicted of being a "suspected person loitering with intent."

Under the new Bill any person observing a man approaching a woman from a motor vehicle might well be mistaken as to the man's purpose.

"Unless the observer is near enough to hear what the man says, any evidence which he or she gives can only describe the actions of the man or woman." A man seen stopping to ask the time in a "red light" district could be wrongly suspected of soliciting.

If the woman had no watch and shook her head, the inference from an observer's evidence could be that he had solicited the woman but had been refused, says the society.

Switch to electricity and cut your energy costs.

Thousands of companies are switching to electricity.

And their savings are mounting daily.

Electricity could be giving you significant reductions in your overall operating costs.

BICC Prescot Industries Limited relied on natural air circulation to dry their emulsion-coated pine bedheads. This led to rejects, drying took 24 hours, and in winter space heating had to be run all night to assist the process.

The problem was resolved when they switched to an electric convection tunnel oven.

The compact, controlled drying system has improved finishing, reduced drying times, and released much of the drying floor area for other work.

Not only have energy cost savings of 35% been achieved, but production has been increased by 20%.

80% energy cost saving with the switch to heat pump drying.

What's more, Callard and Bowser have cut process times by 60%, and trebled throughput.

Three drying chambers, which reduce the moisture content of Juicy Jellies, Skels and Fruit Pastilles, were supplied by fuel-fired central boilers, but increasing production demanded a more efficient drying process.

Energy cost savings alone have paid for the installation within 14 months.

EEC IN GLOOM AS DEADLOCKS STAY UNSOLVED

By ALAN OSBORN
Common Market Correspondent in Brussels

THE Common Market was thrown into gloom and disarray last night when a two-day meeting of Foreign Ministers, designed to end the deadlock over the budget and enlargement of the E E C ended in total failure.

There is now serious doubt that Spain and Portugal can enter the Community at the start of next year, as scheduled.

eYsterday's meeting made it clear that the major E E C fishing countries — Britain, Denmark, Ireland, West Germany and France— are resolutely opposed to any improvements in the offer on fisheries that Spain has already flatly rejected.

A solution to the Community's serious cash crisis looks equally remote, following West Germany's continued refusal to accept a scheme supported by all other countries to fund the 1985 budget defici and provide for Britain's promised £600-million cut in contributions.

Bluntly rejected

A second version of this plan, amended to suit the West German reservations, was bluntly rejected by Bonn's Foreign Minister, Herr Hans Dietrich-Genscher, last night.

Italy, as president of the EEC, has summoned Foreign Ministers to a special emergency meeting tomorrow week in yet another attempt to achieve a breakthrough.

But the ough line taken yesterday by Britain and others over fishing and by West Germany over the budget, does not promise well.

Senor Fernando Moran, Spanish Foreign Minister, said his country was still hoping to enter the E E C next January. But he added: "We can wait three or four years."

The target date for completion of entry negotiations is the end of March. Any delay after that could make it impossible for the necessary Parliamentary ratifications to be effected in all 10 member states.

Practically all the enlargement discussion in the past two days of the Foreign Ministers' meeting has been devoted to the question of fishing.

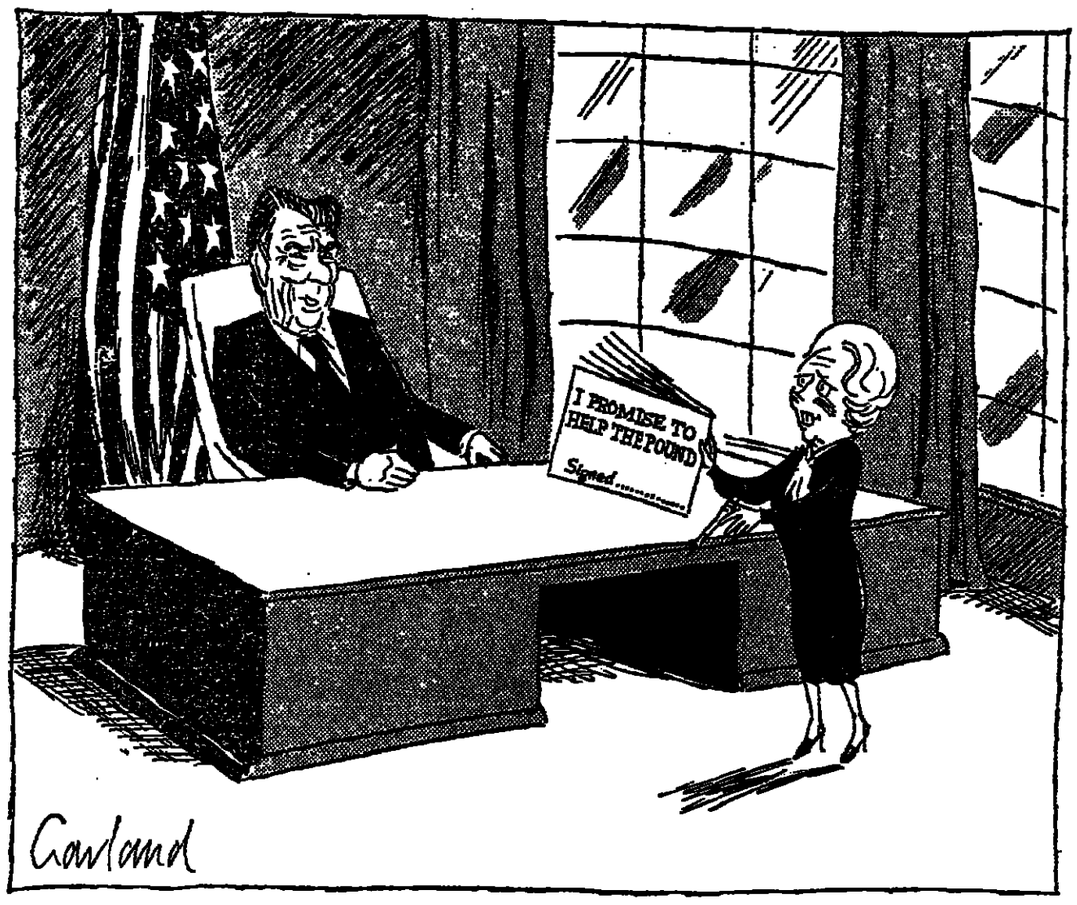
There are still disagreements over the terms to offer Spain and Portugal on agricultural access and the social rights of workers in other E E C countries, but these are not regarded as nearly so difficult.

A similar deadlock exists over the E E C's financial crisis. With West Germany still stubbornly resisting a solution endorsed by the nine other members, the E E C Budget Commissioner, Mr Henning Christophersen, said yesterday that lack of money was already causing problems for the Commission.

Mr Christophersen told ministers spending was having to be curtailed on agriculture, on regional and social policies, and on staff recruitment.

All members except West Germany support the idea of increasing the automatic annual revenue enjoyed by the E E C before the due date for the increase, Jan. 1 next year.

But Herr Genscher, insisted yesterday his country would not budge from the Fontainebleau agreement of last June which set next January for the start of the higher income.



"May I have your autograph? It's not for me, it's for my little boy Nigel."

Strong industry 'vital to Nato'

By Air Cdre G. S. COOPER
Defence Staff

NATO is the most successful defence organisation in history, General Bernard Rogers, Supreme Allied Commander Europe, told businessmen in London yesterday.

Addressing the American Chamber of Commerce on actions Western leaders should take to ensure that Europe continues to enjoy peace and freedom, he said the main step was to establish a strong Western European industrial base to compete with the United States.

This would open the door to the exchange of advanced technology and put an end to the wastage of billions of dollars through duplication of industrial effort.

General Rogers said it was important for the West to retain the strength of its strategic nuclear forces and to continue to deploy intermediate nuclear missiles in Europe.

But it was also essential that Nato should continue to strengthen its conventional forces, modernising weapon systems to enable any Russian advance to be stopped in its tracks.

"We can reach what we are seeking within the decade," he said, "and then be able to frustrate attack without resort to nuclear weapons, leaving the Soviets with the choice of either withdrawing or escalating the conflict to a nuclear exchange.

The conventional improvements needed would mean a sacrifice for the people, he said, but this was the price of peace.

Governments had a duty to remind their people of the unremitting build-up of Soviet military power, and to be on their guard against letting the Russians gain a superiority that could become decisive.

There was a growing danger, said General Rogers, that the Soviets might believe they could reach their objective of domination without starting a war.

WALESA IS DENIED ARREST

AUTHORITIES would not boost Lech Walesa's popularity by arresting the Solidarity founder for promoting a 15-minute nationwide strike, a Polish government spokesman, Mr Jerz y Urban, said yesterday.

"Lech Walesa does not hide the fact that he is dreaming about the arrest, as he wants to be more in the limelight behind bars." Mr Urban said at his weekly news conference.

A State prosecutor has warned Mr Walesa that he should drop his plans to organise a quarter-hour strike on Feb. 28 to protest against expected food price rises.

Criticism ignored

Mr Urban said: "The State authorities are of the opinion that they would become a laughing stock by arresting Walesa who is manipulated by various advisers and dancing to the tunes of their music." He also called Mr Walesa a "deplorable" figure.

Mr Walesa, reached by telephone in his Gdansk apartment, ignored Mr Urban's criticism.

"I am too serious a man to waste time answering back somebody who is not a partner for me, somebody whom I do not recognise," he said. "I neither strtove nor am I striving at being arrested."

Mr Urban also rebuffed an allegation on Friday by the Roman Catholic Church that the government had launched a propaganda campaign aimed at loosening Church-State ties.

"We seek a platform of agreement," Mr Urban said. "The communique is not conductive to this. It is detrimental to reconciliation."

As he spoke, a group of bishops released another statement protesting against what it said was the slander of Bishop Ignacy Tokarczuk, of the Przemysl diocese in south-eastern Poland.

Protest letter

The Bishops said Capt. Grzegorz Piotrowski, one of the four men convicted in the slaying of Father Jerzy Popieluszko, had claimed during his trial that Bishop Tokarczuk co-operated with the Nazis during the Second World War.

"Thousands of faithful in the diocese of Przemysl signed a letter of protest filed with the authorities" the bishops said.

Mr Urban also said Solidarity files handed to Polish authorities by an emigre Pole who returned under an amnesty had provided fresh evidence of treason by supporters of the free trade union abroad.

He said information the communist authorities say was supplied by Jacek Knapik was being used to further the investigation of Solidarity offices in Paris and Brussels.

Senior Solidarity figures in Poland and Brussels have no knowledge of Knaoik, whose documents, allegedly showing links between the union and the United States Central Intelligence Agency, have been given wide publicity on state television.

Mr Urban denied Knaoik was a member of the Polish security services and said any other details about him would be given on television.

The official Pap news agency said Knaoik had been living in Vienna for almost 10 years but gave no indication of how he obtained the documents described by the Interior Ministry as "vital and genuine." — UPI, Reuter.

MANDELA FAILS TO SIGN

The nomination of Nelson Mandela as Rector of Edinburgh University has ben rejected because the application form does not carry his signature.

Shultz under fire over U.S. aid for 'our brothers'

By FRANK TAYLOR in Washington

GROWING agitation in Congress over President Reagan's Central America policies found a target yesterday in Mr Shultz, Secretary of State, who was subjected to hostile questioning by members of the House foreign affairs committee.

Mr Shultz went before the committee to press for approval of Mr Reagan's $14·8 billion (£13·5 billion) foreign aid programme.

Instead, for most of the time, he was grilled about Central America, where the United States is supporting a Right-wing rebellion against the Nicaraguan government.

Mr Gerry Studds, a Democratic member of the committee who is a principal party spokesman on Latin American affairs, expressed wonder that Mr Reagan, in his radio address last weekend, could describe the Nicaraguan rebels as "your brothers," and compare them to the "freedom fighters" who had helped America gain its independence from the British.

Mr Studds thought Lewis Carroll may have been brought back from the dead and given a job as White House speechwriter.

Political murders

"The President appears to be embarking on another crusade in support this time of the Nicaraguan Thomas Jeffersons who are mining harbours and battling the communists for control of Managua," he said.

"Our brothers" in Nicaragua included those for whom the C I A had to produce a manual teaching them how to assassinate selectively "in order to improve their behaviour," who by their own admission routinely executed civilians, and who had carried out a series of political murders in Honduras.

The United States, he added, was so proud of its "brothers" that it tried to keep their actions covert.

Mr Studds asked Mr Shultz: "Can't we do better than this? Doesn't the President have something more exalted to ask of us than that we provide military aid to a mixed group of mercenaries and thugs and democrats, seeking to destroy a wretched regime in a poor country that has known nothing but repression and civil war since our own marines landed there, presumably as freedom fighters seven decades ago?"

Was it not possible to contain Nicaragua through defensive military force, diplomatic tools and joint approaches with allies, Mr Studds wanted to know.

He warned Mr Shultz that funding for the rebels was "dead" in Congress and concluded: "Surely, struggle for freedom should be more than a contest between their terrorists and our terrorists."

'Morally right'

But Mr Shultz was at his most imperturbable.

There was, he claimed, "a growing commonality of view," in the United States about what to do in Central America. It was "morally right" to see that a Cuban-style government did not become established in Managua.

Working for democracy included supporting the rebels.

Noting that it was the Soviet Union and Cuba who were trying to set up a Communist satellite state in Nicaragua, Mr Shultz declared:

"If the forces of dictatorship continue to feel free to aid and abet insurgencies in the name of totalitarian internationalism, it would be absurd if the democracies felt inhibited about promoting the cause of democracy."

The United States simply could not put up with a "Brezhnev doctrine" in the case of Nicaragua, a doctrine that said once a country became part of the Soviet camp it could never leave.

"I don't see why we should put up with that," Mr Shultz said.

Chernenko role

On other aspects of foreign policy Mr Shultz:

Suggested that the health of the Soviet leader, Mr Chernenko, did not hamper day-to-day relations with the United States. "What we see opposite us is a functioning government, and I don't see any reason to expect that to change."

Rebels seek expanded Salvadoran role

By MARK FAZLOLLAH in Mexico City

A LEADER of American-sponsored guerrillas trying to topple the Nicaraguan Government has called for El Salvador to increase its clandestine assistance to the insurgents.

Military officials in El Salvador said Eden Pastora, who leads rebels fighting in southern Nicaragua, had made several trips to the Salvadoran capital during the past eight months to solicit more military assistance.

San Salvador's Ilopango air base reportedly has been used as a major supply centre for the rebels, who were organised and armed by the C I A.

One Latin American diplomat said senor Pastora's forces in the past had received helicopter training at Ilopango.

But an officer said Senor Pastora, also known as "Commander Zero," had sought access to additional Salvadoran military facilities, apparently in the eastern part of El Salvador.

El Salvador and Nicaragua are separated by a strip of Honduran territory less than 100 miles wide. Honduras, which harbours the largest rebel force, has threatened to kick the Rightist guerrillas out of its territory.

A military official said that within the Salvadoran armed forces, Senor Pastora had won the favour of Gen. Juan Rafael Bustillo, the commander of the armed forces.

He said Gen. Bustillo, who was on the far right among Salvadoran officers, made the decision to allow the American-sponsored guerrillas to use Ilopango.

A report from the United States said C-47 transport planes last year flew arms, ammunition and medical supplies from Ilopango base to Senor Pastora's men near the southern Nicaraguan town of San Juan del Norte.

Argentina finds a new man to fight inflation

By CRISTINA BONASEGNA in Buenos Aires

ARGENTINA'S Economy Minister, Senor Bernardo Grinspun, has resigned and is being replaced by Senor Juan Sourrouille, a respected young economist concerned with a gradual reduction of the country's high inflation.

President Raul Alfonsin is reported to have asked Senor Grinspun, a close friend, and Senor Enrique Garcia Vazquez, Central Bank chairman, to submit their resignations because serious disagreements between the two were blocking vital economic measures and tax reforms.

Senor Garcia Vazquez is being replaced by the Domestic Trade Secretary, Senor Alfredo Concepoion, 63.

Senor Sourrouille, 44, is leaving his post as Economic Planning Secretary. He is the author of a five-year economic plan presented last month at President Alfonsin's request.

The plan, which drew praise from labour leaders and businessmen alike, lays down guidelines for economic growth based on increased exports and private investment.

The first Minister to resign was Senor Antonio Mucci, who left the Labour Ministry in April, 1984, after a Government-sponsored Bill to re-organise trade unions was defeated in Congress.

During his period as Economy Minister Senor Grinspun successfully led Argentina to the renegotiation of its $48 billion (£44 billion) debt.

But on the domestic front he became the butt of growing criticism from all sectors in the country, including his own party, as he failed to contain rising interest rates and to curb inflation.

"Whoever tries to bring both parties together will play a useful role." Senor Caputo said on Monday after Press reports from London that President Reagan of the United States might offer to mediate in the Falklands dispute when President Alfonsin of Argentina visits him in Washington next month.

The Minister said, however, that the United Nations secretary-general, Senor Peres de Cuellar, was the main mediator in the dispute.

13 ARRESTED IN SOUTH AFRICAN CRACKDOWN

By CHRISTOPHER MUNNION in Johannesburg

SOUTH AFRICAN security police arrested 13 political activists in a nationwide crackdown yesterday on the anti-apartheid United Democratic Front and its affiliated organisations.

Police said that seven of those arrested would be released after questioning. The remaining six are to appear in the Durban Supreme Court tomorrow on charges of treason.

They are expected to be remanded then to face trial with eight other United Democratic Front leaders being held on similar charges.

The treason trial will start next month in Durban legal sources said.

Among United Democratic Front leaders arrested yesterday were Mrs Albertina Sisulu, co-president and wife of Mr Walter Sisulu, one of the jailed leaders of the African National Congress the Rev. Frank Chikane, a vice-president; and Mr Cassim Saloojee, the treasurer.

Pre-dawn raids

In pre-dawn raids police searched the homes of more than 30 Front activists, and later in the day seized piles of documents from offices in the Transvaal, Cape Province, and Natal.

Those held for questioning included members of church and trade union groups affiliated to the Front and staff members of community newspapers supporting the organisation.

In the dock at next month's treason trial will be the six anti-apartheid demonstrators who occupied the British Consulate in Durban last year, causing a sharp rift in South Africa's relations with Britain.

In Cape Town the Progressive Federal party, the official Opposition, criticised the police action and said the moves against the United Democratic Front would fuel the campaign to isolate South Africa.

Mrs Helen Suzman, the party's spokeswoman on law and order, said the raids against the Front showed that the Government was determined not to allow extra-Parliamentary opposition to develop.

"The Government takes no cognizance of the fact that a large number of people belonging to the U D F have no means of political expression through Parliamentary channels," she said.

'Perfect reply'

A spokesman for the Transvaal Indian Congress, a Front affiliate, said the police action was the "perfect reply" to all those who spoke of reform in South Africa.

He said: "At a time when Botha (the President, Mr P. W. Botha) is talking to Nelson Mandela and telling him to renounced violence he is arresting and changing with treason leaders of the U D F and other organisations who are, and always have been, totally committed to peaceful change."

He added that the move against the United Democratic Front had made a mockery of the offer to release Mr Mandela and other African National Congress leaders.

"Even if they had accepted the offer, how on earth would they have been able to campaign and work for peaceful change in this progressive climate?" the spokesman asked.

Bloodbath warning by Kaunda

By JULIAN ISHERWOOD in Copenhagen

DR KENNETH KAUNDA, Zambian President, said yesterday that if apartheid was not dismantled within three years many thousands of white and black South Africans would be killed.

Dr Kaunda, who is on a two-day official visit to Denmark, said that unless the Western nations quickly imposed sanctions "to bring the South Africans to their senses" a bloodbath would occure "which will make all other revolutions in Africa resemble a Sunday morning children's picnic.

"In South Africa, there are people who practise an ideology identical to Hitler's fascism and racial hatred. The question is now whether the world realises too late that an explosion is brewing — or whether it has learnt the lesson of the Second World War."

14,000 lost

"I am not talking of the front line states marching into South Africa, but when the 20 million black Africans, who have been sat upon by four million white Africans, can no longer wait, they will start running and rise up in a tide which not even bullets will stop," President Kaunda said.

"This will happen within three years if something is not done. We lost 14,000 in Zambia to force white Africans to live side by side with black Africans. The figure in South Africa will be at least 20 times that much."

Britain 'doing all she can to aid Sudan'

By DAVID ADAMSON Diplomatic Correspondent

THE British Government was doing as much as it could to supply food to Sudan and it had to continue its aid, Sir Anthony Kershaw, chairman of the Commons Foreign Affairs Committee, said yesterday.

"The fact that we have spent £50 million so far in no way suggests that we should stop," he said.

The main difficulty affecting aid to the famine areas was not in actually supplying food but in getting it from the port to the people.

Sir Anthony returned to London yesterday with three other members of the committee who have been on a fact-finding tour in Sudan.

He found the situation a little better than he had expected and the aid was coming through at "just about the minimum necessary."

It was necessary to step up deliveries of food between now and May, when the rains would start.

"Then they may not be able to get anything through at all," he said. "They must have a stockpile, and they haven't got that yet."

Mr Dennis Canavan, Labour MP for Falkirk West, did not accept that the British Government was doing as much as it could. He thought it should supply more aid, more food, and more money.

"What it really needed is somebody to go out there and bang a few heads together at governmental level and get things moving," he said.

"There are at this minute people starving to death, and yet we've got people sitting in Brussels, Strasbourg, London and New York talking about it instead of getting out there and doing something."

Sir Anthony Kershaw

The group met President Numeiry of Sudan who has been personally criticised for his handling of the crisis. The Americans have suspended economic assistance largely because of his Government's incompetence.

"I think that he has possibly underrated the situation," said Sir Anthony. "There are those in ministerial circles in the Sudan who admit they should have sounded the alarm two or three months sooner."

GADDAFI ACCUSED ON EXILES

MOAMMAR GADDAFI, Libyan leader, offered Sudan £S6 billion (£1,820,000) if it agreed to turn over Libyan opponents living in Sudan, President Jaafar Numeiry of Sudan said in statements published yesterday.

The newspaper AL AYAM, in extracts of an interview to be published in full today, quoted Presidene Numeiry as saying Col. Gaddafi "offered more than six billion Sudanese pounds in return for handing him Libyan opponents living in self-imposed exile in Sudan."

In an indication the Libyan offer was rejected, President Numeiry was quoted as saying he reacted by tightening security protection for the Libyan exiles.

President Numeiry said in interview that Sudan was more stable than Ethiopia and Libya despite the "plotting by those two countries" and the drought that forced a million refugees into Sudan. — U P I.

Zimbabwe postpones its March election

By IAN MILLS in Harare

PLANS to stage Zimbabwe's first post-independence general election in March have been abandoned in favour of a date "some time in the middle of the year."

The Minister of Justice, Dr Eddison Zvogbo, would not be drawn at a news conference on a specific date for the election and would say only that it would be held towards the middle of the year.

Western diplomatic sources say they believe the earliest date would be mid-June but acknowledge that this deadline may be passed because of the considerable procedural obstacles in the path of an election.

100 new constituencies

Voter registration ended last week, leaving the the task of drawing up boundaries for 100 new constituencies.

The total of registered voters has not yet been given, but it is expected to be just over three million.

Sources close to the delimitation Commission say it will need "several months" to complete its task, adding that a June target date is "very optimistic."

The Government and especially the Prime Minister, Mr Mugabe, wanted the general election over before the fifth anniversary of independence on April 18.

It is intended to change the election format used in the pre-independence elections in February, 1980, from the party-list system for the 80 Parliamentary seats reserved for blacks to the individual-candidate method.

This, and the re-registration of voters, means a complete realignment of constituencies for the 80 black roll seats, each with between 25,000 and 35,000 voters.

The Opposition leader, Mr Joshua Nkomo, believes an election cannot be staged until July at the earliest.

"But what sort of election will it be with all that is going on today," he asked.

Mr Nkomo said there were several things the contesting parties would have to "sort out" before the election was held, particularly the new provisions in the electoral laws the Government pushed through Parliament last month.

He instanced a decision to allow foreigners and "refugees" to register as voters, reports that people were able to obtain several voter registration slips, and the provision for people from one constituency to vote in another.

Mr Nkomo also found it "disturbing" that illiterate voters would be allowed to have someone help them cast their vote.

"Where is the secrecy of it?" he asked. "All these things seem to me to be bordering on violation of the constitution.

"All this political chicanery has to be redressed before we can talk of having an election, let alone a free and fair one."

Dr Zvogbo, however, asserted that the Government was going to "stick to the rules" in staging a free and fair poll, adding that the delay would benefit the minority parties by giving them more time to campaign.

He said the Delimitation Commission would receive the results of the voter re-registration only by the end of March, making it impossible to hold the election next month as planned.

Job seekers queue for long journey to work

By OUR PERTH CORRESPONDENT

MORE than 7,000 people lined up outside the recruitment office of Argyle Diamond Mines in Perth, Western Australia, yesterday, to seek 450 permanent jobs offered for skilled and unskilled workers at the company's mine.

Those who are selected will become long-distance commuters.

They will fly 1,370 miles from Perth to their workplace in the remote Kimberley region of Western Australia—the equivalent of flying from London to Moscow to work.

The workers will continue to live in the Perth metropolitan area. They will jet to the mine site, spend two weeks working there, then have a week at home with their families.

The development programme at the mine, which already has a large output of industrial diamonds as well as gems from surface workings, is costing $A465 million.

The managing director of the company, Mr Mick O'Leary, said Argyle had carried out studies over more than three years to decide on the lifestyle.

The accommodation at the mine would be single sleeping quarters, with canteens providing high-quality food. Sporting facilities included a swimming pool, tennis and squash courts.

The service to and from the mine would be provided by Ansett W.A. in its F28 jet aircraft.

SIDON SHUTS DOWN AS SHOOTING SPREE FOLLOWS KILLING

By JAMES MacMANUS in Beirut

ALL shops and offices in Lebanon's second city, Sidon, closed yesterday after gunmen assassinated a Shia Moslem in the main square, claiming he had been an Israeli collaborator.

In reaction, his family took to the streets with their weapons, saying the murder had been a sectarian act by the Sunni Moslem majority in the city.

The shooting spree that followed left no further casualties but as the Lebanese Army lumbered into action the city simply closed down.

Western praise

A member of the minority Christian community, many of whom formed close ties with month occupation of Sidon, commented: "It won't be long now before people begin missing the Israelis."

Still shocked by the violent Shi'ite demonstration in Sidon on Monday, the citizens cling to the hope that the fragile unity that has been forged between the religious groups in the area will spare them the anarchy that has befallen Moslem Dest Beirut.

Despite criticism of the Army's lackadaisical response to the arrival of the Shi'ite demonstrators, the deployment south of he 12th brigad has won general praise among Western observers in the capital.

The brigade is made up of a majority of Shi'ite battalions but also contains three strong Christian battalionsc and Sunni units, all of whem have deployed down the coast and inland to the Israeli lines without a problem.

On paper the Lebanese Army has about 40,000 men but its fighting strength is about 20,000, of whom only 10,000 in the largely Christian units could be counted on to be loyal to the Maronite-led government of President Amin Gemayel.

Angry reaction

Fears are held in government circles that the President may have overstepped himself this week by travelling to Sidon and voicing support for the largely Shi'ite resistance movement, which made the Israeli occupation untenable.

The government in Jerusalem has bridled at the sight of its former ally in Beirut embracing "terrorists," and the angry statement by Israeli ministers could point to a backlash against the Lebanese Army in the south.

Attacks on Israel 'will continue'

ISRAEL'S Defence Minister, Mr Rabin, said in Jerusalem yesterday he thought some of Lebanon's Shi'ite Moslem guerrillas would go on attacking Israel after the last Israeli soldier had left their country.

The Israeli Army announced yesterday that Lebanese guerrillas killed two senior Israeli officers on Monday and a soldier was injured in a bomb attack yesterday near Lake Qaroun in eastern Lebanon.

Addressing a convention of American conservative Jews, Mr Rabin said Israel hoped the current intensity of Shi'ite attacks on Israeli troops would fall off after Israel completed the withdrawal of its forces

"We hope, but we cannot assure ourselves, that once we are out of Lebanon the bulk of Shi'ite motivation will be reduced.

'Most fanatical'

An Israeli major and colonel responsible for training the Israeli-backed South Lebanese Army (SLA) militia were killed in separate attacks on Monday, bringing Israeli fatalities to 621 since Israel's invasion of Lebanon in June, 1982.

Mr Rabin said Israel had no clear way of dealing with Shi'ite guerrillas, whom he described as the most fanatical enemy the Jewish state had ever faced.

He also said Israel would temporarily re-enter or bomb or shell Lebanon after the withdrawal if it appeared that the Shi'ites were establishing an artillery threat to Israel's northern border settlements.—Reuter.

U.S.-Soviet talks on Middle East

By Our Vienna Correspondent

TWO-DAY exploratory talks on Middle East issues between delegations of the United States and the Soviet Union opened in Vienna yesterday.

The talks opened in the Soviet Embassy and will be concluded in the American Embassy today.

An American spokesman said the Press would not be informed on the course of the talks and that separate statements could be expected in Washington and Moscow after the Vienna meeting.

Before the conference an American spokesman said that the Israel-Arab issue, the Iran-Iraq was and the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan would be tabled by his side.

The aim was to guard against possibilities of "misinterpretations" of actions in the middle East by the two super powers. "No change of positions is expected as a result of talks," he said.

The low-key American approach to the talks, the first dealing with the region between the United States and the Soviet Union in more than seven years, is doubtlessly connected with strong Israeli concern about the Russian demand for an international Middle East conference that would seat the Soviet Union and the Palestine Liberation Organisation, which Israel refuses to recognise.

Western diplomatic sources said Washington was likely to state its terms for attending formal Middle East peace negotiations with Soviet participation.

Judging from recent American statements these would include pressure on Moscow to restore diplomatic ties with Israel

The United States would probably broach Soviet arms deliveries to Libya, which Washington brands a terrorist state, and urge Moscow to exert influence on its hardline Arab ally Syria to help realise a peaceful solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

America cancels another exercise with New Zealand

By OUR AUCKLAND CORRESPONDENT

THE United States has withdrawn an invitation for New Zealand, one of its Anzus partners, to take part in a military exercise in Hawaii and South Korea.

The move is regarded in New Zealand as further American retaliation for the Government's anti-nuclear stance.

Mr Lange, Prime Minister of New Zealand, said the withdrawal of the invitation for New Zealand Army officers to attend the exercise was disappointing, but not unexpected.

New Zealand's decision earlier this month to reject an American request for the nuclear-capable destroyer Buchanan to visit a New Zealand port has led to the Americans cancelling a series of exercises involving New Zealand military forces.

Of the latest moves Mr Lange said: "While I do not wish to understate the regret that we feel about the cancellations it does not strike at the heart of our operational capacity.

'Test still to come'

"The tets will be whether we have the cancellation of an exercise or exercises which are basic to our operational efficiency."

He said New Zealand could not have an integrated operational capacity by exercising only with Australia. So the test ultimately must come.

Mr Lange emphasised that the Hawaii-South Korea exercise, named Team Spirit, was a conventional warfare field affair, which was not organised through Anzus.

New Zealand defence officials said the Team Spirit exercise was an annual event jointly run by the United States and South Korea, in which New Zealand had participated on three previous occasions.

More than 100,000 Servicemen from the armies, navies, air forces and marines of Western Alliance countries are involved.

News of the withdrawal of the invitation came first yesterday from the New Zealand Opposition spokesman on defence, Mr Doug Kidd, who said the exercise was important for senior officers developing skills in handling large numbers of personnel not available to a small army such as New Zealand's in peacetime.

Mr Lange is to set off next week for Britain, Switzerland, the United States and Singaport on a mission aimed primarily at explaining his Government's nuclear policies.

SIDESTEP BY HAWKE

Breakfast invitation

OUR SYDNEY CORRESPONDENT reports: Mr Hawke, Prime Minister of Australia, neatly sidestepped criticism yesterday from his Labour Parliamentary colleagues about negotiations for Australia's involvement in United States missile-testing.

Australia initially agreed to allow American aircraft to be based in Sydney to monitor MX missile splashdowns but then pulled out of the agreement.

In recent days Labour MPs have publicly criticised the original decision made without caucus consultation and its reversal during Mr Hawke's recent talks with President Reagan.

Mr Hawke invited the leaders of all factions in the Parliamentary party to breakfast yesterday "to address a situation where the Government had not been helped by events of the previous week." The result was agreement that in future differing views would be aired inside, not outside the party.

Australian dollar at its lowest against $

By DENIS WARNER in Melbourne

THE Australian dollar slumped to its lowest point ever at 72·60 cents against the United States dollar yesterday.

In the past two weeks it has declined almost 10c, and of that almost three cents was lost yesterday.

The Australian dollar has now fallen 24 per cent. against the American dollar since the Hawke Government started to float it at the end of 1983.

At its lowest point yesterday it cost $1·37 to buy an American dollar, compared with $1·09 a year ago.

Strike effect

Economists attribute the accelerated decline to several reasons including a strike in the Taxation Department, where clerks have refused to handle investments running into hundreds of millions of dollars.

The result has been unexpected liquidity on the money markets, a decline in short-term interest rates and an outflow of capital.

The international credibility of the Australian Government also suffered when Mr Bob Hawke, Prime Minister, withdrew an offer to co-operate with the United States in a test of an MX missile in the Tasman Sea.

Apart from the general strength of the American dollar, economists say the discouragement again balance of payments figures last month also contributed to the decline.

No one appears prepared to stand in as a buyer of the Australian dollar, and no one seems prepared to predict how much further it may decline.

The Australian Labour party took a positive step yesterday to restore confidence in the Government when the leaders of all factions agreed that in future they would keep their ideological disputes within the party ranks.

However, the Australian Democrats, who are important in the political scene because they hold the balance of power in the Senate and are vigorously opposed to nuclear energy in all its forms, remain more than willing to rock the boat.

The party suggested yesterday that the export of wool, lamb meat and yellowcake should be cut off by Australia and New Zealand to America if the United States imposed any penalties on the two countries because of New Zealand's ban on nuclear ships and Australia's refusal to take part in the MX missile test.

Senator Mason, deputy leader of the Democrats, said that, if any Bill passed the United States Congress banning Australian and New Zealand imports, he would proceed with a parallel Bill in Parliament banning Australian exports to America.

Sen. Mason said the trade balance was heavily in Australia's favour. A large part of that excess was in machinery and computer technology that could easily be switched to Japan.

When Parliament opens next week, Sen. Chipp, leader of the Democrats, plans to introduce a private member's Bill banning all nuclear armed and powered ships from Australian ports.

Gandhi says 'We will keep our promises'

By BALRAM TANDON in New Delhi

MR RAJIV GANDHI, Indian Prime Minister, who is campaigning for his Congress party in the run up to the election for the legislative assemblies of eight states, has promised he would step down if his government failed to implement its programmes.

Mr Gandhi ran into heavy flak when he went out of his way to paint the virtues of the same party ruling the centre as well as the states. This was widely interpreted to mean that he stood for one-party rule.

Over the last two days, Mr Gandhi has spent much time and effort to undo the damage and to explain that he does not stand for a one-party system, a proposition that provoked an anti-congress swing in 1977.

He told a rally of over 100,000 people at Madiad, in Gujarat State, that his Congress Party was earnest about triving to fulfil the promises made during the elections.

He said the same thing at several election rallies last weekend when he used an Indian Air Force helicopter to reach between 15 and 20 meetings a day.

The campaign line for these elections is only slightly different from that for the national level parliamentary general election in December in which he virtually swept the polls. In the December campaign the main theme was the need to preserve the unity and integrity of India.

Commentators are viewing the elections with interest because the emotional impact of Mrs Gandhi's assassination, which sent a sentimental pro-Congress wave running through the country, is thought to have weakened.

The elections cover some of India's biggest and most populous States including Bihar, Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra, Gujarat and some of the tiniest such as Sikkim and Pondicherry.

About 25,000 candidates are lined up for nearly 2,200 seats in the legislative assemblies.

Over a quarter of a million people are now enjoying a regular monthly income from their investment in National Savings Income Bonds. You too could have something extra coming in every month.

New higher interest rate. From 13 March you'll get an increased rate of 12·75% p.a. interest on your Income Bonds. (Rate until then 12% p.a.)

Enjoy life with a monthly income. The interest is sent on the 5th of each month direct to your home or your bank. It means some extra money coming in regularly to help pay the bills or simply to spend enjoying life.

Your savings are never touched. Your monthly cheque represents the interest on your investment, so you can enjoy an extra monthly income and be sure that your capital is completely safe—the cash you put in is the cash you'll get back.

Top rates of interest. The rate paid may change from time to time, but it will be kept competitive. Interest is calculated on a day to day basis. It is paid in full and is subject to tax if you are a taxpayer.

Getting your money out. You need give only 3 months' notice to have any Bond repaid. And there will be no loss of interest if you've held your Bond for a year or more. (For details of earlier repayment, see paragraph 6 of the prospectus below.)

Invest here and now. You can be sure your investment will always provide a worthwhile income—month in, month out. All you have to do is complete the coupon and send it with your cheque (payable to 'National Savings') to NSIB, Bonds and Stock Office, Blackpool, Lancs. FY3 9YP. Or ask for an application form at your post office.

It's probably the most enjoyable investment you'll ever make.

NATIONAL SAVINGS INCOME BONDS

NATIONAL SAVINGS

PROSPECTUS

1 The Director of Savings is authorised by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to receive until further notice applications for National Savings Income Bonds ("Bonds").

2. The Bonds are a Government security issued under the National Loans Act 1968. They are registered in the National Savings Stock Register and are subject to the Regulations relating to the National Savings Stock Register for the time being in force so far as these are applicable. The principal of and interest on the Bonds will be a charge on the National Loans Fund.

PURCHASE

3.1 Subject to a minimum initial purchase of £2,000 (see paragraph 4) a Bond may be purchased for £1,000 or a multiple of that sum. Payment in full must be made at the time of application. The date of purchase will be the date of receipt of the remittance, with a completed application form at the Bonds and Stock Office, Blackpool or such other place as the Director of Savings may specify.

3.2 An investment certificate, bearing the date of purchase, will be issued in respect of each purchase.

HOLDING LIMITS

4.1 No person may hold either solely or jointly with any other person, less than £2,000 or more than £50,000 of Bonds. Bonds held in a deceased holder's will not count towards the permitted maximum. Furthermore, Bonds held by a person as trustee will not count towards the maximum which he is permitted to hold in his personal capacity, nor will Bonds held in trust count towards the permitted maximum of a beneficiary's personal holding.

4.2 The Treasury may vary the maximum and minimum holding limits and the minimum initial purchase price from time to time upon giving notice. No such variation will prejudice any right under the prospectus enjoyed by a Bondholder immediately before the variation in respect of a Bond then held by him.

INTEREST

5.1 Interest will be calculated on a day to day basis from the date of purchase at a rate determined by the Treasury ("the Treasury rate").

5.2 Interest will be payable on the 5th day of each month. The Director of Savings may, in his sole discretion, withhold payment of any interest due in respect of a Bond within the period of two years following the date of purchase until the next interest date falling at the end of that period.

5.3 If on repayment of a Bond tax by reason of paragraph 6.1, earned less interest than it has already paid in respect of the Bond under paragraphs 5.2 the balance will be deducted from the amount to be repaid. Any interest earned on the bond and which should have been withheld will be added to the sum to be repaid. If, in a case to be repaid under paragraph 6.2, it is not reasonably practicable to adjust the interest payment from the last previous date after the repayment date, the amount of that interest paid will be deducted from the sum to be repaid.

5.4 The Treasury may, from time to time, vary the Treasury rate upon giving notice in the London Gazette.

5.5 The Treasury, from time to time vary the interest rate and dates on which interest is payable upon giving notice, and such rating may, and, in the case of an increase in the rate of interest, will apply to any Bond issued before the notice of variation to a Bondholder objecting to such variation.

5.6 Interest will be not accepted for the account of a minor under seven years. It will normally be paid into a National Savings Bank account in the name of the minor.

5.7 Interest on a Bond will be paid with no deduction of Income Tax but it is subject to the same tax and must be included in any return of income made to the Inland Revenue.

REPAYMENT

6.1 A Bondholder may obtain repayment of a Bond at par before redemption upon giving 3 calendar months' notice. The Bond will earn interest at the Treasury rate from the date of purchase up to the repayment date where repayment falls on or after the last anniversary of purchase. Where the repayment date falls before the first anniversary of purchase the Bond will earn interest at half the Treasury rate from the date of purchase up to the repayment date.

6.2 Where an application for repayment of a Bond is made after the death of the sole or sole surviving registered holder no notice need of notice is required and the Bond will earn interest at the Treasury rate from the date of purchase up to the date of repayment, whether or not repayment occurs before the last anniversary of the purchase.

6.3 Any application for repayment of a Bond must be made in writing to the Bonds and Stock Office, Blackpool and accompanied by the investment certificate. The period of notice given by the Bondholder will be calculated from the date on which the application is received in the Bonds and Stock Office.

6.4 Application may be made for repayment of part of a Bond in an amount of £1,000 and multiple of that sum provided that the holding of Bonds remaining after the part repayment will still fall within the minimum holding limit imposed by paragraph 4.1 in force from time to time under paragraph 4.2. The preceding sub-paragraphs will apply to the part repaid as to a whole Bond: the remaining balance will have the same date of purchase and the same interest dates as were applicable to the original Bond immediately prior to repayment.

PAYMENTS

7 Interest will be payable direct to a National Savings Bank or other bank account or by crossed warrant sent by post. Capital will be repayable direct to a National Savings Bank account or by crossed warrant sent by post.

MINORS

8 A Bond held by a minor under the age of seven years, either solely or jointly with any other person, will not be repayable, except with the consent of the Director of Savings.

TRANSFER

9 Bonds will not be transferable except with the consent of the Director of Savings. Transfer of a Bond or part of a Bond will only be allowed in an amount of £1,000 or multiple of that sum and will not be allowed if the holding of the transferor or transferee would thereby be outside the limits imposed by paragraph 4.1 as varied from time to time under paragraph 4.2. The Director of Savings will normally give consent in the case of, for example, gifts inter vivos, inter alia Bonds on the death of a holder but not to any proposed transfer which is by way of sale or for any consideration.

NOTICE

10 Any notice to a holder will give sufficient notice if sent in accordance with paragraphs 4.2, 5.4, 5.5 or 11 of the prospectus to the last address of the holder in the Register or in any other manner which the Director of Savings may think fit. Notices to the holders of Bonds may be published in the London Gazette.

GUARANTEED LIFE OF BONDS

11 Each Bond may be held for a guaranteed period of 10 years from the last interest date after the date of purchase. Thereafter interest will continue to be payable under the terms of the prospectus until the redemption of the Bond. The Bond will be redeemed at the option of the holder (i.e. the guaranteed initial period or on any interest date thereafter) on three months' notice by the Treasury. The Director of Savings may also redeem the Bond at any time before redemption, at the last recorded address of the Bondholder, giving 3 months' notice of the date of the redemption notified by the Treasury.

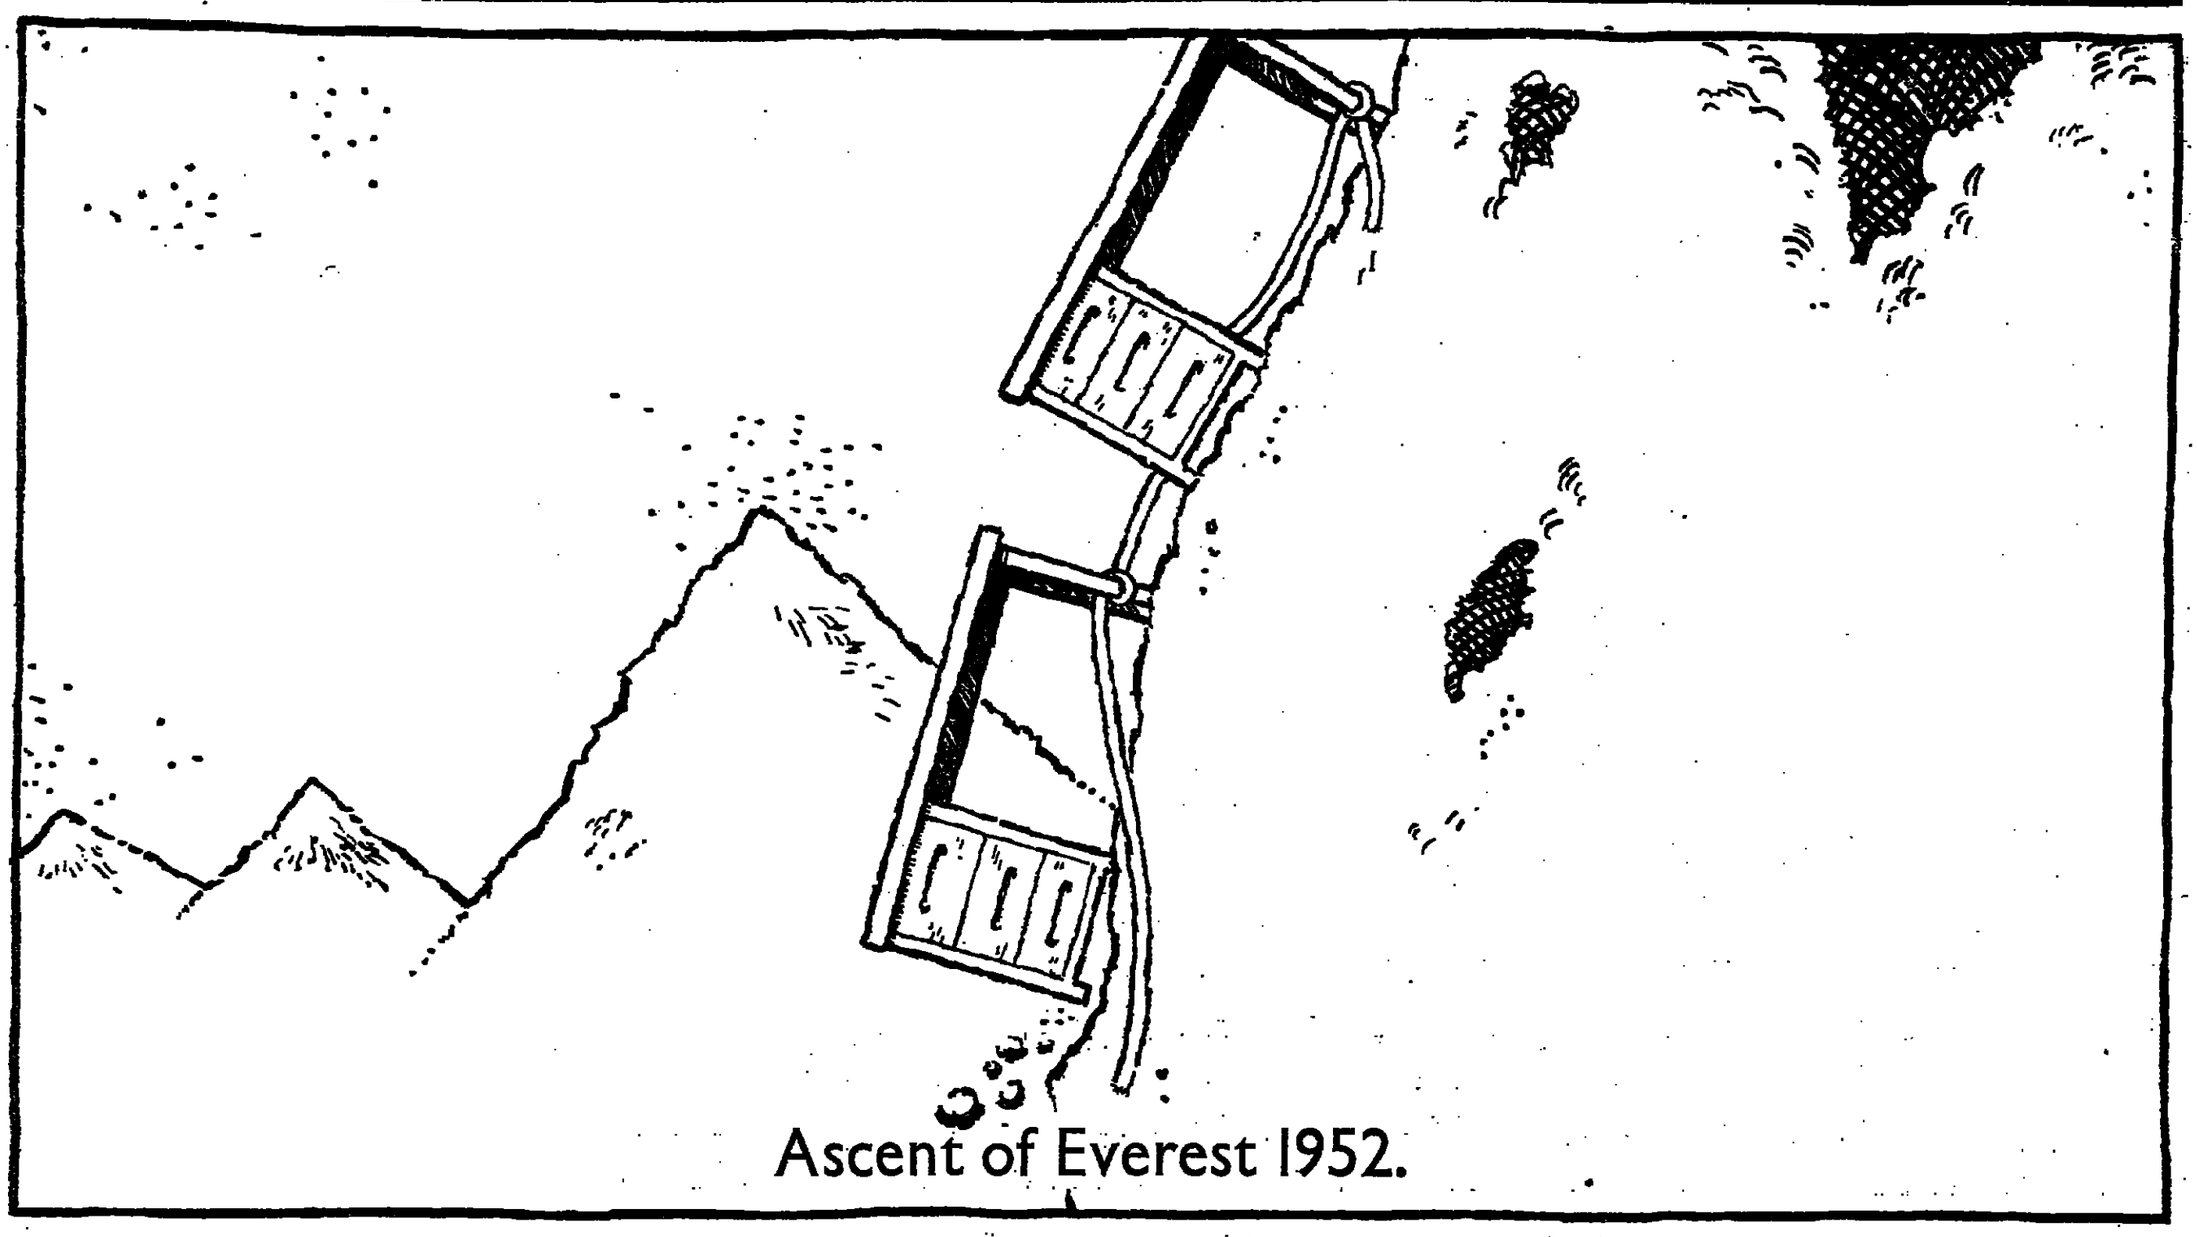
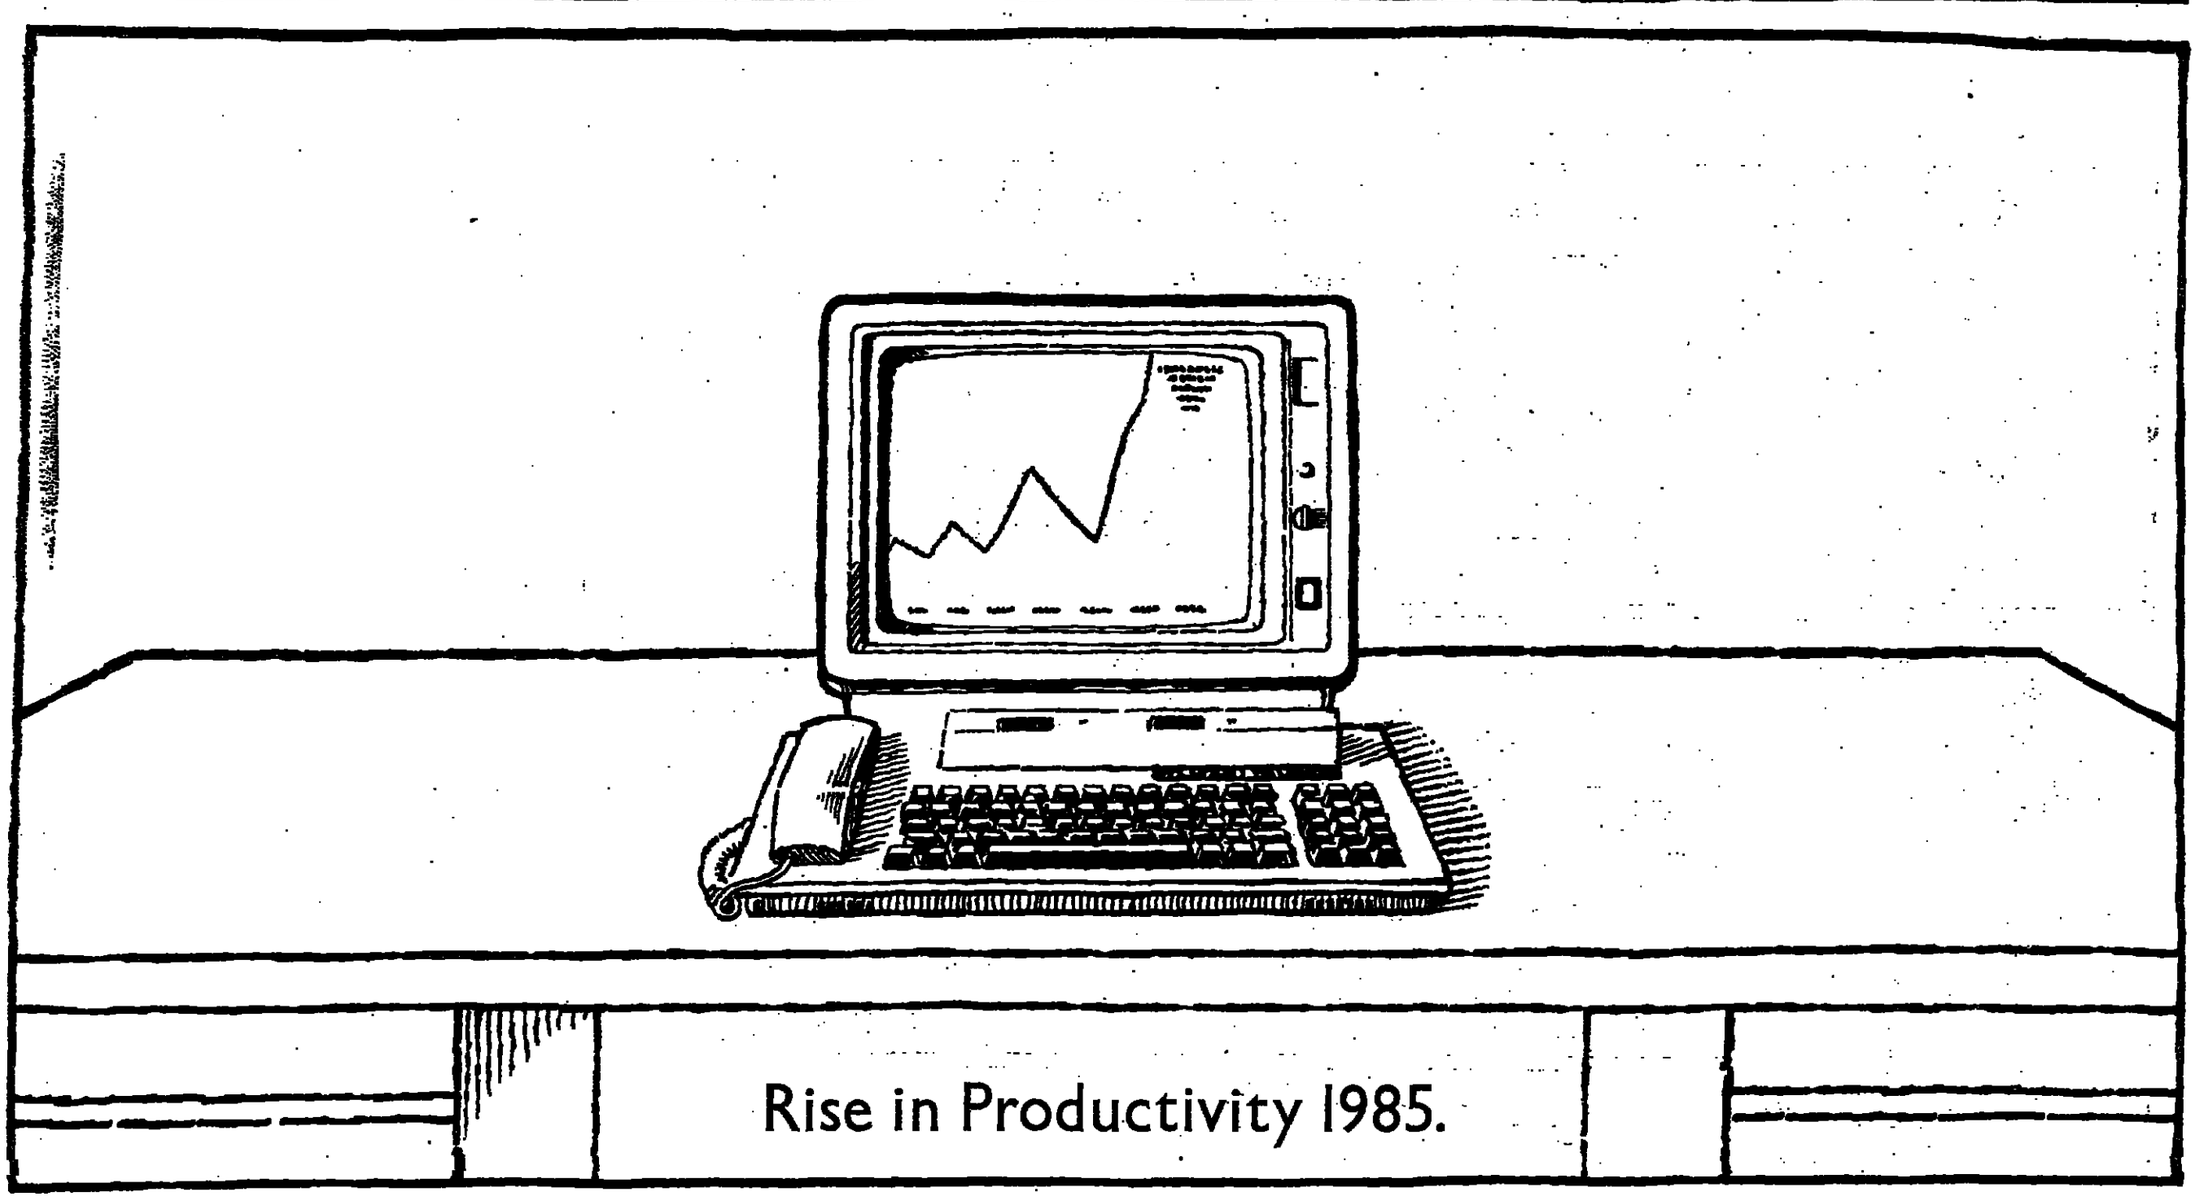
GREAT MOMENTS IN THE HISTORY OF THE DESK





This is what The Guardian had to say about ICL's One Per Desk when it was launched:

And this is what Accountancy Age said:

"It has the most friendly operating system we've seen. Even an idiot could use it."

Now you may not consider yourself to be an idiot, or even harassed. But what lies behind these comments is the recognition that the simplest way to make the best use of your valuable time is to put an OPD on your desk.

In one compact unit you will find an advanced telephone, a computer terminal, and an electronic in-tray and out-tray. And, of course, OPD is a powerful personal computer with the software for word-processing, spreadsheet, personal database and business graphics already built into it in a package called Xchange.

It is this combination of facilities – and the fact that you can switch between them at the touch of a button – that makes the OPD so efficient. And so utterly unique. "It's the most amazing thing I've seen for ages," enthused the reviewer for Accountancy Age.

They climbed Everest because it was there.

We invented OPD because it wasn't.

NAVY SEEKS 400 VOLUNTEERS FOR EARLY RETIREMENT

By DESMOND WETTERN Naval Correspondent

THE Ministry of Defence has written to some 1,600 mostly senior naval ratings calling for volunteers for early retirement.

It is hoped to achieve a cut of at least 400 by the end of March next year as part of the Government's continuing reduction of a fifth, or 10,000, in the Navy's manpower by 1991.

Voluntary redundancies are being sought principally from branches where it would be difficult to re-train a person in another specialisation.

Probably a majority will involve shore jobs such as air engineering mechanics, aircraft handlers, caterers, officers' stewards, photographers, meteorological assistants, physical training instructors and caterers and stores accountants.

The Navy now has more ships at sea than it did before the Falklands conflict and greater emphasis is being placed on recruiting for the seagoing branches. By reducing numbers in some areas it is possible to offer more jobs at sea.

Surprising feature

One surprising feature of the scheme is that it includes the marine engineering mechanic branch which specialises in propulsion systems and in which there has been no marked surplus in seagoing ships.

Volunteers will receive compensation based on the pay he or she would have received had retirement been taken on completion of the normal 22 years' service from time of joining or the age of 18.

A rating quitting after 21 years' service would get three months' pay, a quarter of what he would have earned in the following years, while one with five years left to serve will get 18 months' pay; three years' pay being the maximum permitted capital payment.

Pension entitlements will be reduced by whatever time a rating would still have had to serve to complete 22 years' service. It is emphasised that there is no element of compulsion in the scheme.

BRITAIN'S FARM SHOW IN RUSSIA

By NIGEL WADE in Moscow

An all-ritish agricultural and food-processing exhibition was opened in Moscow yesterday by Mrs Peggy Fenner, Parliamentary Secretary for Agriculture.

Mrs Fenner said she hoped Mr Mikhail Gorbachev, the Kremlin No. 2, who visited Britain in December, would at some stage inspect the exhibition. He has had responsibility for Soviet agriculture.

Enterprise agencies win praise

• By Our Business Correspondent

MORE people are turning to enterprise agencies, rapidly springing up in many parts of the country, for help in starting their own businesses and for advice when in trouble, says a report published today.

The agencies are highly rated by budding businessmen and others for the contribution they make to encouraging firms to get off the ground.

Over 200 agencies, partnerships of companies, local authorities, unions and other bodies have been set up with Government encouragement to help small firms and aid job creation.

The report into how the agencies are performing was carried out by the Centre for Employment Initiatives and published jointly with Business in the Community, the co-ordinating body for the enterprise groups.

370 interviews

It is based on 379 "in depth" interviews and an analysis of the work of 12 agencies including Glenrothes in Scotland, Cardiff, Bridgewater in Somerset and Hackney, East London.

The survey shows that 11 per cent. of people starting their own business and nine per cent. already operating felt they would not have set up or would have "gone bust" without the help provided by the agencies.

Another 53 per cent. of start-ups and 34 per cent. of existing firms felt it would have been more difficult to get off the ground

Molesworth road plan

A PLAN to spend £1,500,000 building a road into Molesworth cruise missile base to prevent disruption by anti-nuclear campaigners is under consideration.

The American missiles will be flown into Alconbury air base six miles away and taken along the A604 and the B660 to Molesworth.

Defence chiefs are known to be concerned that CND could block the minor road.

The proposal for a mile-long road to cut directly from the A604 to Molesworth is one of two options put forward to take traffic away from the village of Brington on the B660.

The alternative is to build a by pass. A third option to improve the road through the village has been dropped.

The news was revealed yesterday by the Tory MP for Huntingdon Mr John Major, who said the Government would pay its full share of the costs.

Discussions between the Ministry of Defence and Cambridge county council began yesterday, and proposals for the roads will soon be published.

The freezing weather has taken its toll of Ministry of Defence policemen patrolling Molesworth's newly - erected seven mile perimeter fence. Several have gone into the RAF hospital at Ely suffering from pneumonia, bronchitis and exposure.

CND CHIEF IN TAX CASE

Monsignor Bruce Kent, 55, general secretary of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, appeared at a private hearing at Clerkenwell County Court, Islington, yesterday, over non payment of tax. He has been issued with a summons for £51 tax and £6 costs.

Mgr Kent is withholding 15 per cent. of his tax bill, which he claims is the proportion spent on Britain's nuclear defences. The case was adjourned.

M-WAY FOG CHECK

All motorways are being examined to identify stretches prone to fog, the Transport Department said yesterday. The action follows last month's multiple crash in fog on the M25 in Surrey.

NEWSPAPER BAN IN 'MILLIONAIRE' COMPETITION

Express Newspapers were granted a High Court injunction yesterday banning provincial newspaper publishers from printing the winning sequences from its "Millionaire of the Month" game in their papers.

The injunction, granted by Mr Justice Whitford, takes effect from todaly against the Liverpool DAILY POST & ECHO, Walsall EVENING MAIL, Newcastle CHRONICLE AND JOURNAL, and Westminster Press.

The judge was told that three other newspapers, the WESTERN EVENING HERALD at Plymouth, the Leicester MERCURY and the Coventry EVENING TELEGRAPH had agreed to abide by yesterday's decision.

WIFE OF ENVOY WINS BAN ORDER

The 39-year-old wife of a diplomat at the Indian High Commission in London was granted an order in the London Divorce Court yesterday banning her husband from "molesting assaulting or otherwise interfering" with her.

Mrs Meghan Venkatraman, an architect, is staying at a secret address in London pending her return to India. Her husband, Muthu, 41, a financial adviser at the High Commission, was not present or represented in court.

LADY COKE'S DECREE

We are asked to make it clear that in the divorce action of Viscount and Viscountess Coke reported from Norwich yesterday, the divorce was granted to Lady Coke.

Lord Coke had sought a decree on the grounds of unreasonable behaviour by his wife, Valerie, which she denied. In an amended answer she pleaded her husband's adultry, which he did not deny.

POLICE 'LOST RACE FOR LOOT IN SPAIN'

By IAN HENRY Old Bailey Correspondent

A RACE between police and alleged confederates of robbers to get part of a £6 million haul hidden in Spain was described to an Old Bailey jury yesterday.

The alleged confederates won the race. When police reached the deposit box where the money had been hidden they found the cupboard bare, said Mr MICHAEL WORSLEY, prosecuting.

JOHN KNIGHT, 48, garage owner, the brother of RONALD KNIGHT, former husband of the actress, BARBARA WINDSOR, had at least £54,000 in the safety deposit box near Marbella, it was alleged.

Following the Easter Monday robbery at the Shoreditch headquarters of SECURITY EXPRESS, John Knight was said to have spent lavishly on holidays and cars and opening bank accounts totalling £250,000.

Part of the proceeds of the robbery — £2 million — was stored in old suitcases ready for laundering," Mr Worsley said.

'Musty' money

The "musty-smelling money" was delivered to a house in Enfield to be counted by a a garage owner, ALAN OPIOLA.

He was shocked by the sheer size of the cash, which was put into an "immense pile" four feet high and three feet across, said Mr Worsley.

Opiola, of Enfield, now serving a sentence for handling stolen cash, went out and bought four more suitcases from Woolworths and stored them in his laundry room.

He carried on counting the cash with the help of his wife and was paid £25,000 by Knight who "asked his help to launder the money by changing it with other banknotes," Mr Worsley alleged.

Five men and one woman deny a total of 14 charges arising from the robbery at Security Express.

One man, JOHN HORSLEY, 43, mechanic, of Winters Way, Waltham Abbey, has admitted robbery, but three others, John Knight, of Wheathampstead, Herts; TERENCE PERKINS, 36, property developer, of Oak Avenue, Enfield; and JOHN HICKSON, 41, market trader, of Peabody Buildings, Chequer Street, Holborn, all deny robbery and also disposing and receiving stolen cash.

Perkins's wife, JACQUELINE, 35, denies three charges of receiving and also disposing of stolen cash.

JAMES KNIGHT, 57, restaurateur, of The Limes, Stanmore, Middx has denied a single charge of receiving.

The trial was adjourned until today.

Kenny Dalglish, the Liverpool and Scotland footballer with his children Paul, eight, and Kelly, nine, after receiving the insignia of the M B E at Buckingham Palace yesterday. Dalglish, who has won 97 caps for his country, said that the Queen wished him luck in today's F A Cup replay between Liverpool and York City.

Legal advice on probation reports row

By Our Legal Correspondent

JUDGES and magistrates have no legal power to order a probation officer to prepare a social inquiry report on a defendant who is pleading not guilty, the National Association of Probation Officers has told its 6,000 members.

This follows a legal opinion obtained by the association from Mr Louis Blom-Cooper, QC, who said that in his view a court had no power to give a probation officer directions to make inquiries before there was a finding of guilty and the court had taken on its sentencing rôle.

His opinion was obtained after a long-standing conflict between the association and several judges who have criticised probation officers and threatened them with contempt of court proceedings for their refusal to prepare in advance social inquiry reports on defendants pleading not guilty.

Give guidance

Mr Harry Fletcher, the association's assistant general secretary, said they would now be asking the Home Office and the Lord Chancellor's Department to give guidance to judges and magistrates in line with Mr Blom-Cooper's opinion.

The association has consistently argued that it is impossible to prepare reports when a defendent denies the charges because the prime purpose of a social inquiry report is to assist the sentencer in reaching a decision and the report deals with the offender's criminal involvement and attitude to the offence.

Anonymity sought by JPs after violence threats

By GUY RAIS

INCREASING threats of violence by militant organisations, including the self-styled Animal Liberation Front, has led to a growing number of magistrates asking for anonymity when trying cases.

The latest request was at Bromley, Kent, when three magistrates requested that their names should not be revealed because of the activities of animal rights activists in the area.

The Magistrates' Association has raised the question of anonymity with the Lord Chancellor's Department on several occasions.

Mr Geoffrey Norman, secretary of the association, said yesterday: "As a member of the Home Office working party on magistrates courts, I drew attention to the fact that courts were being placed under increasing pressure to publish names of J Ps who adjudicated in particular cases.

"Although this does not present problems in rural areas, where magistrates are well known it could lead tothreats being made against J Ps in other areas.

"At the meeting an official of the Lord Chancellor's department explained that normally there would be no objection to a reporter naming a magistrate, but it should not be disclosed to a defendant.

"It was felt there was no general right for a defendant to know the names or addresses of magistrates, and that if a person required a magistrate's signature, it should only be given at the offices of the justices clerk."

Mr Norman said Lord Hailsham, the Lord Chancellor, expressed the view that the names of magistrates should not be given to a defendant merely out of curiosity, and that it should only be given in cases where an appeal was being lodged, and then only through the solicitors involved.

Unpleasant letter

Mr Derek Howard, the association's deputy secretary, and himself a magistrate for 20 years, recalled a threat he received after a decision he had taken in court.

"It only happened once and took the form of an anonymous, unpleasant letter. It did not upset me in the least, but if I had a nervous wife or elderly mother living in my home, it might have caused them some concern.

Fight to save school in murder village

By COLIN RANDALL

HORTON, the Cotswold village where Graham Backhouse tried to murder his wife and shot dead a neighbour, suffered a blow of another kind yesterday when county councillors decided to close its church primary school next year.

Parents produced seven hours of video film as part of their campaign to save the 155-year-old school, which has two teachers for 29 children.

Despite yesterday's decision by the Labour-controlled Avon Education Authority, during a debate on closure and amalgamation plans affecting a number of schools, the fight will go on with representations to the Education Secretary, Sir Keith Joseph.

Avon's Tory opposition has pledged to keep open the school if returned to power, as expected, in May.

Ironically, the last piece of craftsmanship completed by Backhouse's murder victim, Mr Colyn Badale-Taylor, a skilled carpenter, was a wooden sign which he erected at the school on the day of his death.

Mr Jim Wilkie, an agricultural engineer and inventor, who is involved in the action group campaigning against closure, said yesterday:

"The way in which past, present and prospective parents have generally banded together to try to save the school shows that normal life is going on in Horton despite all that has happened."

Mr Wilkie, whose two children are former pupils of the village school, took most of the video film which has been shown to several Avon councillors.

It depicts everyday life in the voluntary-aided school and gives detailed analysis of the parents' case that closure would leave Avon with the heavy cost of ferrying children to other schools.

Only a few years ago, villagers raised £10,000 and supplied £5,000-worth of labour to build a new classroom and other facilities, opened in 1981.

"We are proud of the school. It is extremely happy and its success is obvious to anyone who enters the building," said Mr Wilkie.

Avon officials estimate that savings on staff and premises would amount to £17,400 a year if the school closed, offset by extra transport costs of up to £9,000.

But parents claim the true cost of providing mini-buses for children would be closer to £17,000.

Mr George Crump, Avon's director of education, says despite "distinct advantages" for young children attending their village schools, pupils could suffer "lack of stimulation," while larger schools offered the chance of a broader curriculum and more teachers.

'Bronte country' halt is best-kept station

By JOHN PETTY Transport Correspondent

SPARE-TIME work over 14 years by a handful of enthusiasts has won Damems Station this year's trophy in the "best kept station competition" of the Association of Railway Preservation Societies.

The tiny halt, big enough to take only two-coach trains, is on the Keighley and Worth Valley Railway in the "Bronte country" of Yorkshire.

Victorian gas lamps, a wooden waiting room and ticket office and a signal box were all obtained elsewhere and rebuilt at Damems.

The award, sponsored by Ian Allen, will be presented by Mr Bob Reid, chairman of British Rail, in London today week.

Runners-up are Alresford, on the Watercress Line in Hampshire, and Blackheath, on Southern Region.

Glass canopy

But there is a touch of heartbreak for the local preservation society in Blackheath, whose work on restoring the station front and the old stationmaster's house, won the prize. A garden created in a siding has twice been ruined by railway gangs who misunderstood their instructions.

And the station itself currently looks like a battleground. Plans to restore the glass canopy were shelved when B R instead pursued an abortive plan to put a supermarket over the track. Now the rain pours in and B R has mistakenly destroyed an archway which it will have to replace by order of the local council.

Plaques will also go to Scottish Region for restoration of Montrose Station, to Eastern Region for work on Saltaire Station, and to Sainsbury's for "magnificent restoration of the old station at Bath Green Park in connection with a new supermarket scheme." Ironically, there have been fears in Yorkshire that the Transport Department may ruin the rebuilt Saltaire Station to make way for a road.

Stations highly commended and getting certificates are:

Private sector: Cheddleton (North Staffordshire Railway), Buckfastleigh (Dart Valley), Ravenglass (Ravenglass & Eskdale Railway), Oxenhope (Keighley and Worth Valley) and two stations on the Severn Valley Railway, Highley and Arley.

Public Sector: Baker Street (London Transport), Waterloo Concourse, Horsham, Orpington (all on Southern Region), former tea-room at York Station (Eastern Region), Stranraer and Dumfries (both in Scottish Region), Swansea (Western Region) and Rowley, the North of England Open Air Museum at Beamish, Co. Durham.

A-TEST FALLOUT WAS 60 TIMES 'SAFE' LEVEL

A British atom bomb test exposed aborigines to up to 60 times the "safe" levels of fallout, the Australian Royal Commission into the 1950s tests was told yesterday in London by Mr Ronald Siddons, a senior scientific officer with the test team.

Mr Siddons, now a deputy director at Aldermaston Atomic Weapons Research Establishment in Berkshire, blamed miscalculations for the fallout level at Wallatina, 107 miles from the 1953 Totem One test site at Emu.

The hearing was adjourned until today.

TEST-TUBE BABY PIONEER ATTACKS POWELL BILL ON EMBRYOS

By ALAN COPPS

SCIENTISTS working in fertilisation and human embryology have set themselves ethical standards higher than those demanded by the Warnock Report. Dr Robert Edwards, a pioneer of "test-tube babies" techniques, said yesterday.

He launched an attack on Mr Enoch Powell's Bill for the Protection of the Unborn Child, which received a large majority in the Commons last week.

He said the bill would require women with infertility problems "to have a licence to procreate."

It would also oblige scientists to re-implant all the embryos they created in women, despite the possibility that some might be damaged.

Dr Edward, a reader in physiology at Cambridge is scientific director of Bourn Hall Clinic and collaborated with Dr Patrick Steptoe in the work which resulted in the birth in 1978 of Louise Brown, Britain's first test-tube baby.

Self-imposed rules

He said the ethical debate on the technique known as "in vitro" fertilisation began among scientists in its early days and they had called for a parliamentary commission as long ago as 1971.

It had taken the House of Commons, through the Warnock Committee and Friday's debate, more than 16 years to respond.

"The ones who called for action were the scientists and doctors. The politicians and religious leaders have been behind. Our self-imposed standards over 15 years have been stricter than those recommended by Warnocks," he said.

Dr Edwards was speaking at a forum on the Warnock Report organised by the National Union of Townswomen's Guilds at Imperial College, Kensington.

He said he rejected as unethical the creation of embryos specifically for research, one of the major concerns of Warnock.

One of his objections to the Powell bill was that it would oblige doctors to re-implant all embryos. This ignored the fact that it was now possible to tell when an embryo was defective. Some would develop deformities and others could cause foetal cancer.

"To my mind it would be immoral to replace such an embryo in a woman," he said.

Essential research

He also objected to the bill's stipulation that a woman should seek permission legally before attempting to have a child by in vitro fertilisation, known as L V F. That permission would last only four months, insufficient time for many women to be treated.

Dr Edwards said that research on embryos was essential to pursue inquiries into the causes of such problems as Down's Syndrome.

"Infertility is a major scourge but IVF has been a boost. Before, many women were untreatable. Now as a result of research 38 per cent of women become pregnant following the placement of three embryos. Male infertility is as successful in treatment."

Major shortcomings

Earlier, the Bishop of Norwich, the Rt Rev. Maurice Wood said the Warnock Report had raised two vital issues: the protection of the family and the protection of the individual, in particular the embryo.

There weremany good things in the report but when it dealt with the family there were also major shortcomings.

There was the moral question of adultery, a legal one over inheritance and a social one in that both parents knew that the husband was not the child's natural father, something the child could discover.

Surrogacy controls

Dr Wendy Greengross, a member of the Warnock Committee, said she had signed the minority report which opposed the complete outlawing of surrogate motherhood.

While she agreed that surrogacy should not be on a commercial basis, she felt it should be controlled on a similar basis to adoption, with full participation by child welfare authorities.

Mr Powell's Bill was approved by 238 votes to 66, a majority of 172, on its second reading.

Its purpose would be to outlaw the use of any human embryo create din vitro for anything except to enable a named woman to bear a child.

The Social Services Secretary would have to give his authority in the case of each woman. Mr Powell said the purpose of his Bill was to prevent experimentation on embryos.

STICKING TO HER ASSETS

By BRIAN SILK

AFTER spending 24 hours with the seat of her pants glued to a staircase at her East London transport business, Mrs Carlann Fiil said yesterday: "I am going to stick it out."

Mrs Fiil, 32, glued herself down early on Monday before bailiffs arrived to seize the premises in Ratcliffe Lane, Limehouse. Expecting barricades they had pickaxes but found the door open and Mrs Fiil firmly fixed.

Seeing the sticky situation they left to consider their next move. The bailiffs had been sent by London Regional Transport, which needs the site of Mr and Mrs Fiil's Skandia Express Freight business for its Docklands railway system.

A compulsory purchase order had been obtained but the couple disagree with the £50,000 compensation being offered.

"We've spent 16 years building this business up from scratch and we're not going to be cheated now," said Mrs Fiil, who claims that an independent surveyor has valued the property at £80,000.

Backache and cramp

After more than 24 hours with her tight black leather slacks stuck to the staircase she was suffering from backache and cramp. Pink pillows support her back and her legs are kept warm by a pink duvet and an electric fan heater.

Her husband, John, said he was worried about his wife's health but she was "a very stubborn woman and I know she is determined to see this through."

A London Regional Transport spokesman said it was up to the bailiffs how they obtained possession. He added that the £50,000 was considered reasonable but "we are still prepared to discuss compensation."

PRISON staff were warned yesterday to expect a dramatic increase of Aids cases in jail in the next year.

Mr Michael O'Dwyer, chairman of Wormwood Scrubs Prison Officers' Association, said they were told of the threat by Dr John Kilgour, director of Prison Medical Services.

At the meeting last Saturday Dr Kilgour was said to have expressed surprise that there had been so few cases among prisoners so far.

Despite the warning, Prison Officers' Association members at the Scrubs, Britain's largest remand jail, have agreed to lift a ban of the transfer of inmates to other jails.

Mr O'Dwyer said the authorities had promised to screen more thoroughly the type of prisoner entering the jail, improve reception facilities, and look at conditions for the prison's 700 staff generally.

The threat of Aid's had brought to a head the concern over health and safety which had existed for months at the jail, which houses 1,200 men.

"We just don't have the facilities to cope with prisoners suffering from Aids or any other infectious diseases. The prison here only has a temporary hospital facility," said Mr O'Dwyer.

"If a prisoner was found to have Aids today, we couldn't nurse him properly. He would be a threat to the prison staff, inmates and to the public."

He stressed that if any more suspected cases occur, the officers' association will look at the situation again.

No coffin kisses

Meanwhile, undertakers and mortuary attendants are calling on the Government, to issue guidelines on the handling of bodies of Aids victims.

Mr David Coates, national organiser of the Furniture, Timber and Allied Trades Union, which has 3,000 undertaker members, said: "We have not even been told whether it is safe to bury the bodies. Some diseases live on after death.

"We feel we have a right to know the cause of death, so we can take further precautions. A red label could be used to alert us."

Mr Ben Rubner, the union's general secretary, said relatives who insisted on viewing bodies should be allowed to do so by mortuary staff, but they should be warned against kissing or touching the corpse.

The risk of catching it is still minimal

By Dr K. C. HUTCHIN Medical Consultant

LIKE syphilis in the 15th century, Aids was imported into Europe from America. The initials stand for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — an acquired infection which causes the body's immunity to disease to become deficient.

In 1980 Aids, which had long been present but unrecognised in some parts of the world, notably central Africa, suddenly erupted on the "gay" community in the United States with dire results. Well over 5,000 cases occurred in the next four years, mostly fatal.

The disease primarily affected homosexual men of whom there are said to be 10 million in the United States, but as time went on the infection spread to a limited number of women, probably via bi-sexual man who had contracted the infection from male sexual partners.

It also affected a small number of children born to infected parents.

Transfusion risk

Inevitably drug addicts using shared needles and syringes became infected with the virus which was proved to be the causative organism in 1983.

In the U.S., where blood donors are paid, many addicts and homosexuals give blood as a source of income with the unfortunate result that banks of blood for transfusion and the manufacture of plasma products, vital to haemophiliacs, became contaminated with the virus.

The result was that haemophiliacs an dothers who required blood transfusions became Aids victims.

In due course aids spread to European countries and Australia, still mainly among homosexual men. The first true cases in the United Kingdom were in 1981. Since then the disease has spread by promiscuous sex between males.

Pressure to find the cause of Aids was considerable. By 1983 the probable virus, known as HTLV-3, had been identified. This virus was subsequently proved to be the culprit by both French and American research workers working independently.

The molecular structure of this virus is known so it is possible for a vaccine for prevention and treatment of Aids could be produced in the next year.

Aids is still a rare disease. In Britain there have been only 118 cases of whom 51 have died. Nevertheless, panic although understandable in the "gay" community, has been out of all proportion among others so it must be stressed that the infection is only spread in very limited ways.

These include sexual intercourse, mostly between promiscuous homosexuals, transfusions of infected blood and plasma products and the use of contaminated needles and syringes by addicts.

In short, the virus is transmitted in body fluids, mainly blood and semen. Although it has been found in saliva there is no evidence that it can be transmitted on crockery or cutlery.

The risk of it being transmitted by giving the kiss of life is extremely remote.

The fact that Aids will not go away has to be faced but with a modification of the gay way of life leading to less promiscuity, a process which is already under way, the number of new cases should diminish. We are already on the way to bringing Aids under control.

Loss of weight

Within a few months plasma products will be heat-treated (a process which kills the virus) so that haemophiliacs will no longer be at risk.

The symptoms of Aids are common in many other diseases so it is only when they all occur simultaneously over long periods that someone in a high risk group that the disease would be suspected.

These symptoms are: Swollen glands, profound fatigue, unexpected loss of weight, shortness of breath, dry cough, skin diseases and thrush.

PORT & SHERRY 'OVERTAXED BY 30p'

The tax on port, sherry and vermouth needs to be cut by at least 30p a bottle in next month's Budget to halt the fall in sales and Treasury revenue, said Mr Arnold Tasker, chairman of the Wine and Spirit Association, yesterday.

"Over-taxation has seriously damaged sales," he said. "Port sales are down 29 per cent., and sherry and vermouth down by 25 per cent. The Chancellor is literally taxing these wines beyond the pocket of Mr and Mrs Britain.

900 STRAY DOGS DESTROYED

Nearly 900 dogs have been destroyed in Belfast during the past year, following the city council's decision to clear the streets of strays by appointing two full-time dog wardens. Of the 1,319 caught during 1984, only 165 were reclaimed by owners, with 258 being resold and 889 put down.

The round-up has so annoyed some pet lovers that the city's dog catchers have been stoned and insulted.

DRIVING BAN ON ACTRESS

Nyree Dawn Porter, 49, the actress, was fined a total of £140 with £50 costs at Brighton yesterday when she admitted driving with one and a half times the legal limit of alcohol and driving without lights. She was banned from driving for a year.

Mr Sidney Manches her solicitor said Miss Porter of Coral Road, Richmond-upon-Thames, had flown from Belfast to Brighton for the opening night last October of "The Chalk Garden" at the Theatre Royal. She was suffering from 'flu and had three glasses of wine with a meal after the performance.

BLASTS SCARE AT GREENHAM

Explosions rocked the Greenham cruise missile base early yesterday and brought a flood of complaints from anxious residents, Newbury telephone exchange reported dozens of calls about 1 a.m. from families who feared the worst.

Wing Commander Michael Marsh, RAF commander at the base, explained: "It was all part of a military exercise which has been going on since Saturday. We had to simulate explosions to give our people training in how to react. I'm afraid it's necessary to do this from time to time in the middle of the night."

As you can see opposition to the DHSS proposal to blacklist many important medicines is formidable.

Doctors, heads of medical colleges, politicians, unions, patients, even the Standing Medical Advisory Committee whose job it is to advise the government on clinical matters have condemned the scheme.

The reasons are clear.

They range from the financial hardship that could be imposed immediately on NHS patients, especially the elderly, to the threat to the ability of UK drug research to find new and more effective medicines.

The government should respect the opinions of those who understand the damage that the limited list could impose on the community... and think again.

IF YOU were ill would you go to your doctor for a cure, or to a senior civil servant at the Health Ministry?

As a doctor, perhaps I am biased. But there is no doubt that I would choose the former.

Surely it is an indisputable fact that no one is more qualified to decide upon a suitable medicine on the basis of an individual's symptoms, circumstances and preferences than the family doctor.

Yet with all the pressures of an astonishingly high drugs bill of some £1,400 million a year, Social Services Secretary Norman Fowler has proposed that it should be the Government that decides a patient's future.

The method he has chosen is the so-called limited list — a set of named drugs which the family doctor must choose from for common medical problems ranging from digestive ailments to the treatment of many types of pain.

I was Health Minister for four years so I have a great respect for Norman Fowler and understand the need to save money — in this case the £100 million a year that he wants — and the good use to which this Government is putting money in the NHS.

Medical college heads refuse to join drug talks

A prescription to make Britain's poor suffer

Sir,—About 25 years ago I wrote to the Guardian describing the period between the diagnosis of inoperable cancer of the lung caused by cigarettes, and the ultimate death of my patient nine months later.

In my letter I requested the Government to ban all tobacco advertising. The issue was raised in Parliament, but nothing was done. Looking back, the cost of doing nothing would be at least 100,000 lives, dying from cancer of the lung and coronary artery disease.

We now hear from the Government that "prescription [illegible] item (£1.60) if it is vital."

At one time our NHS was described, justly, as the envy of the world. The position is now reversed. Waiting time in Walsall, to see an E.N.T. consultant, is 12 to 16 months. In Holland and West Germany 4 to 5 days. Operations for tonsils in Walsall follow about one year after the consultation.

LIMITED-LIST PRESCRIBING

REBEL TORY MPs have challenged Health Secretary Norman Fowler to justify his proposed restriction on the number of drugs available on the NHS.

The group, led by MP Ann Winterton, dispute the minister's figure of 17,000 products prescribable on the NHS. They point out that MIMS contains only 2,000 specialty products and the British National Formulary only 6,000 entries, while the number of product licences have halved since 1970.

Mr Fowler is asked to explain the "apparent discrepancy".

The rebels say: "As British per capita medicine spending is low, could it not be argued that the number of products available for prescribing is irrelevant?"

They also attack the minister's claim that the 100 million increase in GP scrips over the last 25 years indicates a need for a limited list.

They suggest other factors for the rise such as an ageing popula[illegible] control has also been slammed by the MPs. They suggest that savings could be gained by lowering returns in the Prescription Pricing Regulation Scheme.

The MPs do not believe that there is any real need to introduce the radical new form of limited-list intervention and in view of Health Minister Kenneth Clarke's reported admission that such a list would damage drug exports, they want a statement on the immediate and future consequences to British trade if a list was introduced.

The MPs quote fears that the scheme stems from World Health Organisation proposals and anti-industry pressure groups who wished to "decommercialise" the world pharmaceutical market.

based drug firms have accepted profit restraint for many years and it was unfair now to blacklist some of their products.

Disputing Mr Clarke's claim that a limited list would increase private medical expenditure, the MPs ask: "Why should this be the case if the NHS list is adequate for all proper medical treatment?" They also demand to know how the £100m saving will be split between patients and industry.

Local medical committees hit [illegible]

Feeling among local medical committees is running strongly against the Government's proposals.

Many committees have already met and have fully backed the protests made by the general medical services committee. Other committees will be meeting in the next two or three weeks.

The following are among those committees which have already met.

Lancashire LMC, which met last week, was unanimously opposed to the proposal. Members said it was wrong that no consultation had taken place. The meeting decided to write to the GMSC objecting to the proposal in principle and calling for immediate consultations.

In Cheshire the LMC passed two resolutions, one protesting about the lack of consultation and the other declaring that there should be no agreement to the proposed restrictions until proper consultation and mutual agreement between GPs and the Government had been reached.

At West Sussex LMC there was a more mixed response. Members agreed that there were one or two sensible measures contained in the Government's plan. On the other hand they entirely supported the GMSC in its opposition to the crude way in which the proposals had been announced.

At the City and East London LMC, where members did not have the full documents before them, there was strong opposition to the creation of a two-tier system and criticism from some members that this was the end of the NHS in its present form.

This was echoed in Greenwich and Bexley, while across in Camden and Islington the LMC decided to write to Social Services Secretary Norman Fowler to protest about the way the announcement had been made.

Hereford Worcester LMC, which met two weeks ago, passed three resolutions supporting the GMSC on the line it had taken, criticising the Government's dictatorial handling of the matter and expressing concern about what would happen to disgruntled patients.

Secretary Dr Robin Steel said the way to manage the health service was for the DHSS and the professions to work together.

In Scotland, opposition to the Government is running very strongly from Glasgow to the Shetlands.

Among those LMCs which have met, Grampian has decided to write in protest to local MPs, newspapers and to the Scottish GMSC.

Its main concern is the effect the proposals will have on the elderly and those with young children.

LMC secretary Dr Ivan Wisely said the plan posed a threat financially and to the patient's health.

THATCHER HAS $ WARNING FOR REAGAN

By PETER PRYKE Parliamentary Correspondent

SHORTLY before leaving for the United States yesterday. Mrs THATCHER told the Commons that she would be warning President Reagan of the "brutal" consequences for other countries if there was to be a sudden collapse in the value of the dollar.

She also made it clear that she would be pressing the President to take action to reduce his budget deficit in order to solve the problems flowing from the dollar's present high value.

The Prime Minister was urged by Mr TERENCE HIGGINS (C., Worthing) to stress to the President the need for international contingency plans to deal with the possible short-term collapse of the dollar.

"Will you stress how absurd it would be for the strongest economy in the world to resort to protectionist measures?" he asked.

Mrs THATCHER replied that she would be putting very strongly the point of the effect on the United States' traditional trading partners.

"Many developing countries need trade as much as they need aid. If we do have a sudden collapse of the dollar the consequences could be veyr brutal. We will be pointng that out."

Budget deficit

Mr ROGER FREEMAN (C. Kettering) asked her to commend the American Administration for their effective intervention in the foreign exchange markets recently to stabilise the dollar.

"Will you remind him that the only permanent solution to the problem of the high dollar is to solve the American Federal Budget deficit?"

Mrs Thatcher said that the agreement at the Williamsburg summit, and a recent meeting of finance ministers, was to make certain that speculators never knew whether there would be an intervention or not.

It was to help prevent "the resurgence of the dollar as strongly as might otherwise have happened.

"I agree that the deficit is the fundamental problem and fully support all those in Congress and the Administration who are earnestly seeking to take action to reduce it."

Mr KINNOCK asked if the Prime Minister recalled saying 14 months ago, when the pound was worth $1·45, that she would rather be in Britain's financial position, which was sustainable, than in that of the United States.

"As you change your pounds for dollars today is that still your view?"

Mrs THATCHER replied: "I would still say yes. I think we are in a much more sustainable position."

Mr KINNOCK said that in the ensuing 14 months unemployment in the United States had gone down by 1,100,000 while in Britain it had gone up by 150,000; their industrial production had gone up by six per cent. whereas ours had gone down by 1½ per cent.; and, our interest rates had gone up by 55 per cent. and their's down by ten per cent.

"If you are really the President's No.1 fan will you realise that emulation might be the sincerest form of flattery?"

Mrs THATCHER retorted that the President was fortunte in one respect — there was no danger of socialism in his country.

"They are an enterprise culture, and never had the union problems to deal with that we have."

Harmony on call to stop Noraid cash

By Our Parliamentary Staff

MR KINNOCK yesterday offered firm backing to the Prime Minister for the attempts she will make during her visit to the United States to stop the flow of financial support for the I R A.

In a rare harmonious Commons exchange between the two, Mrs THATCHER thanked him for his "great support"

"It will help me in the United States that all Members of the House are united."

Mr KINNOCK said he wished to endorse "yet again and firmly the condemnation you have made of the supply of arms to Northern Ireland as a result of funding from the United States."

'Foolish' Americans

The Prime Minister was asked by Mr ANDREW MACKAY (C. Berkshire E.) to illustrate to "those foolish Americans who fund Noraid that what it leads to is the murder of Irishmen by Irishmen," as had been shown by the savage murder in front of his children of the prison warder, Mr Patrick Kerr.

Mrs THATCHER condemned the murder as "particularly cruel and brutal, and ought to be seen as a disgrace in any part of the world."

She said she would do as much as she could to prevent any money going to Noraid. "It is important to stress that the I R A does not represent the public—indeed the organisation is banned in the Republic. The I R A is fundamentally against democracy itself."

OPPOSITION ATTACKS BILL TO BEAT COURT RULING

By WILLIAM WEEKES Parliamentary Staff

LEGISLATION to make the Greater London Council pay a disputed £50 million in grants to London Regional Transport was attacked by Labour in the Commons yesterday as a "shabby little manœuvre" to get round a High Court ruling which went against Mr Ridley, the Transport Secretary.

The Government is hurrying the London Regional Transport (Amendment) Bill through Parliament with a view to getting a third reading in the Commons tomorrow night.

It will then go to the Lords.

Mr RIDLEY stressed on second reading yesterday that the Bill should go through Parliament as quickly as possible to give the G L C and L R T the "earliest possible element of certainty."

Whatever MPs think about the legislation, it was right to decide the issue as quickly as possible, Mr Ridley said.

The Bill requires the G L C to pay £258 million in grants to London Regional Transport—successors to the G L C-controlled London Transport—for 1984-85, of which £50 million is in dispute.

'Propaganda fronts'

The High Court ruled that Mr Ridley had acted in an "unlawful, irrational and procedurally improper manner" over the amount of grant the G L C should pay to London Regional Transport.

Mrs DUNWODDY, Opposition Transport spokesman, said the judgment against Mr Ridley had been so damning that Ministers in any other government would have been obliged to resign.

Mr RIDLEY said that if the Bill was not brought forward now, and if the money remained with the G L C, it would either have to be found from L R T's passengers or from the ratepayers in future years.

He suggested that if the G L C was allowed to keep the money it would probably be used for one of the "propaganda fronts" funded by the council.

"It is not for the courts to determine how much grant should be paid by the G L C, nor have the courts presumed to do so.

"That is a matter of policy, and it is right that the Government, with the approval of Parliament, should determine it."

Countering criticisms that he should have gone to appeal rather than introduce a Bill retrospectively to recover the money, Mr Ridley said: "It would not have helped L R T or the G L C if we had gone through the process of appeal, only to end up without the correct amount having to be paid and facing further legal disputes and uncertainty."

The High Court decision had "put into limbo" the amount of grant which should be paid to L R T in the current financial year.

"Unless this matter is resolved quickly and beyond doubt, the G L C's annual budgeting and rate precepting processes wil lhate to proceed without the G L C knowing for certain what the payments to L R T for this financial year will be."

London Regional Transport also needed a firm basis on which to plan for 1985-86 and future years.

'Change of rules'

Mrs DUNWOODY said that the court finding for the G L C was saying that Mr Ridley was asking for money to which he was not entitled.

"We are being asked today to take legislation which is, in effect, retrospective because a court of law found that the Transport Secretary had acted unlawfully, irrationally and procedurally improperly in giving a direction which excedded his statutory powers."

Mr Ridley was not prepared to accept that he was wrong. "He is saying: 'If I did not get it right the first time, I am goin gto change the rules so I get it right the second time'.

"He is perpetratin on the House of Commons a nasty shabby little battle in his war of atrition against the G L C."

Mrs Dunwoody condemned the Bill as a "shabby and embarrassing little maneouvre." She was appalled that Mr Ridley was going to use his enormous majority to push through legislation anyone should be ashamed of.

'Breathtaking arrogance'

Mr JOHN CARTWRIGHT (Soc. Dem., Woolwich) opposed the Bill as "a shabby, shady, hole-in-the-corner measure" and Mr TONY BANKS (Lab., Newham N W), who is on the G L C, charged Mr Ridley with combining incompetence with breathtaking arrogance.

"The Bill is designed to allow you to escape the consequences of your own unlawful, irrational and procedurally improper actions.

"You are getting round the law and abusing your position of power in this land.

Racial prejudice charge by Bishop over Hongkong

By WALTER ABURN Parliamentary Staff

IT was hard to resist the unwelcome conclusion that the Government was racially prejudiced, said the Bishop of BIRMINGHAM, the Rt Rev. Hugh Montefiore, during yesterday's second reading debate in the Lords on the Hongkong Bill.

He said he feared for the fate of 5,000 ethnic Indians and Africans who lived in the colony and who could become British Nationals (Overseas) when it was transferred to China in 1997.

The Bishop queried why they should not have a right to settle in Britain like the Falkland Islanders and the Gibraltarians.

They could suffer like the Ugandan Asians under citizenship proposals which gave them no right to live anywhere. While he hated to say it, he could not but note that privileges given o whites in the British Dependent Territories were denied to blacks.

They needed security through a kind of citizenship which was effective. The Government should discharge its moral obligations to ethnic Indians settled in Hongkong who were in danger of being treated less than fairly.

Sensitive problem

While welcoming the Bill both Lord CLEDWYN, Opposition Leader in the Lords, and Lord BEAUMONT (Lib) said that nationality would be a most sensitive problem to be considered carefully.

Lord GEDDES (C) noted that while the children of British overseas citizens born after 1997 were to have the same status, their grandchildren would be born stateless.

Baroness YOUNG, Foreign Office Minister, sad the Government had made its intention clear thta no child born after July 1997 should be made stateless.

But it would not be appropriate to grant British nationality indefinitely to the descendants of British nationals.

She resented the suggestion that the Government's immigration policy was racialist and asked the Bishop to consider the implications of granting a right of abode here apparently on racial criteria.

PIT STRIKE'S 'NEEDLESS SUFFERING'

By Our Parliamentary Staff

THE miners' strike was a very expensive lesson in the wastefulness of disputes and the unnecessary suffering they cause, the Earl of GOWRIE, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, said in the Lords yesterday.

It was a tragic, unnecessary dispute, he said.

He told Lord Diamond, chairman of the Social Democrat peers, that it was estimated to have reduced growth in Britain's gross domestic product by between one and 1¼ per cent. in 1984 to 2½ per cent.

Lord Gowrie saw a primary need for unions and managements to agree effective procedures through which issues could be considered and resolved jointly.

Lord DIAMOND said a widely publicised estimate put the cost at between £5 billion and £6 billion, but there had been enormous personal suffering for strikers and their families besides the economic cost to us all.

He looked to the day when striking as a means of settling disputes "with honour and justice" would be seen as being about as relevant as duelling.

Lord BARNETT (Lab.) said that the dispute and the closure of uneconomic pits could have been carried out much more cost effectively and without enormous damage "but for the provocative appointment of Mr Ian MacGregor."

Lord GOWRIE disagreed, saying the dispute had had a relatively small effect on the prosperity we enjoyed and when it ended we should bounce back in very good shape indeed.

Lord BOYD-CARPENTER (C) said the Coal Board chairman was an extremely able and courageous man. If blame was to be attributed many would find it much more convincingly attributed to Mr Scargill.

Belgrano 'betrayal' claim rejected

By Our Parliamentary Staff

THE Government had large majorities at the end of the debate in the Commons on the sinking of the Argentine warship General Belgrano.

As reported in later editions of THE DAILY TELEGRAPH yesterday, a Labour amendment accusing Ministers of betraying their responsibility to Parliament by seeking to mislead M Ps was defeated by 350 votes to 202, Government majority 148.

The Government motion recognising that the sinking was 'a necessary and legitimate action in the Falklands campaign" was carried by 351 votes to nil.

Mr GERALD KAUFMAN, winding up for Labour, said that Mr Clive Ponting had had to be prosecuted because he had committed the unpardonable sin of drawing attention to the fact tha Minisers had misled Parliamen and that it had not been done inadvertently or accideotally.

Mr Stanley, Armed Forces Minister, had prevented replies being given to questions about the Belgrano, and had shown that he had no wis hto encourage any debate about the subject, whatsoever.

United front

Such ad been the climate of deception in the Defence Ministry that one official had written a minute asking for guidance lest he had "departed inadvertently from the public line and risked a breach in our united front."

Mr Kaufman declared: "That was a united front against a select committee of this House."

Mr STANLEY, replying to the debate amid loud shouts of "resign", said it was true he had asked Mr Ponting to produce two drafts in reply to a letter about when the Belgrano was located.

But he had been the first Minister to take the initiative in asking Mr Ponting to go further than Ministers had before in preparing a draft acknowledging that the Belgrano had been sighted on May 1.

The Government had taken the creditable decision from the outset to adopt a policy of partial disclosure, when they could have gone for no disclosure. Total disclosure would have been totally irresponsible.

Safety of submarines

Disclosing that six submarines had been deployed in the South Atlantic during the Falklands War, he argued that divulging information about one of them could affect the safety of them all, and that of our Polaris

Mr Stanley said that he had been subjected to a campaign of character assassination over the past fornight. He rejected totally the accusation that he had somehow behaved improperly to the House.

Purchasing Officer

c.£11,500 Southend

Access, The Joint Credit Card Company Limited, has recently formed a centralised department to develop a company purchasing policy and to provide an expert purchasing service to all divisions.

We are now looking for someone with a proven track record in purchasing to help us establish this function. MACHINERY ENGINEER
PRESSURE VESSEL ENGINEER
A double edged opportunity

Air Products, an American multi-national company with an annual turnover in excess of £1.7bn. is experiencing substantial growth based on solid investment and a positive approach to the future. As a result we now need to recruit two high calibre professionals to join our Engineering Division at our European Management Centre in Surrey.

Applicants should be degree qualified or equal. Senior positions are available to those with appropriate qualifications and experience.

MACHINERY ENGINEER

You will need to have worked on the specification, selection and engineering of machinery and equipment packages for approximately 5 years. A sound knowledge of all types of compressors, their associated ancillary equipment and some site experience will be essential. A commercial awareness with the ability to communicate effectively with vendors is also required while knowledge of acoustic engineering would be an advantage. Working experience with API standards is useful but not essential.

PRESSURE VESSEL ENGINEER

You will carry out the original design of equipment for air separation and hydrocarbon processing plant which will be built in our own workshops. This will require close liaison with our process and manufacturing groups. You will also be responsible for the specification, selection and approval of a wide range of bought in equipment including pressure vessels, heat exchangers, storage tanks and process packages. You should have a minimum of 5 years' experience, with an innovative approach to design and problem solving, plus a thorough knowledge of British and American pressure design codes and stress analysis techniques. Knowledge of European codes and Approval Authorities would be an advantage.

Our demands are justifiably high, but if you can match them, Air Products can offer you a commensurate package, an unrivalled technical challenge, genuine career prospects and excellent benefits, including relocation if appropriate.

If you think you fit the bill please write to me Pip Grealish, Personnel Manager, enclosing full career history, at Air Products Limited, Hersham Place, Molesey Road, Walton-on-Thames, Surrey KT12 4RZ. Tel: 0932 249200.

Graduate Engineers
EXPLORE NEW GROUND IN HIGH TECHNOLOGY

The technology challenge of an engineering career is crucial to its attraction. In protecting Britain, the Ministry of Defence provides an environment in which this challenge is at its most demanding and, for the engineers involved, most satisfying.

Continuous, high-level training, a real concern for the development of staff and extensive investment in sophisticated equipment are further reasons why no talented young engineer can afford to ignore the MOD.

Whether co-ordinating projects involving government and manufacturers, managing design and production, monitoring quality and reliability standards or other tasks, the professional will gain experience of many contrasting views.

For final year students or recently-qualified graduates we now have vacancies throughout the UK in the following disciplines: Electrical/Electronic, Mechanical and Chemical Engineering.

All these posts offer swift progression to chartered engineering status, opportunities to develop management abilities, and extensive career prospects.

Candidates must have, or obtain in 1985, a degree (preferably with honours) in electronic or electrical engineering, applied physics, computer science, telecommunications, mechanical, production or aeronautical engineering, chemistry or chemical engineering or metallurgy.

Starting salary at least £6915. Up to £1300 higher in London. Promotion prospects to £16,500.

For further details and an application form (to be returned by 8 March 1985) write to Civil Service Commission, Alencon Link, Basingstoke, Hants RG21 1JB, or telephone Basingstoke (0256) 468551 (answering service operates outside office hours). Please quote ref: T(1)919/3.

MINISTRY OF DEFENCE

Control/Application Engineers

Current vacancies exist for Industrial Control Engineers with a thorough knowledge of programmable controllers; micro-processor experience would be an advantage. Ideally, qualified to ONC/HNC/HND level although applicants with intimate knowledge of PLC's from Allen-Bradley, Modicon, Merlin Gerin, IPC, Texas etc. will be considered. A background in electrical/electronic engineering essential.

Software Engineers/ Programmers

We are seeking Software Engineers or Programmers, qualified ideally to graduate level, for work on real time industrial control and automation projects.

Experience should cover DEC systems using RSX and RT11 with knowledge of Pascal-Fortran and Macro 11 a distinct advantage. Familiarity with other computer systems and network protocols between programmable controllers/microprocessor systems would also be useful.

We have a major involvement in the application of computers, graphic equipment, programmable controllers and communication networks to most industrial process control systems. In addition, we have the expertise to handle all facets of control, from conception through to customer acceptance.

Candidates must be dedicated and capable of working independent of supervision both at base and on site.

Salaries are negotiable but will certainly be in excess of current levels. Benefits are appropriate to a company of our standing.

If you feel that you can meet the requirements of these positions, we look forward to hearing from you. Send a c.v. to Peter R. Clark, Haden Automation Systems Limited, P.O. Box 14, 7-12 Tavistock Square, London WC1H 9LZ.

COMPUTERISATION/SYSTEMS DEVELOPMENT MANAGER

Salary negotiable circa £12 – £13,000

Due to increasing demand for management information necessary for our expanding UK and overseas operations, we seek to appoint a person to be responsible for the development of existing and new computer based systems, including design and programming using internal and external specialist assistance where appropriate.

The present multi-user installation consists of a single CPU and 12 terminals, including an on-line link between Great Yarmouth (where the appointment will be based) and Aberdeen. Considerable expansion of this facility is planned with additional remote sites, terminals and storage capacity being needed. A dynamic approach and ability to obtain the required response from other managers, staff and external sources is essential.

Ideally, applicants should be in the age range 25-40 and have an accounting background with a number of years experience in computerised systems development (both hardware and software).

The company is one of the world leaders in the field of energy related inspection services and offers an attractive remuneration package including free life insurance, contributory pension scheme, BUPA and discretionary bonuses. Assistance will be given with relocation expenses where applicable.

PROJECT MANAGER

– CHEMICAL & PHARMACEUTICAL PLANT –

£15,000 – £21,000

Monsanto, one of the world's leading chemical corporations has recently relocated its UK Sales and UK Staff Departments from Central London to new facilities in Basingstoke.

We maintain as part of our European staff functions a small but highly professional Engineering Services Group. To work within this group we require to recruit an experienced graduate engineer, aged 30-45, who must have had a minimum of 3-5 years project management experience within a pharmaceutical manufacturing organisation.

The successful candidate (m/f), who will report to the Engineering Group Consultant, will be responsible for a number of projects currently valued in the range of £3-10 million. Each project is overseen from initial design through installation to commissioning. At all stages both in-house staff and contractors are used and therefore essential personal qualities are the ability to work as part of a team and the authority to control and motivate contractors.

Duties would include quite extensive travelling, mainly on the continent of Europe.

The Company offer excellent conditions of service including progressive salary scales, non-contributory pension and life assurance schemes, our intention being to attract and retain the quality of employee to develop and sustain our position as market leader in the areas in which we operate.

MOTORING — COLIN DRYDEN

Fuelling war at the pumps

WITH petrol poised to break the £2 a gallon barrier in the Budget next month, if not before, its price is a subject very close to all our hearts and wallets. With oil companies claiming that it is too cheap now and should be averaging £1·96 a gallon the law that says what goes up must come down does not apply in this case.

It is difficult to see anything but an ascending spiral of price increases for petrol which makes the motor industry's efforts to improve consumption all the more vital. Petrol is already taxed at the rate of £1·05 per gallon and taxes never come down either.

In the longer term there is also the prospect of lead-free petrol throughout the E E C, by order, from October 1, 1989. According to the oil industry it will cost around £550 million to convert refineries for the production of petrol without the efficiency-improving lead. This raises the octane rating and lubricates the valves and was first used as an additive for the purpose in the 1920s.

However, it is now being blamed as a source of pollution although there are those who say that the link between blood lead levels and pollution from petrol engine exhausts (diesel, incidentally, is lead free) is yet to be proved conclusively.

The amount now in use is 0·40 grammes per litre and will be reduced by the end of the year to 0·15. The average car covering an annual mileage of 9,000 miles consumes about seven ounces of lead, apparently. However, the lead has to come out and if is thought that, at current prices, this could add another 6p to the cost of a gallon. There is not only the extra cost of refining to be considered but more crude oil will be needed to produce the same amount of petrol.

But the extra cost is not the only source of concern for motorists at what is probably the biggest single change since cars no longer had to be preceded by a man with a red flag. At the moment only about one in 10 of cars on the road can run on unleaded petrol, being mainly the Japanese and German ones that can take two-star fuel.

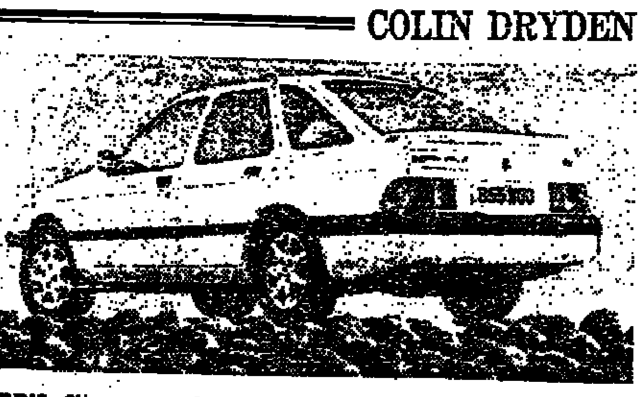
Existing car engines designed to run on 97 octane four-star fuel could be converted and the necessary changes made to the valve seats and ignition timing for about £200. But, as in America, older cars needing leaded fuel will still be allowed while all new ones will have to be built to take the lead-free petrol.

The change, though drastic, is not going to happen overnight from the autumn of 1989. America took the decision to go lead-free 10 years ago but almost half the cars on the roads there still use leaded petrol.

There should be no problem about getting the wrong sort of fuel for your engine. In America, cars taking unleaded fuel have smaller filler pipes.

The next and more expensive nut to crack is the catalytic converter at £300-£400 per car. These are already fitted to exhaust systems in America to reduce nitrogen oxide and carbon monoxide emissions. However, they are useless on cars still running on leaded fuel because the lead poisons the catalysts.

The whole matter is under discussion in the E E C with our Government favouring development of the "lean burn" engine which improves the combustion process, thereby cleaning up the exhaust. Whichever way you look at it motoring gets more expensive all the time.



Sierra XR4x4

FORD'S Sierra may have had its critics as opinions are divided about its shape but there is no denying its fifth place with 115,000 sales at the end of 1984.

The XR4i has always seemed one of the better sporting saloons and quite distinctive with its "biplane" rear wings. These, we were always assured, were essential for smoothing out the airflow and certainly the Sierra has been vulnerable to side winds. But the wings are no more on the new four-wheel-drive version which should be one of the highlights of the Geneva Motor Show which runs from March 7-17.

Up to now Audi have set the pace with 4 x 4, offering it on every car in the range but Ford's Special Engineering Department's system splits the drive from the five-speed manual gearbox to give 66 per cent. of the engine's torque to the rear wheels and 34 per cent. to the front. This compares with Audi's 50-50 split on their road cars and Ford say their rearward drive bias is preferred by most sporting drivers and helps acceleration out of slow corners.

Ford also have viscous coupling limited-slip differentials which prevent wheelspin thus improving traction and road-holding in difficult driving conditions.

This means that there is no need for the driver to engage differential locks manually in treacherous weather because the system does it for him automatically.

For the Sierra, Ford favoured the now almost old fashioned concept of front engine, rear drive because the car was due to take so many different sizes of power unit. This means that the 2792 cc V-6 engine, producing 150 bhp, needs a fairly complicated front drive assembly.

Power-assisted steering is standard on the XR 4 x 4 and has been designed to give a sharp response in slow speed manoeuvring without being oversensitive on the open road. The 4 x 4 also has stiffer springs than the XR4i as well as revised gas-filled damper settings. The rear suspension has also been re-designed and there are new trailing arms to permit the mounting of large diameter disc brakes.

This very interesting new model goes on sale here in May and should cost around the £11,500 mark with anti-lock brakes being available in the autumn. Existing XR4i models, which accounted for about four per cent. of Sierra sales, will continue until stocks run out.

Also available in May is the 2.0iS Sierra with a Bosch electronic fuel injection 2-litre engine developing 115 bhp. Ford claim a maximum speed of 118 mph and a 0-60 mph acceleration time of 9·4 seconds. The new engine management system not only controls idle speed but continually tests itself to detect malfunctions but also diagnoses its own faults.

Toyota's Starlet

NOT ONLY is Toyota Japan's biggest and most successful car manufacturer, it has also long been regarded as the most conservative in design, writes JOHN LANGLEY. Until quite recently, it still had a preponderance of front engine/rear drive models, a situation which did not deter buyers in its main export markets in North America but which had less appeal to European motorists.

All this has been changing over the past two years, following a massive investment in new front-wheel-drive models. The latest, and almost the last to get the front drive/transverse engine treatment is the smallest car in the range, the Starlet which now falls into line with all its major European and Japanese rivals. It goes on sale in Britain from today in just one well-equipped version, the 1-litre GL three-door hatchback, selling at £4,770.

Toyota's other news today is the introduction of a six-year anti-corrosion warranty on all their new cars sold in Britain made possible it is said by what is intriguingly described as "unique corrosion-spurning steel," called Excelite. Hmm . . . And the attractive "people carrier" Space Cruiser now gets a more powerful 87 bhp two-litre engine in place of the previous 78 bhp 1·8-litre power unit, as well as up-rated front suspension, to cut the cornering wallow.

The old rear-drive Starlet was a quietly popular little car with a good re-sale value and excellent fuel economy, for its day. But the new 999 c.c., 12-valve, overhead cam. engine is not only considerably more powerful than the previous push-rod unit (54 bhp against 44 bhp) but substantially more economical, aided by a new five-speed gearbox (and an 88lb reduction in car weight). Official consumption figures (with the previous model's in brackets) are: urban driving cycle 46·3 mpg (39·5 mpg), constant 56 mph 62·8 (46·8), constant 75 mph 44·1 (35·4).

The new body has bigger windows and although it is more than two inches shorter, at just under 12ft 2 inches, has more legroom in the back, as well as more shoulder room front and rear. The Starlet's seats have been re-designed for European weights.

The new Starlet is a more formidable rival not only for the European superminis but the Nissan Micra. I was unable to take figures; the makers claim a maximum of 97 mph, with 0-60 mph in just over 14 seconds.

As with the previous model, it is light and easy to drive. With two up, it was almost too light at times on the motorway. But driven briskly on winding mountain roads, both the ride and handling became much more impressive.

DEPUTY CHIEF POLICE OFFICER
CYPRUS

. . . to be appointed to one of the two Sovereign Base Areas, Dhekelia or Akrotiri, to supervise its day to day policing; to command and superintend the Area Police Force and be responsible for its efficient administration.

The person appointed will be required to adapt to local conditions and be able to understand and work with English speaking Greek and Turkish subordinates. Duties will also include secondment to the other SBA during the absence of the Deputy Chief Police Officer of that Area, and liaison with the Cyprus Police and the British Service Authorities, especially the Service Police.

Candidates, normally aged under 52, must have recent UK civil police experience in the rank of Chief Inspector or above, and should preferably possess a thorough knowledge and experience of investigation and prosecution work. Experience in internal security work and staff training advantageous.

The appointment will be for a period of 3 years initially but may be extended or made permanent.

THE ARTS

MUSIC / Ivo Pogorelich

AS SOON AS Ivo Pogorelich started on his sold-out Barbican recital, I felt torn between the protesting Martha Argerich and her fellow-judges, who barred the young Yugoslav from the finals of Warsaw's Chopin competition in 1980.

True: he only needs to touch the keyboard and one experiences that unique thrill that comes from witnessing great pianism. But, surely, what we first heard might be described as a fantasy on Chopin's C minor Polonaise. The chosen dance form remained veiled except for a few moments after the double bar, when the pompous rhetoric yielded to a delicate rhythmic stance.

Again, in the B-flat minor Sonata, he seemed to proceed from the assumption that ours is no longer an age where Chopin needs to be "performed" in the sense in which "performance" includes "information." Some of it, indeed, was deliberately withheld: for instance, when the additional notes that distinguish the repeat of the cantabile theme from its first statement were played almost inaudibly.

And while the Trio of the Marche Funèbre was of a pure beauty, scorning all espressivo indulgence, in the finale the wind blew across the graveyard with gruesome speed all right, but so over-pedalled that no newcomer could have guessed the notes—chosen, after all, with such inspired ingenuity.

All wilfulness vanished with the advent of Schumann's Toccata, whose fleeting moments of lyricism were the more entrancing for being surrounded by mechanical nimbleness. There followed the climax of the recital, Prokofiev's Five Pieces from "Romeo and Juliet," as well as his Third Sonata. Pogorelich's profound sympathy with that composer's poker-faced poetics inspired landscapes of tone painting that is the preserve of that mysterious instrument, if touched by magical fingers.

Peter Stadlen

Fires of London burn low

THE judge from the meagre audience present for their concert at the Queen Elizabeth Hall on Monday night, the Fires of London seemed to be burning rather low these days. Or perhaps enthusiasts of their founding father, Peter Maxwell Davies, had already made off for Manchester where his Third Symphony had its premiere last night.

As usual his music was prominent in the programme. One work, the brief, gently tonal "Lullabye for Lucy" was having its first London performance. Written to mark the first birth of a child in Rackwick, Hay (where the composer lives), for 32 years it is a sweetly mellifluous piece repeating twice the pleasingly celebratory text by George Mackay Brown. It was beautifully sung by the Music Ensemble Chorus.

In a sense the "Tenebrae super Gesualdo" was also new, as for the first time the motet that is its inspiration formed the interludes between Maxwell Davies's instrumental commentaries on it, and the complete motet was given at the end. This procedure happily emphasised the rapport between the original and the music it spawned.

Two of the composer's shorter pieces, imaginative rearrangements of Purcell, framed the concert, which also included the premier of Richard Emsley's ". . . from swerve of shore to bend of bay . . ." a somewhat desultory, static piece, inspired by James Joyce, which attempts one of those intellectual exercises that may look better on paper than they sound in practice. Howard Williams conducted this precious music, as everything else in the programme, with acute understanding.

The evening's most substantial music was Elliott Carter's "Night Fantasies." The work's complex, dense writing, immensely difficult to perform, offered no problems to Stephen Truslin, who matched the score's unrelenting concentration with his own.

Alan Blyth

Amsterdam Philharmonic, Handley

THE Amsterdam Philharmonic Orchestra, at present touring Great Britain, appeared at the Festival Hall last night in a programme of romantic symphonic music under the direction of Vernon Handley, a conductor with whom they have a close relationship.

It took the orchestra a little time to get into its stride, and there were moments of untidy rhythm in their performance of Wagner's overture, "The Mastersingers," in spite of a general vigour of expression, as well as some suspect intonations.

Warmer and more precise playing prevailed in Dvorak's Cello Concerto, and here they were in support of an exceptional interpretation of the solo part by Moray Welsh, a big-boned performance of powerful, physical and emotional presence, which stretched, relaxed and tightened, so to speak, with the naturalness of a living organism.

Mr Welsh's sonorous tone made possible the boldest rhetorical statements and the concerto's exquisite intimacies, like the train of afterthoughts in the finale's coda, occasioned by the death of the composer's first love, were delivered with a touching poetic honesty. Altogether the reading of freshness in thought and feeling.

The peak of the evening as far as the orchestra was concerned, was reached after the interval with a very fine performance of Rachmaninov's "Symphonic Dances." Mr Handley's rhythmically buoyant tempos and easily breathing sense of phrase and architecture drew much more distinguished playing—the strings especially memorable for their vibrant sonority.

Anthony Payne

JAZZ / Pepper Adams

RECORD COMPANY moguls never seem to be aware of some of the best music in jazz or when it's actually being played. The Bull's Head at Barnes was just such a case on Monday night when that superb American baritone saxophone player, Pepper Adams, took the stage with the British alto saxophonist, Peter King—two men whose disparate styles interlocked with the accuracy of pieces in a jigsaw puzzle.

What a pity it wasn't all recorded, for Adams, whose track record has long been established—a Blue Note veteran if there ever was one—is unlikely to find a more sympathetic stable mate than the mercurial King whose alto provided the soaring foil to Adams's rather lugubrious, earthy tones.

Indeed, King was particularly impressive during "How Deep is the Ocean" when he suddenly took off at finger-breaking speed, launching himself into chorus after chorus of stratospheric playing with Tony Lee's trio careering in hot pursuit.

"Barbados" was an equally heady opportunity to show off highly polished techniques. Adams is, of course, never short of ideas although it must be admitted that the baritone's appeal palls somewhat after a time. The instrument simply doesn't have the thrilling register that the alto saxophone has.

But that is not to gainsay Adams's undoubted skill as both improviser and ideas man and how could he fail anyway with a rhythm section with the latent power of Tony Lee, piano; Spike Heatley, bass, and Bobby Orr on drums to propel him along. But as I say, where were the recording moguls?

Anthony Hopkins

Some notices appeared in yesterday's late editions.

THEATRE / 7·84 Garden of England

"THE Garden of England" at the Shaw claims to tell "a true story" of the miners' strike. It does nothing of the kind, being simply a cheerful, ramshackle series of sketches and songs aimed bluntly at encouraging sympathy for the strikers while expressing a goodhearted English contempt for all enemies and opponents.

Four friends are spending the evening in Ted's (Pip Donaghy) soup-kitchen in the heart of a Kent mining community. Cheeky young Noddy (Derek Thompson) runs the picket line, and thinks his job more important than Ted's, for all his claim to serve 400 meals a day to colliers and their families.

The pair came to blows, but soon join the others in a lusty song "We're the union's flying pickets" (piano, Andy Smith). Nothing much happens then until the end, when police menace the party from outside and they have to muster all their courage before daring to walk peaceably home.

Directed by John Burrows, the production is by John McGrath's well-known 7:84 company, a group who always put across controversial Left-wing views with an admirable conviction combined with a relaxed sense of fun. If Mr Scargill's name was mentioned during the show, I missed it. In fact, the anger and bitterness of many strikers is kept rather too carefully in the background. But the author, Peter Cox, is not out to argue or inflame, only to give some idea of how the dispute has changed peaceful citizens into organised rebels against the forces of law and order.

Photographs showing the Kent countryside and violent encounters on the picket-lines are projected on three screens behind the actors. Strong emphasis is put on the miners' wives who complain they "can't get near the scabs to talk to them, that's where the frustration comes in."

The show does not conceal that some of the men enjoy driving round the country in support of their comrades, and will dread going back to the pits. The best song comes from Eve Bland, about the eerie silence of the surface machinery when the men are not working below.

Some of the material is dreary, such as a long newspaper cutting used to compare Victorian conditions with today's, or the feeble sketch when Miss Bland pretends to be a copper inviting pickets to use polite language. But as a whole the revue gives an unexaggerated picture of dogged, cheerful endurance of a bad time when, as during the war, exceptional hardship bred a stoical camaraderie.

John Barber

ROCK / Phil Collins—after Genesis

THE PHIL Collins solo career proceeds apace while his role as leader of the lumbering Genesis seems to fade into the background. Playing under his own name, as he is for a full six nights at the Albert Hall this week, seems to be more enjoyable for him and is certainly a more dynamic affair.

The difference is the emphasis on sentimental, straight pop songs and Motown and soul pastiches which form the main part of Collins's solo act. Indeed Collins's reverence for soul music seems to have brought about much of his present tremendous success—soul for those who like it played by white men and dilute.

On this occasion, though, Collins had enlisted himself some of the real thing — the four pink-suited, energetic Phoenix Horns, brass section to the masters of large-group soul and funk, Earth, Wind and Fire. And the Phoenix Horns competed manfully as Collins ranged between pop ballad and full-scale swirling pomp rock complete with programmed sound effects, occasionally drowning them altogether.

Supplemented by guitar, bass and a further drummer, Collins made his way from centre stage microphone to a spell on keyboards and the odd attempt to bash hell out of his original instrument, the drums.

The audience, many of whom had not taken the advice of the title of the tour—called No Jacket Required to mark the release of Collins's third solo LP—loved it all. "Sussudio" got a strong response as did the brittle, personal "In the Air Tonight." Perhaps the highest point though came for "Can't Hurry Love" the Supremes song, and two songs written by Curtis Mayfield for the Impressions, "People Get Ready" (seemingly covered by everyone these days) and "It's All Right." Bet the Impressions wish they were making this kind of money.

TELEVISION / What was the name?

LATER THIS YEAR Granada's "Coronation Street" will reach its 25th birthday. If the BBC imitation proves as durable some of the characters introduced last night will still be pottering about Albert Square, London, E.20, and being paid inflation resistant salaries, in the year 2010. This is small comfort to the unluckiest member of Equity, the man who was cast to play Reg Cox.

Poor old Reg was written out of the first episode of EastEnders (B B C-1), before he had uttered his first line. He was found unconscious and mortally ill immediately after the opening credit titles and was then conveyed out of camera range by ambulance. To be recalled through the rest of Gerry Huxham's script as a thoroughly unlikeable man.

As if to add insult to foul play there is no mention of the unknown actor either in Radio Times or the monumental thickness of publicity material for the "long-awaited" twice-weekly serial. In all the feverish months of preparation it seems there was no time to ask his name.

There was a moment of concern the previous evening when the opener of the long-threatened thrice-weekly Wogan (B B C-1) chat show promoted "EastEnders" above even Elton John's latest single and "Dallas." But despite his caring expression and his team of researchers Terry was unable to arrive at a positive identification. The only clue is that Reg may be one of the travelling people, moving about the various soap operas as a habitual corpse.

"He has done this for them before," said Wendy Richard, introduced to Wogan's ecstatic Shepherd's Bush audience as "one of the stars" of "EastEnders." She did not know who he was but she had kept her ears open and "I heard him talking about how he was found before." Usually in a pool of tomato ketchup and an outburst of recrimination no doubt. Poor old Reg.

The serial is built round 23 regulars, multi-racial inheritors of the "Coronation Str . . ." FR, that is the Cockney tradition, denizens of a decaying inner-city area. The Rovers Ret . . . sorry, the Queen Victoria public house is the social centre and here, if we are lucky, we may hear that "my old man liked a drop of the old Vera Lynn" and other jewels of the local rhyming slang.

If this "vibrant, proud and sharply funny" lot are not instantly lovable, rather the contrary, we may be sure they will soften with the passing scripts. None more so than Ena Sharpl . . . I mean Lou Beale, the "Gran" of the Beales, who looks back fondly at the East End of the past and is presently furious because her cheerful daughter and unemployed son-in-law are expecting a baby.

As year-round, twice-weekly "soap operas" go, this is the quality. Though it is the East End recreated at Elstree Studios, it looks right in general and in detail. The characters row as though they mean it. There is a catchy theme tune. Opening director Matthew Robinson ensures that everybody knows what they are doing—that is, building Michael Grade a sorely needed ratings success.

The rest will have to be in brief. Simon Moore's Inside Out (B B C-2) continued on its hybrid way, a kind of mid-atlantic sit-com soap opera, with Lou's team of ex-prisoners catering at a posh wedding reception. Faintly touching and faintly amusing. Barry Davies succeeded to the presenters' chair of Maestro (B B C-2) and opened his innings in sunny manner with the cricketing feats of Sir Garfield Sobers.

Part II of Granada's Television (ITV) gave a potted history of the early days almost as breathless as the impressionistic opener last week. Leslie Woodhead's compilation kept insisting that the pioneers were engaged in a race to be first. This made it the more frustrating that he could not sort out clear winners: He obviously had enough good material, from the early Baird pictures to the Nazi television service in occupied Paris, for 10 programmes.

Sean Day-Lewis

BALLET / Tudor fete in Paris

ALL CREDIT to Rudolf Nureyev, now director of the Paris Opera Ballet, for staging one of the most remarkable ballet festivals of this century: "Hommage à Antony Tudor."

Nureyev had longed to stage this all-Tudor programme from the moment he took over the great old French company. Fortunately he and Tudor are good friends, liking and respecting each other, and although Tudor at first had misgivings about the festival—knowing that his ballets were almost unknown in France, even though well-known elsewhere—Nureyev finally won his approval for a festival of 12 successive performances at the Salle Favart (previously known as the Opera Comique). Together they devised a splendid programme of four masterpieces, each totally different in theme and style, but each showing Tudor's unique musicality and flair for strong expression through highly original dance-images and understatement.

The first night audience was somewhat baffled by the extreme originality of the ballets, so different from anything they had seen before, but Tudor has been deeply influenced by French culture—above all by Proust—and the spectators took to their hearts his very French ballet, "Jardin Aux Lilas," with its moonlit garden party in which a bride, forced into a marriage of convenience, tries to say farewell to her passionate lover, and her cold-hearted bridegroom rejects the attempts of his mistress to induce him to preserve her status, notwithstanding the marriage.

Much helped by the producer Sallie Wilson, working in collaboration with Airi Hynninen, young Yannick Stephant projects admirably the romantic despair of the bride, Caroline, and young Karin Averty, as the cast-off mistress, is no less moving as the unromantic but desperate mistress. This production, in spite of its extreme condensation and complexity of structure—it lasts only 17 minutes, making very subtle use of Chausson's "Poème" for violin and orchestra—is almost flawless.

No less perfect in its own way is "Continuo," one of Tudor's rare forays into abstract music interpretation. The producer Airi Hynninen, trained at the Julliard School in New York, is very familiar with this ballet, created by Tudor as a farewell present to Juilliard, and it is performed with airy lightness and lyricism by six carefully chosen soloists. They make Tudor's very complex choreography counterpoint (set to Pachelbel's famous "Canon") look natural and easy.

"Dark Elegies" represents a landmark in the history of ballet. Indeed, it may claim to be the most challenging of all extant ballets because of its strange, ritualistic style, its intensely original and expressive dance-images, and its marvellously fluid use of Mahler's song-cycle "Kindertotenlieder." When staged by Airi Hynnienen for the Royal Ballet it was a disastrous failure, but Sallie Wilson knows it perfectly—she danced the first solo over a period of 31 years—and the Paris production is masterly.

Almost all the solo roles are well cast, and the artists—including the group dancers—show promise of developing a fine understanding of the austere dance-images, remote from classroom steps. Karin Averty is properly stoical in the first song, Wilfride Piollet, sensitively partnered by Jean Guizerix, looks both stern and helpless in the pas de deux. Olivier Patey brings out well the "buttoned-up" quality of the solo in the third song Isabelle Guérin rises magnificently to the challenge of the very complex solo in the fourth song (though hampered on the opening night by the excessively fast tempo used by the conductor Michael Cals), and all these artists make their movements sing.

Also, the production gains much from the use of the original designs for decors and costumes by Nadia Benois, but the programme details need to be set out in such a way that spectators can make out which artist dances the solo in each song.

"Shadowplay," though staged impeccably by the choreologist June Siddall and the Royal Ballets' balletmaster Christopher Newton, fails to stand comparison with the Royal Ballet's magical production with Anthony Dowell, Merle Park and Derek Rencher taking the leading roles they created for Tudor in 1967. The Paris production also suffers from the unmysterious lighting of John B. Read. Indeed much work needs to be done on the Paris production to bring it up to the high standard of the other three.

Our clients are a long established company and are acknowledged leaders in their field. They manufacture a wide range of incentive, promotional and image building products and have an impressive client base which includes many of the UK's blue-chip companies and local authorities.
They require a personable sales executive, man or woman who, from supplied leads, can carry out a systematic sales programme throughout the City and Greater London area, often working at director level or through publicity departments.
Aged 26-45 you should have at least 'O' levels in English and Maths, and possibly, but not essentially, experience in artwork or design. Whilst the products do not require "hard sell" techniques you will have had experience in sales or customer support activities.
Please phone or send your C.V. to: Roger Hoyle, MECI, 0895 56501 (9 a.m.-9 p.m.).

WAY OF THE WORLD

Health Education

ONE of the most appalling quangos still unaccountably spared by the Conservative Government is the Health Education Council, appalling because it is in a position to do actual harm rather than just emit gaseous verbiage (though it does that as well).

The Responsible Society, a body which does much good in countering the propaganda of the "family planning" industry and the sex industry in general, has produced a video film called "Talking About Love" which emphasises love, romance and the emotional and physical results of early promiscuity.

It is a simple tale of two schoolgirls, one of whom resists the pressure to sleep around and eventually has a traditional "white wedding" to a young man she loves, while the other sleeps around, has an abortion and comes to regret her previous attitude.

You would think no sensible person would object to this fine example of health educational propaganda. But when the Responsible Society asked the Health Education Council for a grant, it raised objections. It agreed to provide a grant if certain scenes, including the church wedding, were removed. The Responsible Society rightly refused to accept a grant involving this kind of censorship.

The Health Education Council wanted them to remove not only the church wedding but also references to the failure rate of the Pill among young girls and the bad emotional effects of premature sex experience. The script, said the Council, risked "putting children off caring sexuality."

Heaven keep children from the Health Education Council's idea of "caring sexuality"! That jargon-word "caring" is an infallible indicator that there is deception lurking somewhere not far off. "Sexuality" is another. In combination they are very unhealthy indeed.

Clive: Fury Flares

By way of the world reporter.

A NEW sense of dread, insidious, paralysing, chilling and extremely worrying, has seized on the borough that is Nerdley today. Rumour the hundred-eyed stalks the wintry streets. Hideous faces seem to peer from every corner and can even be glimpsed beneath the ice of frozen swimming pools and luxurious jacuzzis.

The reason? The reported inauguration among a group of dissident housewives, mostly "breakaways" from the dreaded Our Auntie Garoufalidis Fan Club, of an Our Clive Ponting Fan Club, which will bid fair to become a dangerous "joker-in-the-pack" in the seething cauldron of fear that is Nerdley today.

Wearily fan-club supremo Supt J. B. Harrogate, 42, addressed a hastily summoned Press conference in a hastily erected tent outside his 24-hour, round-the-clock Ops Room, where his hand-picked team manned dizzily flashing electronic wall-maps and advanced scanning equipment.

Inside the tent sniffer dogs strained at the leash, adding an extra dimension of discomfort and urgency to the crisis situation. One dog, Labrador Ruby, 5, which claimed to have discovered "certain substances" on the person of one pressman, had to be dragged away when the Superintendent declared this "irrelevant at this moment in time."

"I'll be frank with you," he said, dishonestly. "This new development has caught us well and truly on the wrong foot. On the face of it, Mr Ponting, 38, seems the last man in the world to attract the stop-at-nothing women that are the raw material for Nerdley fan clubs today.

"But it takes only a single match to ignite the powder keg of violence that is the fan club scene. According to our undercover agents"—he blushed slightly—"there is a rumour that Mr Ponting once met Mrs A. Drones, 49, head of the Anti-Our Christina Fan Club, at a holiday camp, possibly at Bridlington, and had 'certain discussions' about the Belgrano affair.

"Personally," he went on, "I don't believe a word of it. But what does that matter? These women will form fan clubs at the drop of a match. Anything will do. It is their nature. And we are left to pick up the pieces," he added, at a distant rumbling, followed by the sound of crackling flames, lent force to his words.

"Purple alert!" he shouted, as the tent collapsed in a mêlée of pressmen, sniffer dogs and portable word-processors. "One thing is for sure," he said imperturbably. "If there is an Our Clive Fan Club, can an anti-Our Clive Fan Club be far behind? After that, the deluge!" he stated after a pause.

Strike News

THE situation in the small "privatised" Soup Hales coalfield, which was declared "geologically exhausted" five years ago, is still confused, with conflicting claims from the NCB and the NUM.

Stan Underblow, 51, a dedicated miner, still working there single-handed in the only remaining pit, though he brings up very little coal, if coal it can be called, to the surface. Yesterday, when he decided to take a day off to attend a cough-lozenge tasting at the Miners' Institute in Subsidence Road, the area NUM, Mr Reg Underblow, 96, Stan's father, announced triumphantly that the Soup Hales coalfield was "solid" and described this as a "body blow" to Mrs Thatcher and "a slap in the face" for Mr McGregor.

But the NCB announced that there were 340 "new faces" at the pit, a "heartening sign that the magic 50 per cent. of working miners will soon be reached."

What is the reason for this apparent, indeed actual discrepancy? Stan, interviewed at the Institute, streaming with tears and gasping for breath after tasting a "New Grippo" Extra Strong Lozenge, threatened: "If I find any new faces at the pit tomorrow I don't know what I shall do. I don't really. But as a typical close-knit mining community I shall have something to say, I can tell you".

The general belief in this little-known coalfield is that the "340 new faces" are people who have nothing to do with coalmining at all, but have gone down the mine for a bit of cheap publicity. But some elderly ex-miners think they may be kobolds or "knockers of the mine", dwarfish creatures who are believed in the old days to lurk in remote seams, indicating by sinister knocking sounds that it was time for a new 25 per cent. pay claim.

WEST END 'RIP OFF' WARNING

By DAVID GRAVES

SKY-HIGH prices will now be charged for successful West End shows after a ruling by the Restrictive Practices Court, a leading ticket agency claimed last night.

Mr Paul Burns, managing director of Keith Prowse ticket agency, said: "Tourists will now be ripped off in a grand manner and organised crime will most likely get involved."

The Office of Fair Trading, which sought the court ruling on Monday which cleared the way for a free and uncontrolled market for theatre tickets in the West End, said that the price of tickets for unsuccessful productions could now be dramatically reduced.

But Mr Burns and some theatre producers said the move would lead to the introduction of the New York style "scalper" agencies charging highly inflated prices for hit shows.

Organised crime

Mr Burns said: "The situation got so bad in New York where organised crime moved in that the State of New York introduced legislation to limit the price of tickets, which forced the scalpers to New Jersey.

"Now there is no regulation whatsoever in London the rip-off agencies will continue to come out of the wood charging sky-high prices which will give everybody a bad name."

In its ruling the court outlawed agreed levels of discounting and booking charges between the Society of West End Theatre, which covers most West End theatre managements, and bona-fide ticket agencies.

Under the agreement — regarded as a "code of practice" within the theatre industry dating back to 1945—theatre managers could give agencies an average maximum four-per-cent discount.

The agencies could charge a booking fee to the public according to an agreed scale which related to the price of the ticket. But the court ruled the agreement was against the public interest and had to be outlawed.

Freedom for managers

The result, according to the Office of Fair Trading, would give theatre managers a commercial freedom they previously did not enjoy which meant tickets for unsuccessful productions could now be slashed to attract bigger audiences.

But Mr Burns said that theatre managers had always had the freedom to charge reduced prices or tickets could be sold at a 50-per-cent. discount at the Leicester Square ticket bureau.

"As a result of the ruling there are no regulations governing ticket prices in London at all now. This means back-street ticket agencies can spring up and charge what they like."

Ticket prices for hit shows — normally costing £15·50 — will now be sold for as £40, he said.

Primula from Himalayas wins gold

By FRED WHITSEY

HIGH Alpine primulas that in their native Himalayas lie for months under snow but prove defiant in cultivation have won a gold medal for the Edrom nursery firm, Berwick, at the first Westminster flower show of the year, which remains open until 5 p.m. today.

They are primulas of the petiolaris type whose lilac flower heads hug the silvery leaf rosettes. They have been set out in a miniature hillside scene of exceptional realism.

Contrasted with them in the show are named primroses of bright colouring from M. & R. Plants and a large flowered strain also vivid in their many red shades from Rougham Hall.

There are similar contrasts in the many bulbous flowers on show. They range from florists' narcissi like the double white scented Bridal Crown from Jefferson Brown, forced in artificial heat, to the first crocuses from Avon, and the winter hardy cyclamen in selected forms from Broadleigh.

Siberia daphne

A yellow daphne, the kamtschaticum species, from Siberia, excited connoisseurs yesterday when put on show by Starborough, and there was admiration too for an early flowering currant Ribes praecox from Burncoose and Southdown.

Sherrards are featuring willows woth growing for their coloured stems and 'palm" and Four Seasons have an interesting beech in a slender grower with puckered leaves called Cockleshell.

The pine whose leaves turn golden in winter, Pinus sylvestris aurea, comes from Robinsons, and Hilliers are featuring pittosporums with vaiegated foliage. Also for conservatories are a collection of mimosas from Hollington.

Highest accolade

A cool glasshouse plant, Camellia tsaii, with many small white flowers that are strongly scented, shown by Dr J. A. Smart from his garden near Barnstaple, has won Devon, a first class certificate.

The rare white Sternbergia candida won an award of merit when shown by Mrs K. Dryden, the alpine plant expert of Sawbridgeworth, Hertfordshire, who was yesterday invested with the Royal Horticultural Society's highest accoade, the Victoria Medal of Honour.

The medal was also awarded to Mr Louis Russell, a nurseryman of Sunningdale, Berkshire, at the society's annual meeting.

NATIONAL TRUST'S 90th BIRTHDAY

By Our Estates Correspondent

The National Trust celebrated its 90th birthday yesterday with tree-planting ceremonies in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

In London Mr Angus Stirling, the trust's director-general planted a five-year-old oak in the garden of their headquarters overlooking St James' Park.

Obituary

Sir SHULDHAM REDFERN

Sir (Arthur) Shuldham Redfern who has died aged 89, followed service with the Royal Flying Corps and the RAF in the 1914-18 War by political activities in the Sudan. There he was assistant district commissioner in the provinces of Khartoum, Darfur and the Blue Nile Province 1927, assistant civil secretary at Khartoum 1929, Commissioner of Port Sudan 1932 and Governor of Kassala Province 1934.

For 10 years from 1935 he was secretary to the Governor-General of Canada. He was knighted by King George VI on the Royal Train from Truro to Halifax; and was attached to the King during part of the Royal tour of Quebec and Ottawa in 1939. He was appointed a KCVO in 1939 and a CMG in 1945.

When the Earl of Athlone succeeded Lord Tweedsmuir as Governor-General, Sir Shuldham retained his secretarial position. From 1947 to 1951 he was director of the Commonwealth Department of the British Council. Since 1982 he had been president of the English Chamber Orchestra and Music Society.

SEAMUS SWEETMAN

Seamus George Sweetman who has died aged 70, was vice-chairman of Unilever from 1974 to 1978 and a director from 1961. He joined as a management trainee in 1936 after education at Beaumont and St John's College, Cambridge.

In the 1939-45 War he served with the Suffolk Regt and the Buffs with whom he served in Italy before joining the General Staff. He was deputy secretary to Field Marshal Alexander, Supreme Allied Commander, and later to Gen. Sir William Morgan, and was awarded the MBE in 1945.

From 1977 to 1979 he was deputy chairman of the Price Commission and from 1975 a director of the Commonwealth Development Finance Co.

COLIN MacDOUGALL

Deputy Commander Colin MacDougall who has died aged 78, was head of CID units at Scotland Yard from 1960 until he retired in 1966.

He joined the police in 1925 and served in various divisions including the fraud squad and was at one time chief superintendent of the murder squad. He investigated several famous murders including the murder in Germany of Sgt Reginald Watters of which a fellow sergeant, Emmett-Dunne, was found guilty. He was appointed an OBE in 1966.

Blowing hot, to make their names in glass

BY ELIZABETH BENN

THE magical colours and sophisticated designs of British studio glass has drawn it to the attention of a growing number of collectors worldwide, and some of the most sought-after work is being made by women.

The studio glass movement is barely 15 years old in Britain, and it is only in the last couple of years that technical advances and increased skills have enabled artists to produce sufficient quantities of attractive work to make an impact on the market, via specialist galleries and a few department stores.

Considering the physical demands of glass-blowing, which is a hot, sweaty and nerve-racking occupation, it is surprising to discover that at least half the glass artists are women. A piece of decorative blown glass can take at least an hour to make; the artist working with a lump of red-hot, molten glass on the end of a long blowing rod that has to be taken back and forth, many times, between the furnace and the "chair," where it is blown shaped and coloured.

The number of practising glass artists has only increased slowly due to the very high costs of running a furnace, which has to be kept going around the clock, and generally several people share one on a co-operative basis and use it in shifts.

Such an arrangement exists at The Glasshouse in Covent Garden, in London, where the movement began. There three well-known women artists, Catherine Hough, Fleur Tookey and Annette Meech work alongside three male colleagues.

Three other women have started workshops in different parts of the country, which all specialise in hand - made drinking glasses as well as one-off pieces: Pauline Solven at Cowdy Glassworkshop near Gloucester, Dillon Clarke at Midsummer Glassmakers in Cambridge, and Annicka Sandstrom at Lindean Mill Glass in Galashiels, Scotland.

Women also seem to be taking advantage of the degree courses in glass now being run by various art colleges, and when Coleridge, the specialist glass shop in London's Piccadilly, held a selected exhibition of graduate work last summer it included pieces by 20 women and 14 men.

So why does glass appeal to women as an artistic medium? Siddy Langley of The London Glassblowing Workshop in Rotherhithe has no hesitation: "It is a most seductive medium. I tried glass-making at a weekend course and became totally hooked. I couldn't even draw at school and never considered myself at all artistic until I started making glass. I still can't draw, my sketchbook is full of notes, my inspiration comes from the countryside and, being a sub-aqua freak, from the fantastic colours underwater, particularly fish in the Red Sea."

Siddy joined The London Glassblowing Workshop five years ago as apprentice to Peter Layton, who had done a great deal of pioneer work to revive the iridescent glass of the Art Nouveau period. A particularly brilliant blue is a speciality of the workshop and Siddy uses this colour for a "Periwinkle" pattern on vases, bowls and perfume bottles.

Endless patience is required to flatten small dots of molten, coloured glass on to the clear glass she is blowing to get each petal into shape. She is pleased if she makes four vases in a day.

Anna Dickinson, another leading artist who has served an apprenticeship to Peter Layton, is now at the Royal College of Art doing a post-gradnate course. Her immensely fine work with coloured metals fused on glass sells for over £500 and has been collected by museums since she was a student at the Middlesex Polytechnic.

Adam Aaronson of Coleridge said that, as with other leading artists, he cannot get enough of her work to meet the demand as she only makes a few pieces at a time, each taking over a month to complete in order to colour the metals to her satisfaction.

The best place to see a wide selection of studio glass is Coleridge at 192 Piccadilly, London W1, where prices start at around £15 for a paperweight, the more special, larger, pieces being in the £150 to £350 bracket, rising to £2,000.

If collectors need an excuse for indulging in glass they can draw encouragement from the astonishingly high prices realised at a Sotheby's sale of post-war glass, last autumn, when an "Arum Lily" vase designed by Tapio Wirkkala and made by Iittala of Finland fetched £23,100, and another vase designed by Fulvio Bianconi for Venini of Italy made £27,500.

Dan Klein, the 20th-century decorative arts expert whose collection was sold, pointed out that this was not "studio glass" but glass made in factories to the designs of various artists.

The change from artists working in collaboration with factories to them learning to make their own pieces did not really happen until the 1960s, since when glass has, to my mind, become far more spontaneous and appealing.

Paying the price of college cuts

By Betty Yoklavich
IN WASHINGTON

BOTH students and colleges will suffer if the Reagan administration manages to cut education funding by 2 billion dollars as planned.

Without government funds, many students would be unable to finish their courses, or even to begin them, and the smaller colleges, already suffering from diminishing enrolment, would be faced with the financial loss.

Of America's 12 million undergraduates, 5·3 million receive grants or loans; 65 per cent. of graduate scholars working towards professional degrees take out the maximum 5,000 dollars government loan.

College costs have risen so high that it is almost impossible for the average middle-class family to send two children to university at the same time without some sort of financial help.

If parents cannot foot the huge bills, the students themselves face a burden of debt that some are unwilling to shoulder. For example, 89 per cent. of new doctors graduate with an average of 29,000 dollars in student loans.

In a recent poll, "being rich" was found to be one of the main aspirations of America's youth. Being rich quick seems to have even more appeal and some young middle-class Americans are now not so sure that as a doctor, lawyer or veterinarian they would get a worthwhile return on their investment in years of study.

Education administrators say that computer science and engineering are attracting many bright science graduates, as leading to quicker returns. The business world seems full of opportunity to a Bachelor of Arts.

Even the new Secretary of Education, Mr William Bennett, said it might not be a bad idea to give his own son 50,000 dollars to set up a business, if he asked for it, rather than spend the money for four years at Harvard.

Mr Bennett defends the planned financial cutbacks that would leave many students without assistance and suggests the young people cut back on stereos, cars and holidays. His remarks brought angry response from hard-pressed students and education leaders.

Faced with declining enrolment, some smaller American colleges are already having financial difficulties. To add to their woes, undergraduate education in America has been criticised both by The Association of American Colleges and by Mr Bennett.

The colleges respond by pointing out that if money, rather than ability, is to be the determining factor in who goes to college, there is likely to be a decline in standards.

TAKING SOME COLD COMFORT FOR AN OLD WINTER PROBLEM

By Dr K C Hutchin
Daily Telegraph Medical Consultant

EXCEPT for the very young, the old, or those with some other condition, you don't need medical expertise to treat the common cold.

In fact, it has been said that if you treat a cold yourself it may take as long as seven days to get better while if you go to a doctor you should recover in a week.

The best thing you can do with a cold is to keep it to yourself. It is definitely anti-social to take it into public places, including work and rush-hour transport.

The common cold is due to a series of highly-infectious viruses for which there is no specific treatment, so DIY remedies are as likely to be effective as medical treatment. Although it causes a few days of misery, complications in normally fit people are rare, so you can safely cosset your cold in the privacy of your own home.

Many people catch cold because they are not clad warmly enough. This has the effect of lowering their resistance to infection so that the first cold virus they meet, or which could be already lurking in their breathing passages, may multiply in their system.

Although it would be more sensible to wear warm clothing in the first place, as soon as you feel chilled put on your thermal underwear and hope that it is not too late to avert a cold.

The common cold is most infectious before it has fully developed and this is the time to start treatment. As soon as you have that pricking feeling at the back of the nose, feel shivery and just cannot get warm, as if cold water were running down your back, go straight home and start cosseting your cold. Have a hot bath and get straight into a warm bed. Once in bed take a hot lemon drink and two Paracetamols or aspirins.

Making yourself as comfortable as possible is part of the treatment so don't think it is fuddy-duddy to put a shawl round your shoulders. Keep your bedroom warm day and night.

The bed may have been warmed up with an electric blanket but some people prefer to switch it off and comfort themselves with hot water bottles. Two are better than one and three are ideal.

Once comfortably in bed, start telephoning to cancel all your arrangements for the next couple of days.

Bed is the best place so long as you feel shivery. While there, continue with your hot drinks and Paracetamols every four hours. The traditional hot toddy is a useful nightcap. It aids sleep, soothes a sore throat and eases coughs. It makes you feel warmer and encourages perspiration by bringing more blood to the skin and so helps you to "sweat out" the cold.

Following your day in bed stay indoors for one or two days. If you have a blocked nose, and have no nasal drops to shrink your mucous membrane, inhale the steam of boiling water to which menthol, or some preparation containing it, has been added. A painful throat may be relieved by gargling an aspirin dissolved in warm water. Saline gargles using half a teaspoonful of salt in a tumbler of hottish water may also be helpful.

Many people develop a troublesome cough, especially at night, when they have a cold. This may be helped by inhaling Friars balsam before retiring, or by sipping a hot blackcurrant drink. Sucking a strong menthol and eucalyptus cough-sweet may be effective, both in stopping the tickle causing the cough and in clearing the blocked nose.

If your cold is not responding to these measures, or if you develop any complications, you should seek medical advice, as you ALWAYS should for the colds of babies and the very old. No tablets should be taken in pregnancy without asking the doctor if they are safe.

A LIMIT TO POWER

NOBODY EVER LOST MONEY by betting against the serious outcome of highly advertised summit meetings of national leaders. Mrs THATCHER is going to America; she will address Congress which will be very elevating for all concerned but let us please not slip into a drums and trumpets mood about the outcome. Most of the big issues, like defence and the dollar involve contingencies, influences and local pressures which the ablest and most energetic European Prime Minister cannot hope to deflect. We may quietly get a response on an issue which involves us directly like the official American response to Noraid fund raising. But however hard Mrs THATCHER proclaims herself Mr REAGAN's greatest fan, she runs the risk, like any groupie, of getting a signed photograph of the star. This is a reason for starting with modest, grown-up limited expectations.

Nothing is as important as the dollar. High it does harm enough, driving the British into high interest rates for fear of the brutal shock of a 99 cent pound. But suppose the dollar's magic goes away, suppose Mr JAMES BAKER rather than Mr NIGEL LAWSON spends his waking hours chasing a falling currency downstairs with periodic cries of not wholly credible reassurance. If the deficit which has defied expectations so far, just as the deficit of Mexico did, were finally to start the dollar into a high-speed spiral of decline out of control of the United States Treasury the consequences would be worse for us and our neighbours than anything happening so far. A world recession coupled with super-high United States interest rates and the prospects of domestic protection in the States would be unbearable.

The arms and farms lobbies will decide the outcome in battle with their most intelligent critics in Congress, led by Senator DOLE. Mrs THATCHER's hope must be that he and allies within the administration like DAVID STOCKMAN can between them make credible cuts, especially in defence spending. Otherwise we shall gaily wait for the deficit to erupt like Etna. Mrs THATCHER must add her good offices in the inimitable plate-throwing style. But we are people who can only pray at the margin for the wisdom of others. Our expectations of State visits should be geared accordingly.

MR BOTHA'S DIFFICULTIES

VIOLENT EVENTS in the Crossroads squatter camp in Capetown, and the arrest of 13 political activists by the South African Government, lead some people to suppose that the South African Government has made a sudden shift of policy. According to this view, the remarks of President P. W. BOTHA at the opening of the new Parliament some weeks ago presaged an almost overnight dismantling of apartheid. Of course they did not. Rather, they pointed to a new appreciation that urban blacks should have some sort of permanent role within South Africa.

For an Afrikaner President to say as much was a considerable step forward. In time there will be further advances. For all that, the threat of the removal of the squatters at Crossroads (albeit to apparently more agreeable premises) shows that the policies of separate development are still in operation. Equally, the arrest of the 13 United Democratic Front (U D F) activists, six of whom have been detained, is proof that the South African Government has not become soft and sentimental about extra parliamentary opposition. Of course the South African Government knows very well that if it smashes the U D F another group of activists with a new acronym will appear in no time. It has been playing cat and mouse with such people for years—as it has recently playe dcat and mouse with Mr NELSON MANDELA.

None of this means that the South African Government does not want change at its own pace, nor indeed that this pace is not too rapid for many whites. The recent dismissal of charges against the Most Revd. DENIS HURLEY, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Durban, provides an interesting vignette. The Archbishop had fallen foul of the characteristically zealous authorities because he had said that atrocities had been committed by the infamous "Koevoet" unit in northern Namibia. The South African Government at the highest level seems to have taken the more pragmatic view that the Archbishop's allegations were perhaps not so wide of the mark.

FROM LITTLE ACORNS

YESTERDAY THE NATIONAL TRUST celebrated its 90th birthday, fittingly for one of mature years not by doing anything strenuous, but by the symbolic gesture of planting trees. A certain self-satisfaction is understandable. Over the years the National Trust has grown to be the largest private landowner in Britain, and has attracted a membership of 1·2 million active visitors to the stately homes, curious houses, gardens and coastline that the Trust has been instrumental in preserving. Many, this newspaper included, spend time bemoaning the loss of the past: the National Trust remains uniquely successful in the business of preserving it.

Though it is currently fashionable slavishly to venerate the "heritage", it is easy to forget that once this was not so. The National Trust could yet break the gesture of faith between public and donors which holds it together. And the business of preserving the monuments of the past is, for a neutral charity, fraught with problems of an intensely political nature: juggling the demands of egalitarians, heritage buffs and the rising expectations of its own bureaucracy—without access to Government funds.

It is always wise to examine a venerable institution for signs of senility; and in what better light than its present projects? In the Trust's sights at the moment lie Kedleston Hall, the furniture of Nostell Priory—and it lies in the background to plans for Weston Park. It is greatly to be hoped that Kedleston, still in contention with the taxman, may be endowed and given to the Trust. A minor triumph would be if the Chippendale furniture at Nostell Priory was to remain, in the Trust's hands, in the positions in the house it was designed for by THOMAS CHIPPENDALE himself. In most cases the Trust remains the best if not the most economical trustee. But there are now, especially for country houses with active proprietors such as Weston, private trusts which allow an institution to remain much more part of its locality. The Trust should beware of growing too big, or it may not survive the oaks it planted yesterday.

Why a watered-down Secrets Act will probably fail

By W. F. DEEDES

AFTER Ponting, secrecy. It is a safe political bet that before 1985 is out the Government will give Parliament an undertaking to try once again to reform Section 2 of the Official Secrets Act.

Like Sisyphus, the Home Office and the Cabinet Office, blowing dust off the Franks report (1972) and Labour's White Paper, based on Franks (1978), will be preparing to roll this stone uphill once more.

Is it now the right stone? Reading and listening to some of the post-Ponting pundits airily discussing reform, one is moved to wonder how many of them know what Lord Franks and his committee actually proposed.

Studying it again from cover to cover for the first time since we had to do this as members of the departmental committee, I can find precious little joy in its recommendations for the present-day critics of secrecy in Government.

Franks did not abolish criminal sanctions for breaches of official secrecy. His report considerably reduced the big spongy area where since 1911 such sanctions might today apply; and it redefined and hardened the areas where criminal sanctions would still apply.

LET us, by way of example, re-examine a main strand of Franks reform, and test it against the prevailing public mood on secrecy. "Public mood" may be the wrong phrase. I doubt if the general public loses much sleep over Sec. 2. Few would march to Trafalgar Square about it. The insomniacs come mainly from our own world in the news media and heavy campaigners for a Freedom of Information Act. This is a media class issue.

Franks, after all, was not considering a Freedom of Information Act but an Official Information Act. Within its ambit he put defence and internal security; foreign relations; currency and reserves; law and order; Cabinet and its sub-committees; confidences of the citizen and official information used for private gain.

These, said Franks, are not to be plundered with impunity. They are not narrow boundaries. Put all were held to embrace matters where unauthorised disclosure could cause "serious injury to the nation." The new Act would bite where, in respect of these matters, documents had also been classified Secret or (relating to military weapons and equipment) Defence—Confidential.

Officials would be responsible for classifying, under regulations made by the Secretary of State. Before a prosecution, the responsible Minister would have to consider whether at the time of the alleged disclosure the information was properly classified.

If it was, he would so certify to the court. If it was not, there would be no prosecution.

Now it is fair to say that under such a system civil servants (and editors) would be clearer about the boundaries of offence than they are now. But are we to suppose that in relation, say, to the sinking of the Belgrano such a formula would give satisfaction?

What in reality excites those in the business of disclosure is not the soft underbelly of the Official Secrets Act, which Franks sensibly disposed of; but sensitive material which lies on the margin between lawful and unlawful disclosure.

By moving the margin, Franks ostensibly moved from nonsense to common sense. That does not take the margin out of contention — or into the realm of open government.

Since Franks reported, for example, the arrival of American missiles in Europe has become a political issue. How this subject is classified in the Ministry of Defence, or might be classified under the Franks proposals, we cannot tell.

But it embraces three of the areas within which Franks envisaged criminal sanctions — defence, internal security and international relations. Do we suppose for a moment that those campaigning against the siting of these missiles would rest content with the Franks-style Official Information Act, and take care not to publicise matter which (a) bore the mark Defence—Confidential and (b) might be held to "cause serious injury to the nation"?

Recognising that a lot of such material would remain on the margin, Franks proposed a non-statutory committee to give those outside government who might come into possession of official information, particularly the media, guidance on the operation of the classification system.

But as Franks observes elsewhere, "restraint in publication varies from one kind of publication to another." Would those in receipt of Mr Ponting's relevations seek the guidance of such a committee?

Disclosure of matter which could cause serious injury to the nation has increasingly sprung up of late, not from thought of reward, nor from inadvertence, but from an impulse to make a political gesture regardless of the consequences.

Thus any attempt to enact Franks today would be accompanied by very strong pressure to include a saving cause, a plea that publication was in the public interest. Such a clause would shift away from the proposed clarifying of the law, which many declare they want, into the realm of subjective judgment.

There will be even stronger pressure to turn the argument upside down; to declare that what we need is not an Official Information Act but a Freedom of Information Act. The onus, it will be argued, lies on government to prove a need for secrecy. All else should be open.

But even a Freedom of Information Act carries limits. Few of its advocates, who would have us believe that if we moved the way of the United States we would be freer men and better governed, know how it works in practice.

True, a wide range of relatively unimportant material must be disclosed on request. But there are nine exempted categories in America which include: classified defence and foreign relations; certain internal matters; trade secrets; privileged documents between governments; personal files, law enforcement investigations, financial investigations; and geological and geophysical information on oil wells.

Omitting oil, the list has marked similarities to the Franks list. Whichever way it is played, either by an Official Information Act, or a Freedom of Information Act, the Minister stays in a strong position.

It is not decisive because, as we have seen, a jury has the last word at a trial. But it is highly influential; and one clear outcome of the Ponting affair is that those who oppose government secrecy mistrust the discretion of Ministers to determine what is or is not injurious to the nation.

We now know that Sec. 2 of the Official Secrets Act, with what Franks called its "catch-all" character represents a gamble for the Minister as well as the purveyor or discloser of secrets.

IRONICALLY, the jury's verdict on Ponting, widely acclaimed as a defeat for Sec. 2, represented a feather in the cap for Sec. 2. Those who represent reform of the Official Secrets Act, pace Franks, as a blow for freedom, a path towards human enlightenment, need to tone their act down a bit.

But the central issue runs deeper than that. Since Franks there has been most successfully sown fresh seeds of mistrust in those appointed to govern. Proliferating one-issue pressure groups play some part in this. So does a deeply disturbed Opposition. So do parts of the media.

In such a climate reform of outmoded secrecy laws become virtually impossible. Without some bond of trust between those who govern and the governed — who is to be trusted with any secrets?

A Royal Charter for Industrial Society

THERE WILL BE two notable absentees today when the Queen visits the Industrial Society to present a Royal Charter in recognition of its work in promoting better industrial relations.

One will be the Coal Board's chairman, Ian MacGregor, and the other the miners' president, Arthur Scargill. Both their organisations were once members but—perhaps significantly—I am told they are members no longer.

The NUM resigned in a huff when one of the society's directors expressed concern at the union's tactics in the 1974 pit strike. The Coal Board pulled out about two years ago indicating that it did not see much point in continuing one-sided involvement in the organisation.

To mark today's royal event the society has produced a charter which argues that the greatest challenge at work is co-operating with change. Its significance is such that once the present strike is finally over both sides, I understand, are to be invited to rejoin.

Some more from the name mountain. Among the post-war intake of cadets joining the Colonial Service in Northern Rhodesia were a Tooke, Short and Going. And upon her marriage Miss I. Herd, from Essex, became Mrs I. Sawyer.

Unlamented loss

THE DECLINE of the great ports over the past 30 years has, I discover, claimed an unlovely victim. The black rat, the creature that brought plague to Europe, faces extinction in Britain.

While the loss of any other species would lead to concern, the disappearance of this large vicious, disease-laden rodent will cause nothing but pleasure.

According to the newsletter of the Mammal Society the black rat has fallen victim to the general decline in the ports, the arrival of containerisation and better housekeeping in warehouses.

The self-destructive industrial relations in the docks may ironically have helped push the black rat, whose population has always been reinforced by animals brought in by ships, towards extinction.

Long distance

MY NOTE the other day about the shortcomings of the Zimbabwe telephone service has prompted three readers to send me the same cutting from the ZIMBABWE HERALD which indicates that things are worse than imagined.

According to the HERALD, a housewife living in the Harare suburb of Borrowdale dialled her mother in Britain and, against the odds, got through at once. The two marvelled at this and then the housewife lamented that she had been trying in vain to get through to her local butcher in Borrowdale for the past two hours.

Her mother took the butcher's number, called him from England and placed the order. The meat was delivered inside an hour.

Lady be good

TIMES have changed indeed since England's oldest surviving women's magazine, THE LADY, was founded a 100 years ago yesterday by Thomas Bowles, whose family still owns "the journal for gentlewomen." Margot Lawrence wrote about it on this page last Saturday.

THE LADY's beauty tips for young Victorian women, for instance seem a little bizarre nowadays. On swimming: "The head should be completely wetted, otherwise a headache will follow." Obesity a problem? "Try Liquid Extract of Fucus Vesiculosis, a species of seaweed." THE LADY deprecated, however, the practice of improving facial skin with arsenic.

Slope umbrellas

SOBER MILITARY MINDS at the Pentagon have recently been pondering the vexed question of whether it is unmanly for United States soldiers to carry umbrellas. Real men, say the generals, are waterproof and should ignore a bit of discomfort.

The Army Clothing and Equipment Board has now ruled that the Army, Navy and Marine Corps should carry umbrellas in or around the Pentagon on the grounds that they are "intrinsically unmilitary."

But the sensitive soldier may feel it rather unfair that the Pentagon has ruled that women in uniform will still be allowed to carry brollies. But, says the board, it's all a question of an un-American image.

Word mountain

SUPPORTERS of Esperanto, the "international language," are claiming a break-through in persuading the European Parliament—which spends more than half its budget on interpreters' services—to adopt the language for translation purposes.

Every word uttered in the Parliament costs £10 to translate into all the languages of the community, but from 1987 text will be translated by computer into Esperanto and then into the various tongues of the EEC, instead of being laboriously translated from language to language as at present.

Computerisation will save 60 per cent. of the translating costs and may even cause more people than readers of the Norwegian rail time-tables printed, I gather, in Esperanto to learn it.

"Hansard's missing!"

Trusting to luck

THE SYMBOL of the English oak leaf on the National Trust's notepaper was at curious odds yesterday with the planting of a tree at the London headquarters by Angus Stirling, the trust's director general, to celebrate the organisation's 90th birthday.

The frozen ground had been prepared with forethought several weeks ago and after the oak sapling had been duly planted, Stirling admitted with commendable candour that it was not an English oak at all—but a hardy Hungarian variety, much more likely to withstand the close proximity of a number of limes.

I gather that the Royal Shakespeare Company's marathon production of Victor Hugo's "Les Misérables"—due to be mounted at the Barbican later this year—has already acquired a nickname within the company. It is being called "The Glums."

Icy response

ORGANISERS of a charity concert next Tuesday at the Royal Festival Hall to raise funds for a national concert hall in Iceland are concerned that the official guests—who include Vigdis Finnbogadottir, the Icelandic President, and the Prince of Wales—may outnumber the paying subscribers.

Tickets for the concert, given by the Philharmonia Orchestra conducted by Vladimir Ashkenazy with Elisabeth Söderström as soprano soloist, have been going rather badly despite the fact that the programme includes such popular items as Dvorak's New World Symphony and Sibelius' Karelia Suite. Ironically, the icy weather is being blamed for the poor response.

Up and away

A READER tells me that a notice, displayed at a Portsmouth naval station, stated: "WRNS personnel with authorisation for shore leave must show their pink slips on demand."

Hatred campaign is fuelled by media

From Air Vice-Marshal D. C. T. BENNETT

SIR—Forty years ago today the war was far from won. Secret weapons, the Runstedt Officer and many unknown remained potential threats—and the Russian advance on the Eastern front had been held up for many weeks.

The Russians, on that day 40 years ago, asked for help of their Western Allies by bombing two rail marshalling yards — which we did, using two clearly marked aiming points.

Most supplies through Dresden were stopped for seven days, giving the Russians time to attack and break through. (An emergency single line was insignificant!).

As in the earlier bombing raids on London the fire services were unable to cope and many lives were lost (about a quarter of the claimed figure). This was deplorable but the blame, as we all know, rests squarely on Hitler's shoulders.

We won the war against Germany at considerable sacrifice of human lives (British lives). Europe was freed. Today we witness the despicable spectacle of many ungrateful people in this country denouncing us for daring to save their lives and their freedom—for doing our duty.

This denunciation is based on carefully prepared Communist propaganda emanating from East Berlin, and this hatred campaign has been actively supported and fuelled by the media here. It has been orchestrated more skilfully than anything seen since, and many people fall for it.

Bomber Command did not do any "indiscriminate bombing." On Dresden, as elsewhere, the aiming points were marked precisely with ultra-powerful target indicators—the main force then did their best. Incidentally the Pathfinders and Bomber Command carried out two other major targets (Magdeburg and Bohlen) on the same night! All the bomber aircraft received the attention of over 2,000 German night fighters.

The readiness of some people to believe the anti-British Communist "brain washing" of the last few days shakes one's confidence in our fellow-British subjects and the loyalty of some of our media.

Patriots sleep well; traitors do not.

DON BENNETT
Denham, Bucks.

Glib talk about war

SIR—Mr J. L. Whiteley (Feb. 16) has surely missed the point of your leader concerning the Dresden bombing.

No one is suggesting that other than wartime expediency was responsible for the decision to bomb the city, but it is surely possible with hindsight to recognise how "morally and militarily wrong" it was.

At the time, few of us questioned military or other decisions made, any more than Mr Whiteley and his gallant colleagues in Bomber Command did, other than carry out their orders.

What is more worrying is that political leaders today seem not to have learned any lessons from the past. Nuclear war is glibly talked about as "winnable" and the superpowers continue to overproduce nuclear weapons when they should be aiming for their abolition.

I too think that the bombing of Dresden was a tragedy of the greatest magnitude; but then I also believe that the possession of nuclear weapons is obscene.

A. H. EARNEY
London, W.13.

Letters of apology

SIR—When our great country has over three million unemployed and is in serious financial trouble, surely this country's leader and her opposite number can find something more important to argue about in public than the seeking of letters of apology.

It does not to my mind encourage the old or more importantly the younger generation to have much faith in or respect for the country's political leaders.

Cannot someone somewhere speak out and say to them: "'Don't be so petty and childish, get on with the business of trying to run the country'"?

JOHN HEWARD

SIR—If our Navy had not sunk the Belgrano and the Belgrano had later sunk one of our own warships, what then would the Opposition have said?

KATHLEEN J. ASHTON

Museum's dismay on collection

SIR—Mr Denis Mahon is abundantly justified in protesting so emphatically (Feb. 12) at the administration of the statutory provision whereby works of art which are acknowledged to be pre-eminent and which have to be disposed of in order to meet capital transfer tax liabilities can be accepted by the State as a discharge in kind of those liabilities.

All the museums and galleries of the United Kingdom, and this includes the national institutions, have the best of reasons for regarding with the utmost dismay the arbitrary book-keeping clamp-down announced on the acceptance of pre-eminent works of art as payment in kind of capital transfer tax liabilities.

Mr Mahon has himself built up an outstanding collection and has made known to a number of museums and galleries his good intentions towards them, including the National Museum of Wales.

Furthermore Mr Mahon has, over a number of years, made clear his intentions to successive Ministers for the Arts, including the Earl of Gowrie, and has taken care to emphasise that his testamentary provisions depend upon the effective operation of the so-called "acceptance in lieu" system.

We, in Wales, possess an extremely modest collection of Old Master paintings and we are horrified by the prospect of paintings from the Mahon collection being lost to the United Kingdom through the failure of the Treasury to allow the "in lieu" system to function in accordance with the spirit of the legislation by which it was established.

W. A. TWISTON DAVIES

From Lord ANNAN

SIR—I have only just read the admirable letter by Mr Denis Mahon on the plight of the national heritage. For years he has been the leading advocate for more sensible in lieu arrangements, and no wonder he feels so despondent.

The Government resemble Red Indians where the arts are concerned. The gifts in the form of concessions to tax-payers they gave a few years ago with one hand they have now taken back with the other.

I have some sympathy for the Earl of Gowrie who has had to meet an exceptional bill for repairs to museums and galleries, no doubt the legacy of cutting capital programmes during the 1970s. But the arts have suffered not one cut but have been subjected to the Chinese torture of death by 1,000 cuts.

It is for this reason that I have put down a motion in the House of Lords drawing attention to the need for some new initiatives on the part of Government to protect the heritage which, when I have recovered from a tiresome minor injury, I hope to get debated.

ANNAN

A flourishing school

SIR—Mr A. H. Atkins's letter (Feb. 13) on the destruction of grammar schools omitted an important aspect of state education.

I have two daughters who attend one of the few remaining grammar schools—Southend High for Girls. It is alive and flourishing today largely because of the support and encouragement of the parents.

Parents, not politicians, in my view, have allowed our education to deteriorate. Their lack of interest in education is reflected in the numbers of children who attend comprehensive schools who are destined to fail.

Parents fail their children—and promptly blame the system or politicians or teachers. Any scapegoat will do.

Parents, it seems, are more concerned about the pursuit of wealth than their children's education. Switching to private education, if necessary, apparently relieves their conscience.

If my daughters, at some future date, are denied the continuation of their grammar school education, I must look for a similar alternative. Mr Atkins's remarks that without grammar schools opportunities are lost was probably true, and very worrying.

From the Rt Hon. NORMAN ST JOHN-STEVAS M P (Con.)

SIR—Now that the dust has settled—to some extent—on the dispute over Oxford's decision not to grant the Prime Minister an honorary degree perhaps some eirenic comment on the whole sorry affair would not be entirely out of place.

As a graduate of both Oxford and Cambridge, as a Minister who had differences over economic and unemployment policy with Mrs Thatcher of a nature which led to my leaving both the Cabinet and the Government, and at the same time as one who believes that Mrs Thatcher should have been awarded an honorary degree by her old university because of the high office she has achieved, my position is one of reasonable detachment.

Oxford's decision was a finely balanced one and the balance swung down on the wrong side, but it was one which the university was fully entitled to take in freedom and in no way justifies the vials of wrath, indignation and vituperation which have been poured over her head by leader writers, letter writers, article writers and others.

A good example of this type of belles lettres appeared in your own distinguished columns under the name of Max Beloff. I fought side by side with Lord Beloff to preserve our independent, grammar and direct grant schools and valued the zealous judgment which now appears to have deserted him.

As a pyrotechnic piece of polemic his contribution has much to be said for it but as an accurate or helpful analysis of the matter it must score low marks indeed.

I have known Prof. Pulzer, at whom Lord Beloff takes a side swipe, since he was an undergraduate and he retains his early flair and brilliance. Compared with those predecessors in the Gladstone chair whom Lord Beloff holds up as cynosures he shines like a good deed in a naughty world.

And what can one make of the wholly otiose and slighting reference to Sir Kenneth Dover, one of the most distinguished classical scholars in the country, made merely on the grounds that he happens to take a different view from Lord Beloff? The natural scientists are flayed for taking "no part in the university's affairs." Has Lord Beloff never heard of Sir Rex Richards, one of the outstanding Vice-Chancellors of recent years?

Lord Beloff's universals are as weak as his particulars. There was no Communist Marxist plot for the very good reason there are not enough Marxist dons in Oxford to carry it out. Lord Beloff has confused the 1980s with the 1950s. Of the 2,000 members of the Congregation less than 10 can be identified as being of that persuasion.

No, Sir, there was no conspiracy but an unhappy mélange of good intentions, bad timing and baleful cosmic events. The Hebdomadal Council, along with everyone else in Britain, was impressed and moved by Mrs Thatcher's courage and resilience after the Brighton bomb explosion.

Old rancours about overseas student fees were exorcised by her bravery and the Council moved to confer the honour. Had Congregation been able to vote at that time the degree would undoubtedly have been granted. But Oxford procedures like those of Rome are slow and unhappily the new controversy of charging for tuition fees, then resiling from the position in view of Tory back bench opposition, and above all recouping the financial loss from the science budget erupted before the vote could be taken. So resentment destroyed goodwill.

I believe it is important to put the record straight, for Oxford has vexed a number of people and a feud between the university and Downing Street can be to the benefit of neither. What then can be done?

The road to the honorary degree is blocked and likely to remain so until the Prime Minister has left office. Then it will be a different matter. But Oxford has distinctions to confer other than those of honorary degrees.

How beneficial it would be if some other signal honour were now to be offered. I feel sure that magnanimity would be matched by magnanimity.

Meanwhile let the denigration of the university cease. Great nations only fail when they cease to comprehend the institutions which they themselves have created.

NORMAN ST JOHN-STEVAS
House of Commons.

Sutherland's castle to be Highlands holiday complex

By ROBERT BEDLOW Estates Correspondent

THE Countess of Sutherland yesterday defended the decision by the Sutherland Trust to allow Dunrobin Castle, the most northerly of Scotland's great houses, to become a holiday complex.

She revealed that the castle, home of the Earls of Sutherland since the 14th century, was in danger of a long-term threat of deterioration.

The countess spoke as a Swiss-based property group, Hapimag Club, announced a £7 million plan involving most of the castle.

The complex will also include a 20-acre site for a "period" village of 150 cottages. The scheme will take about three years to complete.

The countess refused to reveal the amount of money paid for the Sutherland Trust's participation in the development.

She said: "Any capital they pay us will go into the trust and of course income will be tax free. And of course the place will be heated. At the moment all we have is a wood stove."

County's life-line

The Sutherlands have about 100,000 acres now but at one time the family owned almost the whole of the county of 1·5 million acres. The 3rd Duke was the largest landowner in Western Europe.

The development by Hapimag is seen not only as a life-line for the castle, and the fortunes of the Sutherlands, but for the whole county as a whole.

The countess said the decision would not only mean Dunrobin's future being underwritten, but it would bring much needed employment to the area. "This venture, which will not put millions of pounds into our pocket, will provide much needed jobs."

Lord Strathnaveer, the countess's son said the castle, which attracts more than 30,000 visitors each year will not be closed during alterations.

He commented: "We are delighted that the introduction effected by the Highlands and Islands Development Board between us and Hapimag has given us the opportunity to co-operate in a first class leisure company which will be of tremendous benefit to this unique part of Scotland."

Shooting safe

The countess stressed that the shooting and fishing rights had not been sold to the company.

It had also been made clear in two years of negotiations, which produced a 4½ inch thick legal document, that certain rights of way were still the Sutherland domain, but open to visitors.

She said every step had been taken to protect the environment of what is described as "the last wilderness" with only 12,000 people living in the country.

And added: "We have every faith in the way in which the complex will be developed.

"Most important is that Dunrobin will be preserved. It has taken a great deal of money to maintain it and every year there has been about £15,000 loss in receipts from people visiting the castle."

The castle and its estates were bequeathed to the countess by her uncle, the 5th Duke, on his death in 1963.

It is the first British centre for the Swiss group which has 1,500 flats, chalets, hotels and other leisure facilities, valued at £50 million, in 11 European countries.

The group believes the complex will attract 10,000 visitors a year, mainly from Western Europe, which could bring £100 million to Scotland over the next 20 years.

Mr D. J. McPherson, chairman of the Highland Regional Council said that funds for the infrastructure of the complex were in hand and the development would be given "every assistance."

CROSSMAGLEN CLUB WINS £150,000 AWARD

A Gaelic football club in the IRA stronghold of Crossmaglen, South Armagh, is to get £150,000 damages because of disruption caused by Army helicopters and lorries using it to bring men to the police station.

The Ulster Office settled out of court in a case at South Down. The club's trustees claimed compensation for damage to the St Oliver Plunket ground, loss of use of the playing pitch, loss of capital development and revenue because of army activity since October 1971.

The court heard that after the pitch was requisitioned under the Emergency Provisions Act, helicopters frequently landed on the pitch — once when a match was going on.

ICE FLOE WARNING

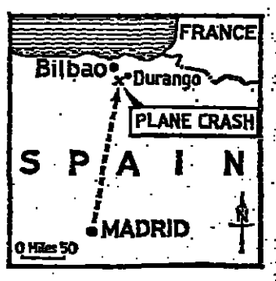
Coastguards are warning boat owners on the Blackwater, Essex, to beware ice floes, some of which are described as mini-icebergs of 15ft long by 5ft deep.

Rescue workers sifting through the scattered wreckage of the Iberia Airlines Boeing 727 which crashed just before landing at Bilbao yesterday, killing everyone on board.

Crash plane was heading for 'unpopular' airport

By TIM BROWN in Madrid

WEATHER conditions must have been approaching minimum for the approach to Bilbao of the Boeing 727 airliner that hit aerials before plunging into a mountainside yesterday.



Pilots do not like Bilbao's Sondica airport because of frequent bad weather and the high terrain.

Many flights are either cancelled or diverted to Vitoria, the Basque capital, some 40 miles to the south.

The estimate of weather conditions at the time of the crash was given last night. The Boeing was an Iberia Airlines plane.

But if there is any hint of bad weather about, pilots normally clear the mountains by many thousands of feet and head out into the Bay of Biscay to circle and make the approach to land from the sea.

'Some fog around'

The Mayor of Marquins, a small town down the valley from the crash scene, said: "When the accident happened there was some fog around. We heard the crash and immediately called up the Civil Guard.

"The scene of the accident is well away from the road, and rescuers are having to scramble through pine trees and then scrub the rock for well over a kilometre or so."

The Civil Gaurd commander in charge of rescue operations said: "We have 300 men up there and five helicopters. The nearest road is a kilometre away, and everything is knee-deep in mud.

"It is just possible that someone was still alive after the initial impact, but no one could have survived after the explosions that set fire to what remained of the aircraft."

Businessmen were jostling to check in at Madrid's Barajas airport for the 8.30 a.m. flight to Bilbao.

The airline named 141 passengers who had got aboard with confirmed bookings and nine others who had managed to board the ill-fated flight at the last minute because 13 people had not shown up by boarding time.

Iberia said that visibility at Bilbao was some two miles and could give no immediate explanation for the disaster. There was swirling mist in the valleys, but well below the plane's normal altitude.

PRINCESS MISSES A MEETING

By JENNY SHIELDS in Calcutta

IT is said that you can stop any taxi driver in Calcutta and he will know where to take you to see Mother Teresa, such is the legend of the woman in this sprawling city on the banks of the Hoogly River.

But yesterday, as Princess Anne arrived at the start of her nine-day visit to India, all they knew was that she had gone.

So today's meeting between two women who work so tirelessly to help the most disadvantaged will not take place. Mother Teresa, the Albanian nun who was the Nobel Peace Prize laureate of 1979, is in Australia.

Yesterday, at the Sisters of Charity Mission, Sister Frederick said they had not been told the date of the Princess's visit, while Buckingham Palace officials papered over their disappointment, saying that Mother Teresa was often away on foreign fund-raising trips.

Princess Anne arrived at lunchtime after the 12-hour flight from London. As she stepped from the British Airways Tristar she was greeted by Sir Robert Wade Gery, British High Commissioner.

This morning the Princess begins her heavy schedule of engagements which will take her into the city's notorious slums to see at first hand the relief work.

Museum to launch 'Save Palmer' appeal

By KEITH NURSE Arts Correspondent

AN appeal to raise funds to prevent the export abroad of a £200,000 watercolour by the 19th century artist, Samuel Palmer, is expected to be launched today by the British Museum.

The appeal is believed to be the first by the museum for at least 50 years and, significantly, comes at a time when the Government is cutting back on the purchase grant allocations for the national museums and galleries.

The Earl of Gowrie, Arts Minister, announced in November a five month export licence stop on the picture.

In common with the "commercial confidentiality" code covering such deals, the identities of the seller and buyer have have not been disclosed.

CERAMIC SUCCESS £107,000 for 180 lots

ALISON BECKETT, ART SALES CORRESPONDENT, writes: Christie's auction of contemporary ceramics, of which they have been a major pioneer, proved a remarkable success in London yesterday when about 180 lots totalled £107,460.

Prices overall were high, the only disappointment being the expected star of the auction, a Hans Coper mural estimated at £30,000-£40,000, which failed to attract a bid above £23,000 and remained unsold.

However, Christie's were optimistic of its private sale, possibly to an institution, and the rest of Coper's work was in enormous demand. The most expensive piece was his eighteins high stoneware cup-shaped vase, 1968, at £4,000.

A white rice bowl in the form of a cone seven inches in diameter with a bronze rim was the best lot in a group by Lucie Rie who is now 82 and still potting. She made it barely five years ago and it fetched £2,800.

Bernard Leach was back in favour again following the fakes scare over some pots made in prison and his 1970 "pilgrim" dish also realised £2,800.

Prices do not include buyer's premium which is eight per cent.

Scientists testing a tin of war issue corned beef have found that it has more meat and less fat than today's product and the 1939 corned beef is still edible.

LIFT-OFF FOR UNLIT CIGARETTE

By IAN BALL in New York

A CIGARETTE which is not lit, but which gives the user the "lift" smokers expect from nicotine will be on sale in America this summer.

In place of tobacco, they contain nicotine-soaked filters.

One advantage being stressed by the developers, Advanced Tobacco Products Inc. of San Antonio, Texas, is that the cigarettes may be used in any of the growing number of public places where smoking is prohibited.

According to a report in the WALL STREET JOURNAL, no one is claiming that the smokeless cigarette—to be sold under the brand name Favor—is good for one's lungs.

But the makers said they do not expect to have to carry on their packets in the United States the Surgeon General's warning about the health hazards of tobacco cigarettes even though just one of their fake smokes contains the nicotine of five ordinary cigarettes.

Their market research suggests there is a demand for a smokeless cigarette. Some 74 per cent of smokers surveyed said they were "very likely" or "somewhat likely" to purchase a cigarette with nicotine-soaked filters.

Fortunes vary for two machine heart patients

By IAN BALL in New York

THERE was mixed news yesterday from the medical centre in Louisville, Kentucky, where the second and third recipients of artificial hearts are being treated.

Mr William Schroeder, 53, who received a plastic-and-titanium heart on Nov. 25, was described as "discouraged" and fever-plagued.

Dr Allan Lansing, a spokesman for Humana Hospital, Audubon, said that Mr Schroeder might never be well enough to leave the hospital. The cause of his fever continues to baffle his doctors.

But Dr Lansing said that Mr Murray Haydon, 58, a former car worker who received an artificial heart at the week-end, is adapting superbly to his body's new regimen.

The artificial heart is beating 60 times a minute and pumping 3·5 litres of blood a minute. That was a considerable improvement over the 1·2-litre output produced by Mr Haydon's diseased heart.

Mr Haydon began his third day with an artificial heart by asking a nurse to turn on a television news programme. "I'd like to see if I'm alive and how I'm doing," he quipped.

The previous day, the patient could only mumble "yes" and "no" after a respirator had been removed from his irritated throat.

Over the last decade, UK firms have attempted to improve their financial return on the increasing cost of energy — by seeking out and eliminating wastage wherever possible.

Good lighting is essential for safety, comfort and productivity but need no longer be as expensive.

Now, THORN EMI Lighting have developed a range of lighting products that can reduce energy consumption in industry and the home by as much as 79%.

The ultimate replacement to the traditional light bulb is the revolutionary new THORN EMI 2D. It's British, it's BSI approved and is 300% more efficient in its consumption of electricity, with five times the lifespan.

But don't take our word for it, look at the returns some of our customers have made.

At Edinburgh University, for example, a 2D replacement programme showed a net saving of £6,000 in the first year, and subsequent annual savings of £13,500. From a banker's point of view, that's like investing money at an annual rate of over 120%.

A figure your accountant will find highly illuminating.

If you would like to know more about our complete range of energy efficient lighting, or simply want to find your nearest THORN EMI 2D stockist, call Teledata on 01-200 0200.

UNCERTAINTIES about the course of sterling continued to overshadow London stock markets yesterday, but there was a school of thought that Mrs Thatcher's forthcoming meeting with President Reagan would see her pressing the President to take some action to reduce the strength of the dollar.

Despite this reasoning, there was some solid support for internationally-known stocks which prompted notable response in share values. Imperial Chemical Industries were well to the fore and closed 23 higher at 862p, with buyers again hopeful about the second quarterly figures, due to be announced tomorrow week.

Glaxo were also prominent on prospects for Japanese sales of the drug, Zantac, and the shares ended $^3/_{16}$ higher at £11$^{13}/_{16}$. With other leaders improving in sympathy, the main market indices quickly recovered early small losses; the "30" index ended 7 higher at 977·5 and the "100" index 7·2 better at 1275·9.

Continued support after the official close brought renewed strength in Beecham Group, 14 higher at 365p, and Hawker Siddeley, 12 to the good at 437p, while Imperial Group enjoyed a new flurry of investment demand and advanced to 206p before closing 6 better at 203p. Following Monday's bout of profit-taking, Jaguar quickly recovered their poise and ended 12 higher at 332p.

Other leading lights to make headway included British Aerospace, at 370p, Lucas Industries, at 253p, Bowater, at 246p, B O C Group, at 302p, and G K N, at 207p, while B T R ended 12 higher at 644p. Dunlop were quiet and a shade easier at 44 p.

Government securities had a mixed session. The longer end of the market sustained falls extending to around £$^3/_8$ in early business, but with Mrs Thatcher winging her way across the Atlantic and sterling hardening towards the close, the market enjoyed a rallying movement. The printed lists showed little alteration, but late values were £$^1/_8$ to £$^1/_4$ firmer.

On the takeover front, the late news of 600 Group's offer for F Pratt left the latter's shares 28 higher at 77p, while 600 themselves closed $1^1/_2$ better at $90^1/_2$p. Awaiting the outcome of talks with Fleet Holdings, Aitken Hume were subjected to profit-taking and reacted 10 to 185p, while Initial fell 15 to 535p on second thoughts concerning the likelihood of Monopolies Commission clearance for a BET bid.

News of the appointment of a receiver to a subsidiary company had a very depressing effect on Henry Boot, which plummeted to 265p before closing 43 down at 272p. Sellers again held the stage in Lex Service Group, recently the subject of a profits downgrading by a firm of stockbrokers, and the shares fell 15 more to a low of 225p, compared with their 1984-85 high of 436p.

Demand in a thin market left J Waddington 30 higher at 560p, while similar tight dealing conditions accentuated gains in Oriflame, 15 up at 665p, and Inchcape, 11 better at 446p. Low & Bonar gained 8 to 308p on new orders worth £2·8 million, while good interim figures prompted interest in Cope Allman, 7 firmer at 153p.

Monday's newcomer, Osborne & Little, remained in the limelight and ended 15 higher at 218p, after 220p, compared with the placing price of 125p.

Renewed takeover speculation accompanied support for Appleyard, 7 up at 53p, Yorkshire Chemical, 3 firmer at 79p, Delta Group, 6 higher at 120p, and Davy Corporation, 5 better at 95p.

Ecobric, which advanced 10p on Monday in response to Press comment, gained 10 more to 43p on follow-through buying activity. Hopes in connection with the company's work bench computer left Micro Focus Group 35 higher at 845p, after 860p.

The forthcoming rights issue continued to restrain interest in Standard Telephone and Cables, which slipped 4 to a low of 186p. Sellers also held the stage in International Signal, 7 off at 268p, and Resource Technology, 5 down at 29p, but Kode International, whose results are due on March 28, gained 10 to 180p. Yield considerations prompted sudden interest in Northern Engineering Industries and the shares rose 5 to 85p.

There was little activity in the property share section and prices moved narrowly. However, dealers gave a "satisfactory" judgment on the interim figures from Peachey, which improved 2 to 246p.

Life insurance issues lost further ground at the opening on continued worries about possible tax changes in the Budget on March 19, but the market subsequently staged a strong rally as buyers came to take advantage of the cheaper levels. Legal & General finished 10 higher at 595p, after 575p. London & Manchester 15 up at 669p, after 642p, Pearl, £$^5/_{14}$ better at £11$^5/_8$, and Prudential, 7 firmer at 528p, after 515p. Composite issues also rallied from a dull start.

Booker McConnell lost 8 to 246p as some holders sold in the market ahead of the outcome of the Dee Corporation offer. A similar situation existed in Pauls, 10 off at 335p, pending new developments in the Harrisons & Crosfield bid situation. United Biscuits reacted 8 to 214p as bid speculators took profits, but another old takeover favourite, Rowntree Mackintosh rose 5 to 375p.

There was a fairly good two-way business in the shares of Manchester Ship Canal, which recovered to 311p before closing at 306p, a gain of 5p. Tootal attracted renewed interest, $2^1/_2$ better at 74p, as some speculators again talked of a possible British counter-offer to the one from Entrad of Australia.

Leading stores shares were in the doldrums, with prices tending easier in the absence of investment interest. British Home slipped to 241p, Burton Group to 412p, Debenhams to 208p, Great Universal A to 675p, and Woolworth to 576p. Against the trend, Lincroft Kilgour rose 6 to 165p and Combined English 3 to 104p, both reflecting vague talk of "possible developments."

After a slow start, leading oil shares took a turn for the better and final prices were usually the best of the day. British Petroleum were 5 up at 570p, Britoil 7 higher at 220p, and "Shell" Transport 8 to the good at 785p. Tricentrol, at 200p, were ex rights to the new 11 p.c. Loan stock, which opened at £14$^3/_4$ premium and closed at £15$^3/_4$ premium. Falcon Resources ended unchanged at 420p, after extremes of 414p and 427p.

Gold shares went easier in sympathy with bullion, which closed $1·75 lower at $302·75. Among platinums, Impala reacted £$^7/_8$ to £10$^7/_8$ on the disappointing figures.

Tailpiece

THE shares of Scotland's largest Ford main dealers, Alexanders Holdings, last mentioned here at the equivalent of 9p in March 1983, have remained in the doldrums as the company has struggled to improve results against a background of persistent trading difficulties.

However, Monday's results indicated that there is cause for a more optimistic view of the group's affairs. The group moved into profit in the second half, which resulted in a reduction in the full year's pre-tax losses to £165,000, against £214,000. The accompanying statement intimated that the company would return to profit in its next financial year and, in the meantime, shareholders will receive a one-for-ten scrip issue.

Yesterday, the market was taking the view that the shares offer recovery possibilities, hence a rise of $2^1/_4$p to $9^1/_2$p. Those who have been patient through the bad times should stay put.

Acorn close to rescue

THE RESCUE package for Acorn Computers is on the verge of completion. A high level team from Olivetti's headquarters in Ivrea, northern Italy, has been in London to discuss details of a scheme to keep the manufacturer of the BBC and Electron computers in business.

The shares have been suspended since Feb. 6 and over the past two weeks Acorn has been closeted with its new merchant bank, Close Brothers, brought in to replace Lazards.

Any scheme is bound to dilute substantially the holdings of the two founders, Hermann Hauser and Christopher Curry.

Peachey interim up

PEACHEY Property Corporation is lifting its interim dividend from 2·5p to 3 a share, payable April 29. The move follows a surge in pre-tax profits from £3·04m to £4·85m before tax.

Cope tops £6m

COPE Allman International, the packaging, amusement machines and engineering group, continued its recovery in the opening half of 1984-85 pushing pre-tax profits on from £3·28m to a £6·34m peak.

The interim dividend is going up 35 p.c. to 2·7p on July 1, and with the board encouraged by the prospects for the remainder of the year, a similar increase in the final is envisaged, indicating a possible 5·7375p (4·25p) total for the year.

OK Tedi hopes

PAPUA New Guinea's Minerals and Energy Minister, Francis Pusal, said yesterday that he remained hopeful that the dispute between Papua New Guinea and the corporate shareholders in the troubled OK Tedi gold and copper project will be settled. He described talks yesterday between PNG officials and OK Tedi Mining as productive and positive.

German growth

THE West German economy continued to show strong growth at the turn of the year and a sharp rise in January unemployment should not be interpreted as a halt in the recovery, says the Bundesbank.

The West German central bank says in its latest monthly report that the economy is still benefiting from strong exports and a growing domestic demand

Major banks agree to back an ombudsman

By ANNE SEGALL

BRITAIN'S big banks yesterday announced the creation of a banking ombudsman to deal with customer complaints and if necessary make awards of up to £50,000.

The statement comes at a time of mounting competition between banks and building societies. Banks are known to be concerned over the reaction of customers to the introduction of composite rate tax in April.

Banks believe the appointment of an ombudsman will boost their public image, especially as building societies have no equivalent. But they also see it as a response to a genuine customer need.

The decision to appoint an ombudsman is in line with the recommendation made by the National Consumer Council in a special report on banking services in December 1983.

The council found that bank customers were generally satisfied with the service provided by their banks, but one in four saw the need for an independent body to resolve disputes.

The banks said yesterday that the ombudsman will not start operations until early next year and that only complaints arising after his appointment — probably in the autumn — will be heard.

The choice of an ombudsman will be made by a council consisting largely of independent members, representing consumer, academic and professional interests. The most likely choice is a lawyer.

Although banks will be paying for the scheme they are making sure that the ombudsman remains genuinely independent. The cost of the ombudsman will be shared by banks in relation to the size of their personal business.

Seventeen major banks have co-operated in the establishment of an ombudsman, including all the London, Scottish and Irish clearers. Once the scheme is operational, any of the 300 "recognised" banks in London will be free to join.

The ombudsman will only deal with complaints from the banks' personal customers; between them, the founding banks have roughly 33 million customers.

Business customers must go to law if they have a complaint against a bank. This option is also open to those personal customers who dislike the verdict of the ombudsman.

To reduce frivolous complaints, banks are insisting that customers first exhaust the banks' own internal procedures before calling on the ombudsman, but a customer will be free to write to him whenever he likes.

A key problem has been deciding which of the many banking services should be covered by the ombudsman. The banks have agreed to include all personal services provided directly through their branches, for example executor, trustee and taxation services, as well as loans, credit cards, insurance and investment services.

The banks admitted that the decision to allow the ombudsman the power to make awards of up to 50,000 was a compromise, with some banks arguing for an upper limit of £100,000.

According to one estimate, the number of customers feeling sufficiently aggrieved to write to the head office of a bank is probably around 5,000 a year. Of those, less than half turn out to merit serious attention.

Sir Timothy Bevan, chairman of Barclays and of the Committee of London Clearing Banks which researched the need for an ombudsman, said yesterday: "We are confident that the ombudsman will come to play a useful role in the banking scene."

Manufacturing upturn boosts GDP figures

By ROLAND GRIBBEN

THE economy grew by 2·5 p.c. last year despite the coal strike and came close to meeting the Government's pre-dispute forecast of 3 p.c. growth.

The strike is estimated to have reduced growth by 1 to 1·25 p.c., according to provisional gross domestic product figures from the Central Statistical Office yesterday.

A better-than-expected outturn has been helped by revisions to manufacturing industry output which rose by almost 3·5 p.c. last year, the best performance for a decade.

Between the third and fourth quarters the economy is provisionally estimated to have grown by 1 p.c. with the production and services industries showing a 1 p.c. improvement and distribution alone a 1·5 p.c. increase.

The way the coal strike has clipped growth is shown by a breakdown of the quarterly effect. The dispute is estimated to have reduced growth by 0·5 p.c. in the first quarter when the strike started, rising to between 1·25 and 1·5 p.c. a quarter over the rest of the year.

Coal normally accounts for 1·5 p.c. of the domestic product and most of the output loss reflects the slump in coal production. The effects on other parts of the economy have been limited.

Mr Lawson, Chancellor, will take comfort from the manufacturing and domestic product figures in the Budget build-up. They provide further historical confirmation that the expected downturn in the economy at the tail end of the year did not materialise.

There are uncertainties about the recovery trend this year because of the jump in interest rates and the way the miners' strike has dragged on. The Treasury had been working on the assumption that the strike would end in December and that the economy would grow by another 3 p.c. this year with the bounce-back from the strike accounting for 1 p.c.

The Confederation of British Industry is predicting an upsurge in exports because of sterling weakness, but is warning that a prolonged bout of high interest rates will put continued growth at risk.

Strike hits Yorkshire Bank

YORKSHIRE Bank, the fast-growing Leeds-based clearer, yesterday counted the cost of the miners' strike with a £2·2 million fall to £34·4 million in taxable profits for 1984.

The decline is more than accounted for by the impact of overdue loans to miners.

Graham Sunderland, general manager, put the total cost of the strike so far at £2·5 million. He hoped most of that money would eventually be recovered, but admitted that £500,000 "had gone forever."

This reflects the fact that Yorkshire will not charge miners extra interest for the delay in repaying instalment loans. In effect, this means they have had interest-free credit for the duration of the strike.

Yorkshire, which has been particularly successful in attracting customers among skilled and unskilled workers, has a total of £10 million on loan to 10,000 miners. Most of that money is now overdue.

The bank has made a provision of £700,000 against overdue miners' accounts. Apart from provisions, Yorkshire has had to defer roughly £1·75 million owed in interest by miners.

Total assets increased by 15·2 p.c. to £1·53 billion in 1984 and the bank opened 230,000 new current accounts.

Yorkshire is owned by the major London clearers excluding Midland. The dividend to shareholders is being increased from £4·2 million to £4·65 million.

U.S. corporate profits hold up

By JAMES SRODES in Washington

AMERICA'S corporations managed to scrape out a profit gain at the end of 1984 and the housing industry roared back to life in January, economic reports released yesterday showed.

Wall Street investors had expected corporate profits to slump during 1984's fourth quarter, given the slow pace of overall economy, but a WALL STREET JOURNAL survey showed that profits actually increased slightly in the October-December period.

The survey of 530 corporations reported that net earnings from continuing operations rose 3 p.c. from a year earlier and overall profits rose 2 p.c. Although the fourth quarter gain was minimal, it was better than anticipated and economists were encouraged by the news.

The United States government also reported a surprising burst of strength in the housing industry that far exceeded expectations. Housing starts jumped 14·9 p.c. in January, ending a three-month decline in the economic measure.

Because the construction industry is considered one of the three pillars of America's industrial base, the near 15 p.c. jump in the housing index was seen as confirmation that the economy started the New Year with an economic bang.

The encouraging economic news was not enough to provide Wall Street investors with a lift, however. The Dow Jones Industrial Average drifted lower for most of the day and was off a fraction at 1,281·14 an hour before the close.

Traders in New York said investors were preoccupied with the coming testimony of Federal Reserve chairman Paul Volcker, who was scheduled to appear before Congress on Wednesday. Mr Volcker will outline the Fed's 1985 monetary targets during his testimony and investors greeted the occasion with the usual nervousness.

The Fed's tentative monetary goals for this year were announced last June and Wall Street's financial market participants will be watching closely to see if the central bank's final targets differ from those previously announced.

Comments by Treasury Secretary James Baker, taken as an indication that the Reagan Administration has placed deficit reduction on the back burner, also worried investors.

Mr Baker told Congress that although the deficit was the major economic problem facing America the exact percentage of deficit reduction was not as important as producing a downward trend.

The Treasury Secretary's statement appeared to contradict projections by many economists.

THE resignation of Sr Bernardo Grinspun, the Argentine Economy Minister who has been conducting debt renegotiations, and the Governor of the Central Bank will inevitably add more grey hairs to the heads of bankers around the world worried about Latin America's $350 billion of debts.

The double resignations in Buenos Aires come on the very day the Brazilian trade and inter bank credits expired, with agreement on a new package still some weeks off.

Inflation, the traditional bane of Latin American economies is rampant in both countries. Argentina and Brazil are also not alone. Peru and Bolivia are also deep in debt and drowning in inflation.

Experienced Latin America hands were philosophical about the latest turn of events, however, yesterday, taking some comfort from the fact that conditions in the countries concerned are not as similar as they might superficially seem, and that progress in debt negotiations is rarely straightforward.

Precisely why the two Argentines had resigned was not immediately clear in London or in Washington yesterday. Sr Grinspun is a politician who has been a close colleague of the Prime Minister.

His replacement, Senor Juan Sourrouille, is a technocrat, the author of a five-year plan for economic growth, and is believed to take seriously the problem of inflation, which is running at an annual rate of 1,500 p.c., or five times the IMF "target."

The resignations come at a ticklish time but bankers in London were hopeful yesterday that the new man will actually intensify the fight against inflation, and the debt package now nearing completion will still be agreed by the end of next month.

Brazil's difficulties with the International Monetary Fund are well known, but the credits have now expired and there is no evidence that any major creditor has refused to let them run on.

With any luck that situation will remain until the new civilian government takes over control on March 15. Peru is also facing a change of government which makes firm decisions there even harder to take. Bankers generally take comfort from the fact that despite dire warnings of imminent debt repudiations which would force creditor countries to take difficult decisions the debtor countries are all still trying to cope.

The marriage business

MARKETS DEVELOP TRADE with such wonderful facility that new ones are being invented all the time. The latest idea, called the Business Exchange, was launched yesterday. Twenty-two firms of accountants and solicitors have become members in the hope of bringing together sellers and buyers of businesses and raising capital.

The man behind the venture is Douglas Llambias, whose private company, The Business Expansion and Exchange Group, will run the Business Exchange. Among the members are Arthur Andersen, Arthur Young, Deloitte Haskins & Sells, D. J. Freeman, Payne Hicks Beach, Thomson McLintock, Thornton Baker and Touche Ross.

At present if an accountant is asked to sell a client's business, he or she may contact a number of merchant banks, or turn to the merger brokers, or contact other firms of accountants or solicitors directly. The Business Exchange seeks to formalise the last approach. An accountant or solicitor of a member firm with a transaction to undertake might in future turn first to the Business Exchange. The staff of the Business Exchange would discuss the proposition and then, if it were found suitable, send anonymous summary details in confidence to the other members. They in turn would make their interest known through the Business Exchange and then the parties would be able to start negotiations.

Scale fees are 4 p.c. on the first £200,000 and then fall to 0·5 p.c. on the excess of any consideration over £10 million. Fees are charged to both vendors and purchasers; the total on a £1 million deal would come to £24,500.

Top and tail of banking

IT WAS PROBABLY inevitable but a chance comment about the relative progress of merchant banks in the corporate finance stakes made at a lunch with one of them recently resulted yesterday in the arrival of an interesting league table from that source, clearly designed to damp down a suggestion that the host might not have been doing too well in that department.

Part of the table, which is based on figures extracted from CRAWFORD'S DIRECTORY OF CITY CONNECTIONS, is reproduced here and readers may not have too much difficulty working out which bank compiled the table.

Comparative figures show that, in 1978-79, the league table based on numbers of corporate clients was headed by Hill Samuel, with 124 massing a market value of £116 billion, followed by Warburg with 103 clients valued at £92 billion.

At that time Kleinwort was third on the list. County Bank was lowly seventh and Morgan Grenfell clocked in at fifth. Schroder Wagg, rated fourth on this basis in 1978-79, had fallen to sixth place this year.

Of course there are a number of different criteria by which to judge the merchant banking league table. On this assessment Warburg comes out as a definite top dog. Unless, of course, other banks care to suggest alternative points of view?

Pound makes lone stand against dollar

By the close, the pound was up eight points at $1·0925 against $1·0917 overnight. This minimal advance was in sharp contrast to the fall in the mark and other major currencies.

As a result, the sterling index rose by 0·4 to 71·6. The pound's value in terms of marks rose from 3·5990 to 3·6225.

Dealers say intervention by central banks to stop the dollar's advance was hardly noticeable. Only the Germans spent about $50 million to help the mark.

The continued strength of the dollar continued to unnerve London money markets in spite of the pound's relatively good performance. The cost of three month interbank money rose another 1/16 p.c. to 14 p.c.

The Bank of England provided £517 million of help to the banking system to relieve a liquidity shortage of about £450 million.

Pratt accepts 600 Group bid

THE 600 GROUP has at last made its long-expected takeover bid for F. Pratt Engineering in which it bought a near-27 p.c. stake as long ago as 1981.

The agreed deal is 78p a share cash valuing the whole business at £4·3 million and the equity not already owned by 600 Group at £3·13 million.

The price offered looks generous by stock market standards with the shares just 49p before the announcement. They quickly jumped to 77p. Shareholders will still be able to keep the 1·5p final dividendd.

The dividend was announced in January—the first for two years—when Pratt unveiled pretax profits of £325,000 in the year to end-October against losses of £257,000.

Soon after 600 Group first took a stake F. Pratt suffered under a welter of boardroom rows which led to sackings and bitter arguments over directors' spending.

It has been a slow road back to profitability for the group which already trades with the 600 Group particularly in "workholding" machine tool components and electrical panels.

Edwardes talks of confidence at Dunlop

THE new Dunlop Holdings management team "becomes more knowledgable and more confident about the group's prospects and potential" as each day passes, says a letter to shareholders from chairman Sir Michael Edwardes.

This is the last shot in his defence against the £53·5 million take-over bid from BTR before the first closing date tomorrow.

In the meantime the company is deep in discussions with its 53 creditor banks to produce the second version of the rescue arrangements. Sir Michael's letter confirms the promise at the recent extraordinary general meeting that it will be an "attractive package," and this is now expected very shortly.

Sir Michael explains that the new scheme will be in the form of a single rights issue instead of the three-tier package previously proposed, and existing shareholders will be able to take up their full entitlement "to avoid any dilution of their holdings."

It is only the shares that existing holders do not wish to take up that will be acquired by institutions and the banks. Plans are well advanced and the new scheme is expected in about a week.

Yesterday Dunlop shares closed at 44p, down 1½p, compared with the 20p a share offered by BTR.

Khoo offers more for Marden

TAN SRI KHOO raised his bid for Wheelock Marden to HK$7 for the "A" shares and 70 cents for the "B" shares yesterday and has increased his stake in the Hongkong company to 23·53 p.c. of the voting rights.

Trading in the shares was suspended again after the announcement with the "A" shares quoted at HK$7·05. The "B" shares were not traded yesterday.

The new bid through Falwyn, Tan Sri Khoo's holding company, compared with the initial offer last week of HK$6 for the "A" shares and 60 cents for the "B" shares and Sir Y.-K. Pao's counter bid of HK$6·60 and 66 cents at the weekend.

A statement for the Commissioner for Securities yesterday said Falwyn had bought 55 million "A" shares at up to HK$6 in addition to the shares acquired from John Morden.

Sir Y-K Pao's Hongkong and Kowloon Wharf has not added to its 34 p.c. voting stake acquired last week.

Dealing in the shares was suspended on Monday but off-market deals were struck at HK$6·80. Trading resumed at HK$6·90 yesterday before the Falwyn raised its bid.

The Hongkong market is now closed for the Chinese New Year and reopens next Monday.

South Leasing in £2m placing

SOUTHERN Business Leasing, the USM-quoted photocopier and drink vending machine leasing operation, is raising a net £2·17 million with the placing of 1·8 million new shares at 124p each. The price compares with a market price of 128p and a USM entry price nearly two years ago of 85p.

The group's January interim results showed a 30 p.c. pretax advance to £1·52 million. While there is no forecast, contracted income on leasing deals was £29 million at December 31, continuing the annual 33 p.c. rise.

State buoys BNOC with extra £25m

By ROLAND GRIBBEN

A FURTHER £25 millon is being provided by the Government to cover losses by the British National Oil Corporation in its efforts to defend North Sea oil prices.

Mr Walker, Energy Secretary, provided the latest insight into the cost in a Commons answer yesterday as the Energy Department confirmed that talks were under way with oil companies about reducing BNOC's trading role but denied that it had taken any initiative.

The latest £25 million tranche of support is on top of the £41m the Government provided to cover BNOC's spot market losses in the secondhalf of last year as the gap with the official North Sea price widened.

The Government view is that the £66 million in aid is a small price to pay for contributing to stability in the oil market, defending the £12 billion anticipated North Sea income this year and avoiding a free-for-all that would put sterling under further pressure.

BNOC is under orders to maintain the official $28·65 a barrel price it pays oil companies for North Sea oil and limit its losses. It is being forced to sell around 800,000 barrels a day at spot market-related prices, mainly to customers who previously had contracted supplies.

Spot prices have been improving through a combination of bad weather, the new pact from the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries and the Government's North Sea stance and the £25 million contribution represents the best estimate about BNOC's losses from December to the end of the current financial year.

Saudi setback for Boot

SHARES in civil engineers Henry Boot crashed 45p to 272p yesterday, on the news that a 50 p.c. owned subsidiary had gone into receivership after lengthy problems with an £18 million Middle Eastern contract.

The subsidiary, Intry, was building the new zoological gardens for the Saudi Arabian government in Riyadh but, stated Boot, all work on the contract ceased on January 24 because "the conditions" under which the company had been working for many months had been intolerable: with unrealistic interim valuations, delayed payments and extended approval periods for design details and materials, disrupting the progress of the work.

John Glyn leaves FNFC chair

AFTER A job well done to keep afloat First National Finance Corporation, John Glyn, 72, is retiring as chairman. Also leaving is managing director Stuart Dyer and non-executive director Sir Anthony Touche, the banker.

Mr Glyn, once of Glyn, Mills bank has been the chief pilot of the Bank of England's lifeboat launched 11 years ago to rescue FNFC from the depths of the secondary banking crisis.

The supporting group of banks — the five English clearing banks and three from Scotland — put in a total £350 million. All but £32 million has been repaid.

Even the loan to First National Securities Holdings, the consumer credit division, is backed nearly twice by assets.

Last month the group announced profits up from £11·4 million to £17·6 million and during the latter stages of its recovery FNFC has been considered a ripe takeover prospect.

Richard Langdon, the former senior partner of Spicer & Pegler takes over as part-time executive chairman and three senior executives will be promoted to the board.

Mr Glyn pays tribute to his staff bringing about what seemed "an impossible task" in 1977. Then there was £78 million deficit on shareholders' funds. Now there is a £54 million surplus.

Gold easier

FAIRLY quiet conditions ruled in the London bullion market yesterday with the price of gold closing $1·75 lower at $302·75 an ounce. With a watchful eye kept on the dollar the market saw little action

COMPANIES

Abercom Group

OPENING half pre-tax profits from on-going operations of Abercom Group, the South African engineering concern which has been undergoing a major reorganisation programme, slipped from R5·91m to R4·87m. But with a substantially reduced tax charge of R55,000 (R1·52m) net income is slightly ahead at R4·84m (R4·59m).

There is a same-again interim dividend of 6 cents around April 10.

Burmatex

BURMATEX, the carpet tile and fibre-bonded carpet maker, has ended its first full year as a public limited company with pre-tax profits of £1·45m (£1·27m).

Ernest Jones

SUCCESS of its marketing policies and operating procedures against a background of intense competition has enabled Ernest Jones (Jewellers) to continue its profits recovery in the year ended September with the pre-tax outturn up from £464,000 to £702,000.

The year-end is being changed to end-March, so the current period will be for 18 months.

A 2·5p final on April 1 makes a same-again 3·8p total from earnings of 4·6p (3·9p).

Elders

ELDERS IXL, the Australian agricultural and finance group which has a London "quote", has pushed opening half pre-tax profits on from A$44·5m to A$52·5m on turnover of A$7·28bn (A$2·41bn). Figures include six months trading of the Private Investment Company for Asia.

There is an interim dividend of 10 cents (8 cents adjusted) on capital increased by October's one-for-two scrip, from earnings of 18 cents (14).

IN BRIEF

Kwahu Company: First half p/t plt £88,100 (£50,600), including profit on disposal of investments £40,900 (£12,800) and provision released on investment portfolio £30,200 (£11,800). EPS 0·82p (0·56p). NAV 24·9p (equal to 22·4p). As usual, no int. div. Forecast of 1·1p div. on capital as enlarged by June's one-for-one rights issue confirmed.

Throgmorton Secured Growth Trust: First half net after-tax revenue £162,000 (£137,000). Gross revenue £432,000 (£393,000). EPS 1·62p (1·37p). NAV per unit of capital loan stock, debenture at par, 333·9p (301·8p). Int. div. again 1p, pay April 4.

F. & C. Eurotrust: First half net revenue £20,100 (£2,000). Gross revenue £91,600 (£63,300). Interest charge £54,900 (£45,000). EPS 0·3p (0·03p). NAV 124·9p (109·2p). As usual, no int. div.

Farmer Stedall: Full year p/t pft £210,800 (£238,200). T/o £1·75m (£1·06m). Maiden div 0·5p, pay April 1. Encouraging signs in both British and Far Eastern markets, particularly China

THE QUESTOR COLUMN

Short-term snags at Peachey

A HOT residential property market is encouraging Peachey Property Corporation to storm through its disposal programme at a rate which will see the bulk of the housing portfolio sold within the next year or so.

In the process, Peachey is picking up useful profits and raising cash for investment in its commercial development and portfolio activities.

It does, however, create a potential problem for the company and its shareholders: without trading profits from the residential sales, group profits are likely to dip over the next couple of years.

Interim results to December 25 make the point. Group pre-tax profits have jumped from £3·04 million to £4·84 million. The contribution from trading its residential units was £2·15 million of that, or nearly 45 p.c. of the total.

In the second half of the current year, profits will still be flowing fast and loose from the residential portfolio, and group pre-tax profits are likely to emerge around £9·5 million against £8·32 million.

But next year the going will be harder. Investment income is on a rising trend, helped by the Carnaby Estates where rent reviews on the West Side purchased from the Crown Estate 18 months ago have come in ahead of forecasts.

The sale of a leasehold interest in the Churchill Hotel for 9·25 million will be a short term boost to investment income until reinvested in property. Profit on the deal will be taken to reserves rather than through the profit and loss account.

The impact that the sombre short term profits outlook will have will depend entirely on market sentiment. If investors want to stay in property shares, then they will back the management strength which is already delivering a sound long term prospect.

But if they are looking for an excuse to lighten their holdings in the sector, Peachey's short term dilemma will provide one.

The sahres at 248p, where the prospective yield is a shade under 5 p.c. and the price-earnings ratio of 13 times, are nevertheless worth accumulating on weakness.

Cope exceeds expectations

COPE Allman International marked better-than-expected record first half profits, up from £3·28 million to £6·34 million pre-tax in the six months to end-1984, with a 35 p.c. increase in its interim dividend yesterday — and promised similar treatment for the final if prospects for the second half are realised.

The company has become a tighter-run ship since Messds Ashcroft and Wickins took an interest in its fortunes back in 1983, and the benefits continue.

Packaging, its biggest division, continues to lead the way with operating profits up 40 p.c. to £5·98 million and North American companies accounting for a major part of the growth.

Increased sales of steel strip, used in wood and metal hand tools, in the United States also helped compensate for a downturn in the group's switchgear business and enabled the engineering division to move up 10 p.c. to £2·25 million.

Amusement machines, where it was once a world leader, staged a recovery as the manufacturing side made up some of the ground lost following a late change to electronically controlled machines.

Hiring companies are still experiencing pressure on rental income. However, with a reduced workforce and an improved market share, manufacturing staged a turnround of more than £1 million and helped the division contribute £2·31 million against £904,000 and £1·85 million for the previous full year.

With North American markets now playing a greater role — profits from this area more than doubled to £2·09 million — the previous seasonal imbalance between first and second half results will be reduced.

Consequently the market is looking for between £15·5 million and £14 million for the full year. Assuming a likely 43 p.c. tax charge, this leaves the shares, up 7 at 153p, selling on a prospective 8·1 earnings multiple and offering a 5·4 p.c. yield.

This compares with market averages closer to 13 and 4 p.c. respectively and the shares, which have come up from 105p since being recommended here in September, clearly have further to go.

The prospect of the Hawley—B C A camps reducing their combined present 43·55 p.c. holding to 40 p.c., as has been indicated, could have some affect on market sentiment, however, although there is more than one way this can be achieved and Cope Allman is looking for an acquisition in the United States in support of its increased activity there.

Strathclyde under wraps

NOT A WORD . . . but London and Strathclyde Trust has had another bid approach, which sooner or later the management might see fit to tell shareholders all about.

It may, of course, suffer the same fate as the approach received last November which got no further than the first post.

That approach came from Japan Assets Trust which was keen to expand its capital base, and saw the acquisition of an investment trust as a neat way of accomplishing it. Most shareholders never knew from whence the approach came, nor what was potentially on offer. Mos tnever will.

But it was ironic that County Bank, which helped fight off the would-be predator, soon came up with an alternative, Anglo Scottish Investment Trus.

Institutions had been gunning for Anglo Scottish ever since its management contract was snatched away from Gartmore, which in turn manages London and Strathclyde.

Institutional holders account for the bulk of the London and Strathclyde shareholders register, and it is a fair assumption that if they were offered a chance to sell their shares close to or at asset value, they would do so.

Having seen the chance slip away once, they are not keen that the same thing should happen again, especially as the would-be bid depends on certain information being made available to the would-be predator.

The exact state of play is that, clearly, the defending camp believe they are not in receipt of a serious offer. However, there are so many insiders involved, that illuminations from the company would be helpful.

Facilities Engineers
We've a growing need for some specialist skills

The computer industry is still growing fast – which means that IBM's manufacturing plant at Greenock, already one of Europe's largest electronics factories is constantly expanding.

New buildings, improved facilities, further installations are all helping to keep IBM Greenock at the forefront of advanced technology manufacture. And that, in turn, is creating some unique opportunities in design, cost control, estimating and installation work for men or women with at least seven years appropriate experience.

Electrical Controls Specialist

You'll need an HND/BSc in Electrical Controls Engineering, specialising in building services. Your background should incorporate electrical engineering (controls) including project control either in engineering consultancy, contract management, facilities or plant engineering. Reference: FE/ECS.

Electrical HV/LV Specialist

Together with an HND/BSc in Electrical Engineering, you should possess experience in electrical engineering HV, LV and associated works, including project control either in engineering consultancy, contract management, facilities or plant engineering. Reference: FE/ES.

Mechanical/ Building Services Specialist

Responsible for setting and maintaining design standards you will need an HND/BSc in Mechanical Engineering, specialising in building services. You should have experience in project control, either as a consultancy professional or as a contractual project manager. Reference: FE/MBS.

Architectural Interior Design Specialist

Again involved in setting and maintaining design standards, you should be an Associate member of the RIBA or an Art graduate specialising in interior, industrial design and or ergonomics. Additionally, your experience should cover project control either as a consultancy professional or as a contractual project manager. Reference: FE/IDS.

As well as great scope for personal and professional advancement in a constantly developing environment, we offer excellent salaries together with a wide range of benefits. These include BUPA, free life assurance, and a contributory pension scheme. Relocation will be provided where appropriate.

Make growth your priority. Write first quoting the appropriate reference number to Personnel Selection, IBM United Kingdom Limited, PO Box 30, Spango Valley, Greenock PA16 0AH.

Closing date for applications: Friday, 15th March.

OPPORTUNITIES IN CAN MANUFACTURING

Crown Cork is part of a dynamic multi-national can manufacturing operation embracing some 80 Plants worldwide. In the UK we are a leading supplier of aerosol, beverage and food cans and closures to home and overseas markets.

A programme of continuous expansion is planned, in keeping with present growth of sales, and we wish to fill the following positions to help achieve our plans.

PLANT MANAGER LIVINGSTON, SCOTLAND

A Plant Manager is required for our West Lothian plant, which manufactures two-piece cans for the beer and beverage industries. Reporting to the Operations Director, the person appointed will assume total responsibility and accountability for all aspects of the plant operation.

The successful candidate will be aged 35-45 years, be of good academic background, and should have sound all-round management skills. Whilst an engineering background and experience in the packaging industry is desirable, more relevant is the ability to demonstrate several years of success in a similar position. In particular, we are looking for an experienced man-manager who can provide the leadership and motivation necessary to ensure a successful operation in this plant.

CUSTOMER SERVICES MANAGER LIVINGSTON, SCOTLAND

This new position has been created to strengthen the technical representation to our customers in the beer and beverage industries. Reporting to the Plant Manager, the primary role of the Customer Services Manager will be to liaise with users throughout the UK of the two-piece beer cans produced in our plant to ensure trouble-free filling operations. Working closely with plant manufacturing and quality management and with our Sales force, the successful applicant will be the principal point of contact between ourselves and our customers in all technical matters and must have the ability to clearly interpret their requirements and to assist them in the use of our cans.

We require an energetic, well educated, self-motivated individual who is capable of working as a member of a team in finding solutions to problems. Whilst can manufacturing experience would be an advantage, it is essential that the person appointed has practical experience in high speed filling and packaging operations in the beverage or food industries.

CAN TECHNOLOGIST SOUTHALL, MIDDLESEX

A Technologist is required at the UK Headquarters at Southall to undertake a wide variety of projects within the Technical Services Division, including product and raw materials development and the provision of technical support to the manufacturing operations and to customers. This will require a minimum of five years in packaging, preferably in can manufacture, and ideally qualification to HNC standard. However, more important than formal academic qualifications is appropriate experience, a high sound analytical approach to problem solving, and a high degree of initiative.

The salaries for the above positions are subject to negotiation and will be commensurate with experience. Other benefits will include medical cover, pension fund, and relocation expenses where applicable.

Applicants, male or female, should apply in strict confidence, to F.C. Storie, Personnel Manager, The Crown Cork Company Limited, Scotts Road, Southall, Middlesex.

CROWN THE CROWN CORK CO LTD

Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission for England

QUANTITY SURVEYORS

The Commission has been set up to preserve ancient monuments and historic buildings in England, and promote the public's enjoyment and understanding of them. It will manage and maintain over 400 monuments and provide advice for the Secretary of State for the Environment and others. It will also undertake works of preservation and the recording of sites threatened with destruction.

Current London-based opportunities are of two types.

Area Responsibilities

These two posts involve assisting a unit head who is responsible for all aspects of quantity surveying mainly concerned with the preservation of a wide variety of historic buildings and ancient monuments, but also including some new works. You will be involved with estimates and cost advice, interim valuations, final accounts for lump sum and measured term contracts, initial examination of claims and tenders and quantity surveying aspects of grant aid. There will be opportunities to move between different areas of work in order to gain wider experience.

Technical Audit

This post involves assisting a unit head who is responsible for the technical audit of final accounts, including measured term contracts, and for taking-off duties and the preparation of bills of quantities on projects which may arise in any part of England. In addition, you will carry out other quantity surveying duties as described above.

All posts involve limited travel and possession of a valid UK driving licence is essential.

A CHANCE TO JOIN THE LEADING TEST HOUSE IN THE U.K.

Local Interviews

Our Client is an autonomous company within a major U.K. group with an impressive record of expansion and investment. The independence of test activities is carefully preserved, as is the philosophy of a thorough, professional approach in a profitable context.

Career progression opportunities exist to move both into a management role or to remain in a technical role with planned advancement through the professional grading structure.

Current positions are as follows:

Electro-Magnetic Compatibility Consultant & Engineers
Tempest Consultant and Engineers
Reliability Consultant and Engineers
Environmental Consultant and Engineers

The Consultant positions will appeal to those who already have a firm grasp of the relevant technology and who wish to exploit this at a higher level. The Engineer positions will appeal to those with lesser experience at present, possibly at this stage in a related technology, such as another field of electronics or mechanical engineering.

Salaries will be circa £15K for the Consultant positions. Benefits for all posts (which are open to men and women) include B.U.P.A., paid overtime in most positions and generous relocation where applicable. This is in addition to real career prospects in an expanding organisation.

To arrange your local appointment with our Client's senior management please contact Terry Money, who is advising on these positions. Just dial 100 and ask for Harrison Cowley Freephone. If you are unable to phone please send your C.V. to him at Harrison Cowley, Glen Island House, Mill Lane, Taplow, Maidenhead, Berkshire. SL6 0AG. Tel: 0628 56720.

General Manager

Haringey Health Authority covers the geographical area of the London Borough of Haringey, with an estimated resident population of approximately 207,000. Hospital services are provided through three hospitals, including the North Middlesex Hospital, and the District, with a revenue budget for 1984/5 of £36 million, employs approximately 3,600 staff.

The Authority has embarked upon an ambitious programme to move resources into the priority care areas, especially into mental health, and services for the elderly, this, in the face of declining resources. This will be a major task for the General Manager, who will be directly and personally accountable to the District Health Authority, and who will lead the management team in the identification and achievement of objectives, planning health care services and for their effective implementation. You will need considerable experience of, and success in, managing a large-scale organisation, and qualities of leadership are fundamental.

The appointment will be for an initial fixed-term period of 3 years, renewable. Remuneration will be by negotiation.

Further information, application form and job description for this post may be obtained from, and should be returned to: Mr L. A. Bains, CBE, DL, Chairman, Haringey Health Authority, Mountford House, The Green, London, N15. Telephone: 01-808 1081 ext 105 (Miss Jean Smith).

OPPORTUNITIES AT THE FOREFRONT OF ENERGY ENGINEERING

The Energy Equipment Company Ltd., is a highly successful subsidiary of one of Europe's larger oil companies.
We are world leaders in the design and production of boilers, and hot gas generators using an advanced fluidised bed combustion system which gives high efficiency, multi-fuel burning.
Due to the continuing demand for our products we require the following qualified, experienced professionals to join our contracts department:

PROJECT MANAGERS/ENGINEERS (DT/1)
Responsible for controlling all aspects of contract execution from receipt of order, through the design, sub contract and construction phases to completion and handover. Ideal applicants should have extensive experience of contract supervision preferably with large industrial steam generating plant.

SITE MANAGER (DT/2)
An experienced Site Manager is required to control the construction and commissioning of a large industrial coal fired fluidised bed boiler plant located in Belgium. A working knowledge of French would be a definite advantage but relevant experience and a thoroughly professional approach are our main requirements.

COMMISSIONING ENGINEERS (DT/3)
We urgently require engineers with experience in one or more of the following fields: Electrical Engineering Microprocessors, Controls and Instrumentation, Combustion Engineering, Steam and Water systems.

Responsible for the testing and commissioning of contracts both in the UK and overseas, applicants must be qualified to at least HNC, preferably degree level and should ideally have some knowledge of fluidised bed combustion systems.

All the above vacancies offer competitive salaries and benefits packages together with real opportunities to grow with this progressive company.

Electrical/Electronic Engineers, Mechanical Engineers and Naval Architects

The complete professional challenge

Ships of the Royal Navy embody the best and the most advanced engineering to be found in Britain today. Members of the Royal Corps of Naval Constructors are responsible for the design, construction and maintenance of these ships at a price the country can afford.

A career with the RCNC offers graduates technological challenge and wide-ranging experience which, when coupled with planned training programmes, can lead to Chartered Status in the minimum time.

On completion of training, you would be involved in ship or system design studies or in dockyard management. With increasing experience, your career will develop across the full spectrum of warship building technology, including procurement management. The product itself guarantees variety. You could for example be concerned with nuclear or gas turbine propulsion systems; with the most sophisticated electronic communications equipment; with computer-controlled weaponry or with developing the technology to reduce underwater noise. Whatever the problem you will see it right through — designing, modifying and perfecting — until the whole ship can operate reliably under the most extreme conditions that man or the environment can offer.

Understandably, our entry standards are high. You must have, or expect to obtain in 1985, a degree with 1st or minimum 2nd class Division 1 Honours degree in Mechanical or Civil Engineering, Electrical/Electronic Engineering or the appropriate sciences, naval architecture or other maritime sciences. Successful candidates will be sponsored to obtain an appropriate MSc.

FINAL YEAR STUDENTS MAY APPLY.

Salary starting between £6915 and £7635 according to qualifications and experience. There are good promotion prospects to £21,830 and above. Salary in London up to £1300 higher.

For further information and an application form (to be returned by 14 March 1985) write to Civil Service Commission, Alencon Link, Basingstoke, Hants, RG21 1JB, or telephone Basingstoke (0256) 468551 (answering service operates outside office hours).

TEST MANAGEMENT

Electronics Industry — To £18,000 p.a.
South Devon — + Relocation Assistance

W & G Instruments Ltd., internationally recognised manufacturers and suppliers of Telecommunications Measurement and Test Equipment, are currently enjoying a major expansion programme. Capital investment within their new Development and Manufacturing facility has included £1¼M in-circuit Automatic Test Equipment. This new position offers a challenging opportunity to control the installation of this equipment, and then to manage its operation and application.

Liaising closely with the Engineering, Sales and Production departments, you will assume total responsibility for the work of up to 25 engineers engaged in functional and in-circuit testing from PCB to final instrument. Ability to translate instrument specifications into test parameters whilst maintaining efficiency and quality is essential.

Applicants, male or female, should preferably be educated to degree level and be able to demonstrate management experience within an in-circuit test environment using ATE. Experience should have encompassed both digital and analogue techniques.

In addition to an attractive salary, fringe benefits will include assistance with relocation expenses to a superb location which is fast becoming recognised as a major centre of today's technology.

BUILDING POSITIONS

Australia

Concrete Constructions Pty Ltd is one of Australia's most successful and respected building contractors. The company operates in every Australian state and currently is building several projects each valued at over $A100 Million.

The company has opportunities available in most of its offices for the following positions. In all cases, it is essential that applicants possess experience on very large building projects including high rises.

SENIOR PROJECT MANAGERS

The successful applicants will be site based and responsible for completion of major projects on schedule and within budget. Considerable autonomy is given to the Project Managers and responsibility includes industrial relations, client negotiations, planning and cost control, etc. Normally the position would be supported by a Site Manager (Site Agent), Contract Administrator (C.S.) and Project Engineers.

Applicants should preferably be qualified Civil or Building Engineers with experience at project or construction management level with contracting companies on major high rise buildings.

SITE AGENTS

The Site Agents will either be responsible for all site activities on smaller projects, or responsible to a Project Manager for site co-ordination and quality control on major projects. Responsibilities include achieving schedule, management of day labour and co-ordination of sub-contractors, quality control, etc.

Applicants should possess trade qualifications and several years supervisory experience on major building projects.

CONTRACT QUANTITY SURVEYORS

The Quantity Surveyors will be site based and duties will include the compilation of site variations and progress claims and other project monitoring and control activities.

Applicants should be qualified and experienced Quantity Surveyors with a sound background in the building industry acquired either through contracting or professional practice.

GENERAL INFORMATION —

The Australian building industry is in a state of expansion and Concrete Constructions is a pace-setter on major projects. In addition to competitive salaries, these positions offer excellent career opportunities with a company recognised in the industry as a leader.

It is anticipated that interviews will be carried out in the U.K. at the end of March and confidential applications may be made by writing to John Downing at PO Box 1487, North Sydney, NSW, Australia 2060, quoting reference 20481.

MANAGERS

Field Training

The EITB exists to serve the varied training needs of engineering companies in England, Scotland and Wales. The Board is now seeking suitably qualified candidates to fill vacancies for the managers of its field training operations in the South West, North West and Eastern & Southern regions and in Wales. These are the most senior posts in the Board's management structure within each of these areas.

These managers will be required to represent the Board in discussions with industry and public bodies at the highest level, and will be responsible for the management of the Board's training staff working in their Regions.

Candidates will preferably have an engineering degree or professional qualification and be aged between 35 and 50. They must be able to communicate effectively and to provide evidence of success as a manager in the engineering industry. They should have extensive experience and understanding of the training and education infrastructure relating to the engineering industry with a particular awareness of the manpower and training implications resulting from the introduction of advanced technology.

The posts will be based in the relevant Board Regional Offices but will entail an appreciable amount of travelling for which a car will be provided. Relocation expenses will be paid where appropriate.

MECHANICAL, ELECTRICAL AND BUILDING SERVICES ENGINEERS

STAGE BY STAGE, THE WINNING WAY TO MAJOR PROJECT EXPERIENCE

The Property Services Agency always takes the chequered flag when it comes to sheer breadth of variety in an engineering career.

Our Project Directorates take responsibility for all major new works and modifications. They offer engineers the chance to use and extend their specialist skills, normally as a member or leader of a multi-professional team, including architects and surveyors.

Being responsible for all stages of projects, from briefing to handover, can involve the directorates in total design. They now have a number of vacancies to fill at their Croydon headquarters.

Promotion and training prospects are excellent, not just in the directorates but in the Department of Mechanical and Electrical Services and the PSA's regional offices where career opportunities also exist.

Candidates must have a degree, preferably with honours, or the equivalent with at least 2 years postgraduate training or experience or be Chartered Electrical or Mechanical Engineers, or Chartered Building Services Technologists.

Salary rising to £12,770 with prospects to £21,830 and above. Salaries £730 higher in Croydon.

Relocation assistance up to £5000 may be available.

For further details and an application form write to the Civil Service Commission, Alencon Link, Basingstoke, Hants. RG21 1JB, or telephone Basingstoke (0256) 468551 (answering service operates outside office hours). Please quote ref: T/939/5.

The Civil Service is an equal opportunity employer

PSA Property Services Agency

£9,005 in your first year as a graduate engineer.

If you are considering a career in engineering you may find that the Army has rather more to offer than you thought.

Technically we have probably the most advanced equipment of any Army in the world. All of which has been developed by Army officers in conjunction with civilians.

Our main battle tank, for example, is fitted with laser range finders. Most missile systems are fully computerised and our telecommunications networks and electronic warfare capability are amongst the most sophisticated that exist.

If you are looking for an intellectual challenge you will certainly find yourself stretched to the limit.

But that's only half the job.

Within a year of joining, you will probably find yourself managing a team of 40 highly qualified soldiers. So you must have the potential to be a good leader and be able to take responsibility at an early age.

When you are working under active service conditions, such as the Falklands War, you will not have the luxury of a workshop if a helicopter breaks down.

Or an office if you have to plan and build a bridge or set up a communications system at night in the pouring rain.

You will need a large share of imagination and initiative. And the ability to improvise where necessary. People's lives will depend on how efficiently you do your job.

There are three different Corps in the Army that are concerned with engineering.

Royal Engineers.

The activities of the Royal Engineers are very diverse covering the construction of bridges, airfields, roads and bulk petroleum installations. The building of ports and military camps. The laying and clearing of minefields and power generation and distribution.

As a Royal Engineer you could also get involved in disaster relief work anywhere in the world, particularly in developing countries.

Royal Signals.

The Royal Signals are responsible for all telecommunications in the Army and for those of the RAF abroad.

The systems currently in use, range from the Clansman net radio, to large trunk systems covering most of Europe.

A young Signals officer will typically be responsible for the telecommunications of a brigade or even a whole armoured division. So you would find yourself close to the nerve centre very soon after being commissioned.

Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers.

It is a safe assumption that most things that move in the Army are looked after by REME.

All the Army's vehicles, tanks, radio sets and helicopters come under their umbrella. Including the electro-optical equipment and the computerised tracking control of the new battle tanks.

The Artillery's guided missile systems and all fire control computers are also maintained by REME.

Qualifications.

Engineering graduates are welcomed by all three Corps. The Royal Engineers and Royal Signals also accept graduates in other disciplines. There are also facilities for suitably qualified non graduates to read for an engineering degree while in the Army.

For further information please write to Major John Floyd, Department R20, DAR, Empress State Building, Lillie Road, London SW6 1TR stating your date of birth, your school, university, polytechnic or college of further education and the qualifications you have or expect.

REGIONAL SALES MANAGER

North West £12,000 +

TDK (UK) Ltd are recognised leading suppliers of audio and video cassettes and other magnetic products, dealing directly with national and independent retail outlets.

We now require a REGIONAL SALES MANAGER for the NORTH-WEST REGION (N. Wales to Scotland and N. Ireland) to ensure maximum motivation and success of the sales team.

You will have a minimum of 5 years' f.m.c.g. outside sales experience, at least two years of which will have included man-management. Ideally over 30, you will probably reside around the Greater Manchester area and will be a self-starter, able to solve problems and build mutual team confidence.

Basic starting salary will be not less than £10,000 pa, and with Bonus/Commission your total earnings in the first 12 months should be at least £12,000. A 2-litre car is provided and, after a qualifying period, an attractive Pension/Life Assurance Scheme and BUPA.

Please telephone for an application form, or send me your full C.V. including salary and personal details: Len Tibbott, Personnel Manager, TDK Tape Distributor (UK) Ltd, Pembroke House, Wellesley Road, Croydon CR0 9XW. Telephone 01-680 0023.

HOUSES AND ESTATES — CHARLES CLOVER

History caught up in red tape

FINE property in London can command such high prices that it is perhaps surprising that some of the capital's finest historic houses lie empty and in danger of dereliction or demolition for want of a buyer.

The most prominent example is Grovelands House at Southfield, Enfield, a Grade One listed building built by John Nash in 1797 and considered to be one of the finest Georgian mansions in Greater London. Owned by Enfield Area Health Authority who ran it for a time as a hospital, it has been empty and decaying since 1977.

The state of the house for which the health authority is asking £500,000, is described by Ashley Barker, the head of the G L C Historic Buildings Division, as a "national scandal." Various buyers have been interested since 1977 but nothing has yet happened to settle the house's future. One application for planning permission was refused because the developers envisaged substantial extensions.

The house, which is not vast in size, has largely intact interiors and grounds laid out by Humphrey Repton.

Now a new scheme is being considered by Enfield council from a developer who wants to turn the house into a private psychiatric nursing home. But as the scheme involves a large extension some doubt must remain as to whether this is yet the scheme to save Grovelands.

Another fine house standing empty at present is Danson Mansion, Danson Park, Bexley, a Grade One house built by Sir Robert Taylor, architect of the Bank of England, between 1759 and 1762. The finest rooms on the first floor were decorated by Sir William Chambers in 1770.

Bexley council's main concern has been to find someone prepared to meet the costs of doing up the 32-roomed mansion and its listed stables which stand in the middle of a public park. The council has considered a number of proposals ranging in cost from £500,000 to £1 million and have selected one for further consideration.

It seems likely the developer will be offered the house on a long lease at a peppercorn rent in return for a restoration package. Substantial grants are likely to be available from English Heritage and the G L C Historic Buildings Division—soon to be absorbed by English Heritage.

As with Grovelands, the existence of a number of schemes for redeveloping the house does not necessarily mean that any one of them will be accepted by the council or be brought to completion by the developer. The council is hedging its bets and would like to hear from anyone else who may be interested.

The National Trust is looking for a tenant for Sutton House in Hackney, an H-plan 16th-century house with alterations from 1600 and the early 18th-century, listed Grade Two star. Inside there is linenfold and 18th-century panelling, decorative plaster and good 17th-century doors.

The agents, Debenham, Tewson and Chinnocks say that the Trust is prepared to ask a nominal rent for a long leasehold providing the new tenant is prepared to tackle the considerable amount of work that needs doing to the roof—where lead has been stolen and water has penetrated — and provide new services which are in a very poor state.

Sutton House is too large, say the agents, to be really suitable for occupancy by a single family but one possible use is to turn it into a number of residential units or offices. The most recent estimate of the repair bill, for a scheme to turn it into offices, was £200,000 to £250,000.

Hackney, London's poorest borough, is littered with Georgian houses in an advanced state of decay. The council itself owns and is preparing to sell two: 85 Stoke Newington Church Street, an early to mid-18th century house and a very large building, 191 Stoke Newington High Street, a Grade Two (star) early 18th century mansion. Prices should be forthcoming soon from the borough valuer.

Danson Mansion, Danson Park, Bexley: a Grade One house designed by Sir Robert Taylor in the mid-18th-century is standing empty and in need of renovation.

The agent, R. B. James, is offering two Grade Two listed houses sited between two streets and known together as 109 Stoke Newington Road. One of them, Palatine House, is a Regency fronted, earlier farmhouse said to be extremely attractive. Both houses have lost many features and are in an advanced state of disrepair. The two together with planning permission for 11 modern town houses, are being offered for £260,000.

Palatine House is said once to have been the home of John Wesley, the preacher and writer of hymns, and the smaller house was once the home of Anna Sewell, the author of "Black Beauty."

Hackney is still a fertile hunting ground for lovers of Georgian architecture in search of a bargain. The proviso is that buyers must generally be prepared to spend time and money doing a place up. Hackney has been known for some time as what the borough of Islington was 20 or 30 years ago and prices are rising now many properties have been renovated.

As an example of what has happened in Hackney, 89 Stoke Newington Church Street, a listed building with a fine portico, was converted into two bedroomed flats. Flats were sold for £29,950 a year ago and the agent, R. B. James, tells me he will be asking another £10,000 apiece when some come back on to the market.

Dickens's London may be alive and well in parts of Hackney but gentrification is making its inexorable progress as in so many inner city areas. It does not always happen in time to save historic buildings.

Preservation of the experts

WHILE the Government's Bill to abolish the G L C and the metropolitan counties makes its way through Parliament, some uncertainty remains over future policy towards London's heritage of historic buildings — for the body responsible for them, the G L C Historic Buildings Division, is to disappear in 1986.

In fact, it seems that the Division, probably the least criticised part of the G L C, is to survive as part of English Heritage, the quango headed by Lord Montague of Beaulieu.

Though the future of most of the 60-odd experts who work for the Division seems assured, it is by no means clear yet that the new bureaucracy will pursue the same enlightened policy towards listed buildings. Ashley Barker, the Division's head, says of the new body: "The Bill seems to provide all the necessary powers we have now but the Secretary of State still has to make clear the level of funding and the policies that might be adopted."

These very large questions now lie at the door of the Environment Secretary, Patrick Jenkin, and we will undoubtedly be hearing them raised again.

Additional anxieties have been voiced by the Society for the Preservation of Ancient Buildings and other groups about the future of rather smaller numbers of heritage experts currently retained by the metropolitan counties—also to be abolished.

The G L C's large historic buildings staff is in part due to the council's unique position in the country as both a grant issuing authority and the authority in charge of awarding listed buildings consent for improvements.

To complicate matters further, some of the G L C Historic Buildings Division's functions are not mirrored by those of English Heritage in other parts of the country, for example the erecting of blue plaques on the front of houses in London where famous people have lived.

The G L C Historic Buildings Division has also pioneered grants to smaller, less significant listed buildings in their Town Schemes in Tottenham, Spitalfields, Kensington and Greenwich. Having used one of these to restore a derelict listed building myself in Spitalfields, I can vouch for the fact that various features have been preserved which would otherwise have been too costly to restore—though there is an argument which says that the availability of grants simply inflates the price it costs to buy the property in the first place.

THE HONG KONG CONNECTION
The current interest in UK residential property among the British and Chinese community in Hong Kong has led to another visit to the Colony by some of our senior partners. We will be mounting a Hampton & Sons Property Exhibition, in conjunction with Hongkew Davies our Far East associates, at the Mandarin Hotel on the 28th and 29th March 1985.
This will take the form of a display and video presentation of a wide range of London houses, London flats and country houses for sale, and central London furnished lettings, on behalf of our clients. Visitors to the Exhibition can also benefit from much valued advice on investment potential and our property management services.
If you would like more information about this venture, please contact us immediately.

SAD ENGLAND DOWN TO 12 FIT PLAYERS

By MICHAEL CAREY in Ballarat

SERIOUS injury to Tim Robinson, who has a broken thumb, and Chris Cowdrey, who may have fractured a wrist, left England with negligible satisfaction from their four-run win over a Victorian State XI in Ballarat yesterday.

The chances are they will be down to 12 fit players for most, if not all, their remaining matches in the World Cricket Championship, having been obliged to declare their squad of 14 on Sunday.

Robinson, whose right thumb was put in a splint soon after he was struck in the seventh over of the match, is likely to need a month to recover.

Cowdrey batted on after being hit but, although bruising was diagnosed, he fears his left wrist may be broken and is to have a second X-ray.

Gatting X-ray

It could have been worse, for on a day when England dominated the out-patients' department of the local hospital, if not the match, Mike Gatting also had an X-ray on a hand damaged in Sunday's game.

But it is only bruised, and he at least will be fit, though he will miss the next up-country match at Bendigo tomorrow as a precaution.

What good news there was concerned the efforts of England's spinners. Viv Marks and Phil Edmonds, plus Allan Lamb, whose vigorous 95 from 71 balls earned him the Man of the Match award, which, unsurprisingly in this part of the world, consisted of a gold nugget.

There were, alas, not too many nuggets of gold among England's faster bowlers, Cowans, Agnew and Foster, who, although they tightened up towards the end, yielded no fewer than 170 runs between them from 25 overs.

The rousing start that they permitted the Victorian XI, a full State side minus only Jones, Hogg and O'Donnell, who are playing in the World Championship, enabled them to come close to inflicting defeat on England after they had made 268 for five from 50 overs.

England's resources were so embarrassingly stretched that Lamb was pressed into service at a point when the State team needed only 17 from seven overs with four wickets left and more orthodox sources had failed to produce the length and line required.

In two impeccable overs of medium pace, Lamb gave away only four runs, which induced an hitherto improbable measure of self-doubt to what seemed to be a match-winning partnership of 88 between Bright and King.

It also encouraged Lamb's peers in the England attack, and the impressive King, after finding much that could be pulled or cut, was persuaded by their new-found accuracy to slog unnecessarily at Foster, and Gower caught him off the resulting top-edge.

If this was a piece of luck England had scarcely earned, there was nothing wrong with their out-cricket, and soon afterwards Ellison, the substitute, completed a trio of excellent catches with diving efforts off McCarthy and Bright at mid-on and long-off, to see England home with 10 balls left.

Risks involved

All this was much to the liking of a good crowd on a glorious day and on a ground where England had first appeared in 1882 and had last been led by W. R. Hammond in 1947.

Gratifying though it was for those, like myself, who believe these fixtures should be maintained, the game was a reminder of the risks involved for a touring side in alien conditions.

Here this meant not only a bumpy outfield, which is used for Australian Rules Football, but also a hard, well-grassed pitch from which the ball bounced generously and on which England's fast bowlers—presuming a degree of straightness—might have been lethal, had Gower won the toss.

It was probably the quickest pitch England have encountered on this tour, and although Victoria had no one of outstanding pace, Robinson quickly met a ball from McCarthy, making his first appearance for the State, which lifted from around a length and hit the end of his thumb.

Some time later, Cowdrey was struck by a ball from Davis, which came back to hit him on the wrist which had been recently struck by Ellison during net practice.

His arm was in a sling last night, and he said he felt the pain might mean the injury was more than bruising.

The sight of the ball bouncing, however, is a perennial temptation to fast bowlers, especially those lacking experience, to dig it in short.

Whatmore and Yallop, both former Test players, could probably have hardly believed their luck in finding their strength at pulling and cutting fed with increasing regularity.

Between times, the ball also flew all over the place, off top edges and such like, and the pair added 152 from only 18 overs for the second wicket before Yallop was caught in the deep off Marks.

With Edmonds finding excellent control at the other end, Marks completed a spell of five for 16 in 33 deliveries, finishing with Whatmore, who missed a worthy hundred by only one when top-edging his 85th delivery.

HARRISON IN ATHENS SQUAD

By KEN MAYS

ROB HARRISON, from Liverpool, will be hoping to maintain his unbeaten indoor record when he competes for Britain in the European Championships in Athens on March 2-3.

Harrison, 25, who began indoor running last year with two England internationals, has been nominated in a 19-strong squad at either the 1,500 or 800 metres.

It is almost certain, however, that he will compete over the shorter distance.

He won the 1,500 metres in the national championships and also against West Germany, but reverted to the 800 metres against Italy in Genoa on Saturday, where he recorded a personal best 1min. 47·81sec.

"I have qualified for both events in Athens and would like to know the opposition for the 1,500 metres. At this stage I'm edging towards the 800 metres because I have more experience at the distance," he said.

Seeking third win

But the Liverpool Polytechnic student will have his mind on something else today, for he is running in the Merseyside Colleges local league cross-country event where he hopes to gain his third victory of the season.

It could mean that Britain will be without a 1,500-metre runner in the match for, although the selectors have named Lynn Macdougall, from Glasgow, who celebrated her 20th birthday on Monday, she is almost certain to refuse the invitation.

The selectors have medals in mind in the men's match, for all 12 chosen are track athletes. Diana Davies and Judy Oakes are the only two field competitors in the squad.

Roger Black, as expected, joins his Southampton colleagues, Todd Bennett and Kris Akabusi, in the 400 metres. Akabusi, an army PT sergeant, wins selection after a fine relay run in Italy.

Efforts rewarded

There are several athletes who did well in Italy who have gained reward for their efforts, including Earl Tulloch and Lindford Christie, who join Ade Mafe in the 200 metres.

Colin Jackson is also chosen alongside his Cardiff colleague Nigel Walker and Jon Ridgeon, the Newmarket youngster, who won the national 60 metres hurdles championship last month and a bronze medal in the World Games.

Kirsty McDermott, the Commonwealth 800 metres champion, has proved a rejuvenated runner this season, after all the disappointments of 1984, and deserves her selection.

Boat Race—April 6

Female 'Henry' Cambridge cox

By GEOFFREY PAGE

TWO records have already been set in this year's Boat Race, some six and a half weeks before the crews are due to meet. Bruce Philp, 22, will become the first rowing Blue to change his allegiance from Cambridge to Oxford, and Henrietta Shaw, also 22, the first woman to steer Cambridge.

The crews, announced yesterday by the two presidents, contain two surprises. Last year's Cambridge stroke, John Kinsella, has lost his place to Louis Pasternak as a result of last weekend's seat racing, while a similar fate has overtaken Oxford's Canadian, Tim Evans.

Brother of the twins, Mark and Mike, who rowed twice for Oxford before going on to win gold medals in the Canadian Olympic eight last summer, Evans was edged out in Oxford's final tests by the Isis oarsman Matthew Thomas.

Thomas stroked Isis yesterday in tthe postponed final trial and pushed Oxford hard enough to gain his place, and so Chris Bourne, who stroked thte senior crew yesterday, has once again just failed to find a seat.

Tradition varied

In yesterday's formal challenge issued by Cambridge at a reception given by Ladbroke's, now in the ninth year of Boat Race sponsorship, John Garrett, the president, varied the traditional challenge to that used a few years ago when Sue Brown was chosen to cox Oxford.

He invited Oxford to select "nine good men and true" to row against his eight "plus one good woman and true." Thus Miss Shaw, known as "Henry" becomes only th esecond woman to steer in the race after 150 previous contests.

Miss Shaw's father, Giles Shaw, the Home Affairs Minister, was also a cox at his daughter's college, steering Lady Margaret, the boat club of St John's, in 1954. "He knows something of what it's about," she said.

However, she is firmly against following her father into a political career when she goes down from Cambridge later in the year. Appropriately, for a person of 6½ st, she is more interested in health foods.

A vegetarian, who won a half-Blue in cros country running, she is determined to trim several pounds before th erace.

Asked about her ability to avoid moored barges before the race, following her immediate predecessor's unfortunate contretemps, "Henry" commented: "I'll probably get my eyes tested beforehand." So far, in practice, she has shown good judgment.

For Philip, selection for Oxford presents a great chalenge which he has been quick to accept. Twice in the losing crew when he rowed for Cambridge in 1984 and 1985, and demoted to Goldie last year, he has something to prove.

His motivation to succeed this year is considerable. Asked if he felt he was being disloyal to his old university, he commented wryly that there was a long history of traitors at Cambridge.

But he did not think anybody was upset by his defection. Garrett was magnanimous about it yesterday. "If he wants to further his rowing career, Oxford is a very good place to do it," he said.

The Challenge

Now hear this, all ye citizens of London.

I, John Garrett, as is laid down in accordance with the University Boat Race Official Charter, hereby challenge you, Lynton Richmond, to select nine good men and true from the University of Oxford to row against eight good men and true and one good woman and true from the University of Cambridge over four and a quarter miles on the River Thames, London, from the University Boat Race stone at Putney to Mortlake over the Championship course.

On acceptance of the challenge we shall meet on the aforesaid River Thames at 2.45 p.m. on Saturday, 6th April 1985, where our skills and endurance will be put to the test.

Do you accept my challenge?

IMRAN IS BACK IN THE FRAY

Imran Khan, Pakistan's leading all-rounder, said he nearly dropped out of the World Championship of Cricket in Australia because of his mother's death.

Imran, whose availability has now given Pakistan's chances an enormous boost, flew home last week to be with his mother who was dying of cancer.

Pakistan meet India under floodlights today at Melbourne following the postponement of yesterday's match at Sydney between West Indies and New Zealand because of rain. That match will now be played tomorrow.

WOMEN'S ONE-DAY INTERNATIONAL (New Delhi): New Zealand 174-7, India 172.

"I could never suggest an old folks home to my parents."

So what's the alternative?

Most people react in the same way whenever this difficult subject is raised. Phrases like "we must be practical" and "it's best for all concerned" do nothing to ease the nagging doubts that one is somehow neglecting one's responsibilities.

It's a fact that the hardest decisions rarely have soft options, but in this case Bryant believe they've found the answer in their purpose built private retirement flats in some prime locations:- Lavender Court, Farnborough; Heather Court, Chichester; and Primrose Court, Steyning.

Look at the advantages and both you and your parents will realise what a good move this could be.
- The privacy and independence of a self contained luxurious 1 or 2 bed flat
- Companionship available in the common room
- Low running costs
- Switches, fittings, etc designed for ease of use
- Communal laundry facilities
- Assistance of a resident warden
- Guest room for visitors
- Carefully chosen locations with good all-round facilities
- Releases capital tied up in a large house no longer needed

LEOPARDSTOWN THAW OFFERS ARARUN HOPES

By HOTSPUR

WARMER weather offers hope that the long blank spell for racing will soon be over. Two Irish meetings today, at Leopardstown and Downpatrick, hinge on 7 a.m. inspections, although there will be no racing in Britain before Friday at the earliest.

Tomorrow's meetings at Folkestone and Wincanton suffered abandonment yesterday, and Friday's meetings at Kempton Park and Southwell are in doubt because of frost.

Kempton inspect at 3 p.m. today, and Michael Webster, clerk of the course, offered little hope yesterday, saying: "Unless we get a significant thaw for 24 hours, prospects are not bright."

Frost also threatens the Southwell programme, but with rain forecast, the Nottinghamshire course are delaying their inspection until 9.30 a.m. tomorrow.

High-class card

Leopardstown are likely to reap the benefit of being able to postpone meetings, a facility denied other than the most important British fixtures. Today's high-class card features the Grand National favourite, Greasepaint, and Ireland's most promising Champion Hurdle hope, Ararun.

Paddy Mullins, who guided Dawn Run to championship honours last season, has a ready-made successor to his brilliant mare in Ararun, whose six victories in a row over jumps could hardly have been predicted by his far less impressive credentials in bumpers' events on the Flat.

Ararun won three times from 14 starts in Flat races, but since switching to hurdles, he has won all his races with great authority. He did not begin over hurdles until last October, and has completed his six-timer despite a short break because of a minor injury.

Ararun returned for a long-distance novices' event over today's course at the beginning of the month, winning by a distance from the moderate Autumn Tide, and should win comfortably today.

Local bookmakers rate Ararun an odds-on chance to beat today's Wessel Cable Hurdle opposition, which is weakened by the absence of his stable-companion Passage Creeper, who is coughing.

Bajan Sunshine, winner of last season's valuable Tia Maria Handicap Hurdle at Haydock Park has an excellent chance of earning place money, but the sharp inner circuit of the track will not help a horse whose main asset is stamina.

The other fascinating runner in the Wessel Cables Hurdle is the four-year-old Tondbad, successful in the significant juvenile trial, the Duffy Meats Hurdle, at the Leopardstown Christmas meeting.

Tondbad, trained by Greasepaint's handler Dermot Weld, had the alternative of a clash with contemporaries at Punchestown on Saturday. A prominent showing today would give this filly's supporters encouragement about her Daily Express Triumph Hurdle prospects.

Tondbad, a 14-1 chance in latest batting, is the shortest-priced Irish challenger.

Greasepaint's task in the Harold Clarke Lepoardstown 'Chase over three miles has not been helped by the overnight withdrawal of the former Cheltenham Gold Cup winner Bregawn.

Paddy Mullins, who recently took charge of Bregawn, is keeping the 11-year-old in reserve for the Ladbrokes National Trial over three and threequarter miles on Saturday and Greasepaint now carries 12st.

Rain in Ireland

There was steady rain at Leopardstown yesterday afternoon, so the goin gwill be testing. Under such conditions, the lightly-weighted Clonthturtin may be better value.

Cheltenham candidates Boreen Prince, Buck House, Lucisis, and Gays Delight promise a thrilling encounter in the Wessel Arkle Perpetual Challenge Cup, won last year by Bobsline. The six-year-old Lucisis, from the Bobsline table, was well behind Boreen Prince at Fairyhouse, but should do better over today's shorter trip.

Big freeze brings out best in Pipe enterprise

By DANIEL COUPLAND

WHILE most trainers have been left counting the cost of the recent freeze. Martin Pipe is reaping the rewards of his enterprise with 10 wins from his last 33 runners.

Pipe, 39, has run up these impressive figures during a period when 67 of the 112 meetings scheduled have been lost to the weather.

Battling against the elements in an area famed for its cider apples, the Somerset trainer says there is no secret behind his recent success. "It's a matter of being prepared for every eventuality," he says.

"We completed a seven-furlong all-weather gallop last October, but there was no point if we allowed ourselves to get snowed in, so we went out and bought a snow-blowing machine and haven't missed a day's work all winter."

With 25 winners this season, Pipe is on course to beat last season's best total of 32, and looking around his impressive yard it is not difficult to appreciate that he has the best training facilities in the West Country.

His stable, sited on a 300-acre farm, houses a walking machine for eight horses, a weighing machine, an equine pool and a solarium. He has a bungalow for some of his staff, and is in the process of completing a hostel for 15 lads, a covered ride, and a laboratory in which he will check on the blood counts of his horses.

The hostel was once used as council offices in Taunton but the portable building has been assembled in Pipe's yard along with a part of the local railway station, which covers the barn area. "Dad's marvellous at picking up bargains," Pipe says.

In eight years Pipe has transformed a broken-down pig farm into an impressive training establishment for 32 National Hunt horses and 18 others being prepared for the Flat.

"My uncle used to train point-to-pointers on the farm," Pipe says, "and that whetted my appetite. He taught me to ride and although I was never much good, the bookmakers cheered to a man when I rode my first winner between the flags at Bishops Leigh in Devon.

Ironic reminder

"Being the son of a Taunton bookmaker helped, but they were really cheering because I upset the odds-on favourite."

That first winner was called Weather Permitting, an ironic reminder of the present stop-start winter campaign.

After only five rides under Rules and a broken thigh sustained at Taunton, Pipe started training as a permit-holder in 1977. Two years later he applied for a full licence and chalked up 12 winners in his first season.

Baron Blakeney . . . Pipe's first big-race winner.

"Most of my victories came from sellers in those days and my policy has not changed much since. There are a lot of bad races around and I have often bought a horse specifically to win one of them."

Pipe has also shown that given the right horse he is capable of winning big races, as Baron Blakeney proved in the 1981 DAILY EXPRESS Triumph Hurdle.

"To this day I don't know how he started at 66-1," he says. "He was rated ninth on juvenile form and only 10lb below Broadsword, the favourite. At those odds we all had a nice touch and Bob Wheatley, his owner, won £100,000 on the race."

It is not often that Pipe's horses start at those odds and his stable is renowned for having a tilt at the ring, with several coups leaving his father's bookmaking friends out of pocket.

The name Carrie-Ann brings a smile of satisfaction to Pipe's face as he recalls her wi nat 33-1 in a selling handicap hurdle at Haydock Park in 1979.

"She had been off the course for two years with leg trouble, but she was as genuine as they come and I knew I had her spot-on for the race. I've loved Haydock ever since."

Royal Ascot success

Royal Ascot also holds a special place in his memory, after his win with Right Regent in the Ascot Stakes. "It was a marvellous experience," he says. "My wife Carol was all dressed up with her Ascot hat on and there we were greeting our Royal winner.

"Right Regent is the Rolls Royce of the stable. He stays for ever and loves soft ground. I think he has a tremendous chance in the Coral Golden Hurdle Final at Cheltenham next month."

Pipe hopes to run six others at the Festival meeting but with three entries, his plans for the Triumph Hurdle have had to be put on ice until the weather relents.

Quickstep best

"I've entered Irish Lord, Hieronymous and Quickstep. Quickstep cost 22,000gns out of Clive Brittain's stable and I think he's the best of them. He hasn't been out yet, but I'm hoping to run him at Kempton on Saturday.

"He works brilliantly but time is running short and I may have trouble qualifying him for the race."

Pipe adds confidently, "Quickstep will be there—weather permitting."

CLASSIC'S BIG GAME GALLERY

By ADRIAN FREDERICK in Phalaborwa

A COURSE on which the emphasis is more on non-golfing terms like elephant, lion and hippo than on birdies and eagles is the venue for the eighth leg of the Sunshine Circuit, the £50.000 Phalaborwa Classic, which begins in South Africa today.

The Hans Merensky Club—named after a mining pioneer who discovered vast copper and phosphate deposits in the arae—is built on land that once belonged to the Kruger National Park, one of the world's major game reserves.

Indeed, the eastern boundary of the course is th epark itself and it is not uncommon for golfers to tee off under the curious stare of wildlife like giraffes, buffalo, buck and elephant.

A herd of 15 hippo has set up home in the dam over which the short 17th is played, while nine lion and leopard kills have been recorded on the 20-year-old course.

Leopard's kill

During construction workers were constantly confronted by wild animals and reptiles and there was many a dash for safety from the threat of an angry elephant or a stalking cat.

The most recent kill, about five years ago, occurred alongside the sixth tee and the leopard dragged its prey into the upper branches of a nearby tree.

The club offers the added attraction of a first-class championship lay-out. This is the first time that a Sunshine Circuit tournament has been played here in the North-eastern Transvaal.

The British challenge has been weakened by the return home of Des Smyth while Paul Way, the winner of the Charity Classic 10 days ago, has also gone back.

Warren Humphreys, Ian Mosey and Mark Johnson are all in the top 20 on the money list, while Andrew Chndler will be hoping to continue where he left off in the Charity Classic when he recorded a career-best third.

There is also incentive for last year's European Rookie of the year, Philip Prkin, who is only 35th on the money list and needs to get into the top 30 to earn exempt status next year.

The Wild Coast Tournament which was washed without a shot being played last week, has been re-scheduled for March 14-17 and the orangisers are hoping to feature Open champion Seve Ballesteros as the main attraction.

Monaco go ahead as peace pact is agreed

By BRIAN ALLEN

AFTER teetering on the brink of extinction for many months, the Monaco Grand Prix, most glamorous of motor races, now looks certain to take place on May 19 as the fourth round in the World Championship series.

Following a whole chapter of almost desperate meetings between the many interested parties in the past few days — including one staged by sponsors in Switzerland at the weekend — a compromise agreement was announced yesterday in Paris.

A special meeting of the assembly of the FIA (the International Automobile Federation) met yesterday to vote on a recommendation to expel the Monaco Automobile Club and so ban them from staging a world championship race.

The meeting decided, by 54 votes to two, not to throw out the Monaco club, subject to lawyers from both sides agreeing by March 2 to certain recommendations.

Pressure from sponsors

These are that the FIA should have the television rights for the race, that the club drops a series of lawsuits against the FIA, and reimburses the FIA for legal expenses said to amount to some £70,000.

Though yesterday's agreement is being described as a compromise, there seems little doubt that it is a climb-down by Monaco.

Pressure has undoubtedly come from sponsors, for whom the Monaco GP is the jewel in their motor racing crown, and from the Formula One constructors whose major income comes from sponsors.

At issue was the thorny question of the television rights for the race, which the club had assigned to the American network, ABC.

There has been a long-standing feud between Michel Boeri, president of the Monaco Automobile Club, and Jean-Marie Balestre, president of FISA, motor sport's ruling body, which brought the recent on-off-on situation for the Monte Carlo Rally.

M. Boeri was making optimistic noises after yesterday's meeting. He claimed Monaco was not a rich club, but anticipates help from "friends"—in other words, sponsors—to help defray the legal charges.

Award for Llewellin

By COLIN DRYDEN

The Pirelli-Triple C Diamond Award, worth £1,000, was presented in London yesterday to David Llewellin, 24, of Haverfordwest, South Wales, for his outstanding performances in winning the 1984 RAC Nationall Rally Championship.

He is competing in this year's RAC Open Championship in a works supported Audi Quattro alongside Michelle Mouton. Previous winners of the award include world rally champions Hannu Mikkola and Stig Blomqvist.

£150,000 TOUR OF IRELAND

By PHIL LIGGETT

Alan Rushton, the British promoter who in two years has transformed the image of professional cycle racing in Britain, turned his attention to Ireland yesterday when he announced a £150,000 Nissan sponsorship for a five days Tour of Ireland in September.

The Nissan International Classic will be Ireland's richest-ever race attracting home rider's Sean Kelly and Stephen Roche as well as other top Continental names. The Irishmen ranked one and five in the world, have been forced to live abroad for some years because of a lack of competition at home.

Pat McQuaid, Ireland's national trainer, who will direct the race from Sept. 25 to 29, said: "It's the greatest happening to Irish cycling ever. At last we can capitalise on the success of Kelly and Roche."

Point-to-Point

FIXTURE LIST DECIMATED BY WEATHER

By DAVID WELCH

REFLECTING on the way unfavourable weather had hit point-to-pointing in the last two seasons, Mackenzie and Selby expressed the hope in the latest edition of "Point to Pointers and Hunter Chasers" that 1985 would be a "normal year."

Unfortunately, the present cold spell is no more suitable for racing than the heavy rain of 1983 or the drought of last year.

More meetings have been lost in the first three weeks of this season than in the whole of last year.

In 1984 four were cancelled. This season seven have been called off and, although four hunts hope to rearrange fixtures, three are scheduled for Saturday, when hopes of racing cannot be high, and the Lanark and Renfrew will race only in the event of the Berwickshire's being off.

Cambridgeshire Harriers have postponed their fixture at Cottenham until May 22, but even that move is not without its cost.

They were due to stage the first of 20 qualifying races for the Diners Club Men's Open final 11 days ago. Now their meeting will be too late for those placed in the race to be entered for the Chepstow final five days later.

East Anglian horses have been hard hit by the freeze. Two meetings have been lost and both were due to stage Diners Club races. Only one qualifier in the series which has yet to get under-way, remains in their area, at Horseheath on April 13.

Return ruled out

Pre-season favourites for the £6,000 Final included former Josh Gifford-trained Royal Judgement, new to hunter-chasing this year but previously a most accomplished handicapper.

The 12-year-old has won two races at Chepstow but perhaps his most noteworthy moment there was when failing by four lengths to give 12lb to Burrough Hill Lad in the Welsh Grand National 14 months ago.

New handler Jean Campbell was looking forward to a return visit to the course in May but Lady Rootes, the gelding's owner, has ruled that out as "too obviously a case of pot-hunting."

To reach the final Royal Judgement would have had to finish in the first two in a point-to-point qualifier, but Lady Rootes has insisted that Royal Judgement should not run between the flags.

Instead, Royal Judgement, described by Mrs Campbell as "better than ever" after being hunted by her Australian assistant Jan Edwards, will be aimed at hunter-chases at Lingfield Park (Feb. 28), Wincanton (March 7) and Ascot (April 3).

There are three divisions of the Men's Open at both the Army meeting at Tweseldown on Saturday (115 entries) and Cottenham's Cambridge University fixture (82).

Clair Muir's Scottish import Colonel Henry is perhaps the most interesting entry in division one at Tweseldown, where there will be a preliminary inspection of the course this afternoon.

SATURDAY'S FIXTURES

By Our Irish Correspondent

TOMMY CARMODY may be the jockey to follow at Leopardstown today when he has bright prospects of a treble with Dancing Guy (2.15), Buck House (2.45) and GREASEPAINT (3.45).

Greasepaint, a leading contender for the Seagram Grand National, was not disgraced, third to Larry's Latest over two and a half miles here last time. He will be better suited by the extra distance of today Harold Clarke Leopardstown 'Chase.

Dancing Guy won with something in hand at Clonmel last time and is fancied to follow up in the Stillorgan Hurdle. The four-year-old took the lead two flights out to win by four lengths, with Carmody easing him on the run-in.

Mouse Morris, who trains Dancing Guy, may complete a double with Buck House in the Wessel Arkle Perpetual Challenge Cup 'Chase. Buck House belied his 7-1 starting price with a facile victory over Knockawad here last month and is expected to outstay Boreen Prince.

Carmody, who rides Tondbad, may be foiled of a four-timer by Ararun in the Wessel Cable Champion Hurdle. Ararun, unbeaten in six races over hurdles, will be at short odds to retain his record.

Loser Alfred rewarded with Dewhurst Prize

By BILL EDWARDS

LEIGHTON ALFRED, the Welsh No. 1, suffered his expected defeat at the hands of Jeremy Bates in the LTA satellite Masters at the David Lloyd Club, Heston, yesterday—but not all was lost.

As he sat in the dressing-room afterwards, covering his head in towel to hide disappointment, John Feaver, the tournament director, gave him the news of a £500 bonus.

This was the special prize awarded by Dewhurst, the butchers, for the young British player showing most progress in results, attitude and sportsmanship on the five weeks' circuit.

Alfred, who lost to the eventual winner, in the first three of of the four tournaments leading up to the Masters, is a popular choice and this award will help him considerably in his drive for more experience.

His determination to do well was most evident against Bates who was kept on court for 95 minutes to win 7-6, 6-2. They had a tremendous tussle in the opening set where in the absence of a service break it was decided on a 10 points tie breaker.

Punch missing

It was all so near but Alfred, despite his fine ground stroke, could not find the winning punch when he had two advantage points to go ahead 4-2. He eventually gained a service break for 2-1 in the second set but that was the end of the road.

Bates suddenly took off with five straight games to win the match. Bates is now left as the only home survivor of the six who began the first round.

He now faces Morten Christensen, the Danish Kings Cup player who did not cause him a lot of problems when they met in the second tournament three weeks ago.

Christensen relies mainly on his big service but he is inclined to be erratic and Bates must be confident of reaching the semi-final.

It was the same old disappointing story for British players when Richard Whichello went down to Bruce Derlin of New Zealand. Derlin, at 129, was the highest-ranked player on the world computer when the circuit started so that Whichello, at 745, need not be too dismayed at the 6-4, 6-3 score.

Making progress

He fought strongly all the way, producing a lot of fine shots but at 17 he is still learning his trade and making fine progress.

He held out until the ninth game before conceding the service that decided the third set while the break came for 5-2 in the second set after Whichello had missed two break points in the previous game.

It did not help that only one game was played in the first hour of the match when play was suspended for mopping up operations to deal with condensation that had left pools on the court.

Stefan Eriksson, of Sweden, was much too strong for the Dutchman John Vekemans at 6-1, 6-2 while Mark Albert, of Holland, beat Lior Rusinek of the US 6-1, 6-4.

FIRST ROUND: M. Albert (Holland) bt L. Rusinek (U.S.) 6-1, 6-4; B. Derlin (NZ) bt R. Whichello 6-4, 6-3; S. Eriksson (Sweden) bt J. Vekemans (Holland) 6-1, 6-2; J. Bates bt L. Alfred 7-6, 6-2.

World Championship Boxing

ODDS AGAINST MAGRI STAYING THE DISTANCE

By KEN MAYS

CHARLIE MAGRI will attempt to become one of the elite among British boxers when he challenges Sot Chitalada, of Thailand, for the world flyweight championship at the Alexandra Park Pavilion, North London, tonight.

Britain have had a sprinkling of world champions, but once they lost their crowns they never got them back. That is what Magri attempts tonight.

The little East Londoner held the title in 1983 but lost it in his first defence against Filipino Frank Cedeno in six rounds.

Charlie Atkinson, the Liverpool trainer who spends a lot of time in Thailand coaching Chitalada, is confident the champion will leave London with his title intact.

"He is far tougher than Cedeno and certainly twice as good as Elencio Mercedes, from whom Magri took the title. I believe he has the strength around the body, has an iron chin and the ideal temperament," stresses Atkinson.

Confident Lawless

But Magri's manager, Terry Lawless, is confident the public will see a new-style Magri who can cause an upset.

"He is a different boxer, not so fast and fiery as he used to be but much smarter. He has matured," said Lawless.

In the past Magri often appeared to run out of steam from the fifth round onwards, as when he was stopped by Juan Diaz and Jose Torres, both in the ninth round.

While Chitalada has been a busy little fighter, Magri has had only one contest since his world title defeat—and that lasted less than three minutes.

But it was a superb victory, for he stopped Franco Cherchi, of Italy, to regain the European title in Sardinia last August.

£40,000 reward

Normally, Magri would have become more involved if a world title had been on the cards, but it was only the persuasive actions of promoter Frank Warren with a £120,000 cheque that got the Thai to come to Britain.

Magri will get around £40,000 for his efforts, but it is the chance he is delighted with. "I did not expect to get back so soon," he said.

"Now I have a chance to make up for the last time because I know that I should not have lost."

But whether Magri can do it is debatable. Even with such large support from almost on his own doorstep, the odds appear to favour the champion—inside the distance.

Promoter Warren has an option on Magri's first defence if he wins the title. Yesterday he cabled Beunos Aires with an offer for Santos Laciar, the World Boxing Association champion, to come to London to fight for the undisputed title.

It would be an ideal fight for Magri, for he outpointed Laciar at the Royal Albert Hall two years ago, before the Argentine went on to win his title.

Rodney out

Mr Warren also suffered a setback last night when Prince Rodney, of Huddersfield, withdrew from his British light-middleweight title chalenge to Jimmy Cable with chickenpox.

It was the third time that Rodney has had to miss a fight with Cable, first as champion in 1983 with a damaged cheekbone and then late last year. Gary Cooper, the Southern area champion, is being considered as a possible replacement.

How they compare

MAGRI		CHITALADA
28	Age	22
8st	Weight	8st
5ft 3½in	Height	5ft 4in
64in	Reach	65in

Charlie Magri . . . 'not so fast and fiery—but much smarter,' says his manager.

£500,000 TO 'OPEN DOORS'

By PAT BESFORD

THE Sports Council has been given a special grant of £500,000 from Government this year and will recieve similar amounts in the future to encourage dual pupil and public use of sporting facilities in educational establishments.

Neil MacFarlane, the Minister for Sport, launching a joint initiative under the title "Open Doors," said: "Every facility source needs to be tapped for the benefit of the wider community.

"Many areas, through strong local commitment, have already recognised such dual use can be managed profitably. I have now written to the leader of every local authority and am hoping that head teachers, caretakers and so on will help to open more doors."

Dual use of often exceptional facilities, all to often closed in the evenings, at weekends and during holidays, is not a new idea.

However, this new funding will help to meet the initial expenses of setting up further schemes, in co-operation with clubs or other voluntary bodies, until they become self-supporting.

The most effective way for the Minister to unlock the doors would be for him to persuade his colleagues especially at the Department of Education and Science, to ensure the public has a statutory right of access to what are "closed" areas. This would need legislation.

Royal Free battle home under siege

By RUPERT CHERRY

King's College ... 3 pts, Royal Free ... 23

They were under almost constant siege, yet scored practically every time they broke away, winning by a goal, two penalty goals, a dropped goal and two tries against a penalty goal.

King's have never got beyond the second round since their only appearance in the final exactly 50 years ago.

Mobile pack

Here they not only had a strong mobile pack—especially their leader Edmondson, an extremely swift prop—who won a great deal of the ball, but back who constantly tried to attack by running and bringing in their wings.

However, they had not quite sufficient guile or confidence in their handling to outwit the experience of Dave Walsh (London Irish), Tony Watkinson (Oxford Blue) and David Hughes in the Royal Free midfield.

Walsh's kicking did most to keep the enemy at bay, and after he had dropped a goal and scored a penalty goal he converted a magnificent try by David Holdsworth, a new wing from Wakefield.

Watkinson and John Hare, the captain, added tries and Walsh kicked another penalty goal in the second half. All King's could muster from about 70 minutes' intense pressure was a penalty goal by Fletcher.

The Royal Free, last season's losing finalists, will meet Charing Cross-Westminster in a semi-final tomorrow week at Richmond Athletic Ground. The other semi-final between St Mary's and Guys will be played at Teddington today.

RORC's rule forces name changes

By TONY FAIRCHILD

THE British team for the Admiral's Cup this summer and the squad to challenge for the Southern Cross trophy in Australian waters at the end of the year are to be sponsored by Racal Vodophone.

The news came yesterday at the naming ceremony at Lymington of Martin Gibson's new, Edward Dubois-designed Admiral's Cup contender—originally to be named Racal Vodophone.

But following a recent announcement that a ban is to remain on advertising of individual off-shore yachts this season Mr Gibson's loss £50,000 turns out to be the Royal Ocean Racing Club's gain.

Mr Gibson, a London property developer, reverted to an earlier choice of name—Pocket Battleship—and the naming ceremony of the £250,0000 boat built by Neville Hutton was carried out by the owner's mother.

Mr Gibson said of his change of fortune: "There was never, at any time, a chance that we should do anything but abide by the RORC rules and we shall get on now with the task of earning selection for the Admiral's Cup team."

His decision to seek sponsorships for his yacht followed the relaxation in November by the International Yacht Racing Union of regulations controlling advertising.

Protests warning

When the RORC, who also run the Admiral's Cup competition, announced that the advertising ban was to stay for this season at least — except for entries for the club's Caribbean race — Mr Gibson handed back the Racal money and chose a non-controversial name.

The RORC, whose team for the Southern Cross will face a total bill of around £100,000 — the extent of the Racal support has not been disclosed — warned of the dangers of protests over yachts with commercially related names. Some other owners could now follow Mr Gibson's example.

The RORC, who already have a 10-year contract with Champagne Mumm for sponsrship of the Admiral's Cup, have now agreed to give Vodophone "first refusal" on further sponsorship of their team after this season's "test run."

TWO RECORDS RATIFIED

By DAVID PELLY

Two world sailing speed records were formally ratified by the World Sailing Speed Record Committee in London yesterday.

Jenna de Rosnay, the American-born widow of Baron Arnaud de Rosnay, was confirmed as holder of the women's world record of 27·09 knots, achieved at Portland Harbour, Dorset, last October.

Speed trials held near Perth, Australia, during December, resulted in a record for "A" class 10 square metres to 13·94 metres sail area of 27·09 knots by Fred Haywood, of the United States. Haywood already held the record for the smaller ten square metres class.

Rugby Commentary by JOHN MASON

Cup game not that special—Mantell

NOTTINGHAM, who last winter set a club record for points in a season, are in a quandary. How do they play down something they know to be important — the John Player Special Cup match with London Welsh on Saturday?

As club rugby in Britain attempts to resume a semblance of normality in this winter of chilly discontent, Nottingham are mindful that the essential sequels to progress are consistency and consolidation.

For nine years Nottingham made little impression in the Cup, five times falling in the first round. But in the last four seasons the club, befitting a well-planned advance on all fronts, have done considerably better than that.

A sympathetic committee, a first-class coach and comfortable well-equipped facilities have ensured that Nottingham's players can concentrate on the business they know best — the playing of an all-round game which can be expanded, or shut down, as circumstances require.

Not a mountain

Neil Mantell, Nottingham's captain and a hugely welcome recruit from Rosslyn Park after a new job had taken him to Alfreton, Derbyshire, would agree with the playing assessment. But he, above all, insists that the next match must never be thought as a mountain to climb.

"Our approach must be orderly and sensible", said Mantell yesterday. "But ideally the next match, whoever against and in whatever context, should be regarded as just another fixture in a season of important games. Sometimes we freeze—and not because of the weather.

"This is a capable side, make no mistake about that. The difference in recent seasons, I think, is that Nottingham have acquired a reasonable strength in depth, a cover for injuries and the like, which previously was probably a bit thin—the odd good result but not consistency.

"The Cup record, for example, in recent seasons has been much much better and we got to the semi-finals last year having started in the qualifying rounds. That meant five Cup matches in a season which I think was a record of some sort.

"The club also scored more than 800 points in the season overall which was another record, so they tell me. I think perhaps that players bother less about that sort of thing than some followers off the field. Did I tell you about the journalist who came to see us at the start of the season. . . ."

"I reckon a playing style is much more important than records. Anyway, the records probably come in the wake of other things if you've got your game right in the first place. And piling up points migh be enjoyable but winning is more important still.

"Just at the moment, too, the players want to know what the prospects of playing are. This on-off business is most unsettling, far more disturbing than people realise."

As an indication of Mantell's philosophy, which also includes a fair measure of off-duty relaxation spiced by a droll sense of humour, Nottingham trained indoors at the Trent Sports Hall last Saturday and on Monday evening. The Cambridge contingent attended both sessions.

Rob Andrew, England's outside-half, who will have Richard Moon, his University colleague, as his half-back partner, has so far trained longer with Nottingham than he has played—one appearance of about an hour against Rosslyn Park on Jan. 19.

Unique Welsh

The Welsh, surprisingly, do not have an outstanding record in the Cup, an observation, I suppose, which some, including Clive Rees, the captain, might find irritating. But I intend it as a compliment, because London Welsh make a unique contribution to the game in England.

The analysis of results between Welsh and English clubs over the past 10 years, which were expertly set out by Michael Austin in the DAILY TELEGRAPH last week, indicate an English debt to the Welsh which would be idiotic not to acknowledge.

It would be tempting to cite the example of Bath as the English club, above all others in recent years, to have benefited most from the Welsh connection. In view of the Brixham result last Saturday, it would be more kind to stick with Nottingham, who topped Austin's list.

Brixham's defeat of Bath, the holders of the John Player Special Cup, was a splendid performance, one of the largest dollops of egg-on-face since Llanelli went to Beeston at the back-end of last season and crept off home thrashed 45-3 by Nottingham. Take heed London Welsh!

MOSELEY PLAN TRIP TO DEVON

By MICHAEL AUSTIN

MOSELEY and Nottingham, fearing possible postponement of their home John Player Cup fourth round games on Saturday, have already made contingency plans for match practice in Devon on Sunday.

If necessary, Moseley will play Torquay and Nottingham will visit Brixham, another hospitable club, who last weekend became the first English side to beat a genuine Bath first team for 14 months.

Moseley are scheduled to play Coventry at The Readings and Nottingham should meet London Welsh for the first time, but a combination of snow and insistent hard frosts make the south-west seem almost tropical.

Rob Andrew, England's outside-half, will play for Nottingham on Saturday or Sunday at Beeston or Brixham while Nigel Melville, his possible half-back partner, is among seven Wasps' internationals playing at Waterloo.

Melville's recovery from knee trouble was fully apparent to those of us at Torquay, myself included, and his swift and unwavering service helped to launch Wasps to a 32-12 victory. Melville also partners Mark Ella, the Australian for the Anti-Assassins against Cambridge a week today.

Richard Cardus, a centre by strong inclination, will play on Wasp's right-wing, a choice doubtless inspired through his own versatility and his club's quest for experience in their seventh away tie in the past eight.

NEW AVERY IS AT BRIGHTON

By DAVID GREEN

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Mike Avery, former Cross Keys, Swansea and Aberavon full-back, has been solved now that the former Wales youth cap's father, Boyd Avery, has contacted interested parties.

Mike, 25, out of work in Wales, moved down to Brighton where prospects are apparently rosier and where his brother, Robert, lives. Robert, captain of Brighton, must view Mike's arrival with mixed feelings.

Robert, himself a fullback, has been forced by Mike's presence to move to centre. Mike has scored 58 points in four games and has interested the Sussex selectors who are keen to try him out against a London Old Boys side.

Steve Boyle . . . "Moseley have given me back my self-respect."

Forgotten man Boyle re-emerging

By MICHAEL AUSTIN

STEVE BOYLE, a youthful 31, still believes in sporting fairy tales after being twice whisked away from obscurity to prominence during a career now being reshaped at Moseley.

Boyle, a Gloucester lock for 12 seasons, suddenly rose from England B status to become a British Lion in 1983, then almost retired through self-doubt last autumn, but changed clubs, and is now a force behind Moseley's revival.

Within three months of leaving Gloucester, Boyle, as deputy captain, led Moseley to victory over his old club and scored both his side's tries in a 10-10 draw with Bristol, his dreaded rivals as an adopted West Countryman.

Boyle, born in Warrington, prefers to dwell on the next challenge, rather than the last, which for Moseley is Saturday's John Player fourth round tie at the Reddings against Coventry, who beat them in both previous Cup meetings.

"That must be the hardest game of the round," Boyle asserted. "Forward commitment and goal-kicking should settle it," he said, with multiple memories of similar matches for Gloucester.

Boyle reflected on his Kingsholm days with affection, but said: "The start of this season was something I wanted to forget. With John Orwin, another front jumper, as new captain, we were swapping around, and I'm not a middle jumper of high class.

"It was not Gloucester's fault. I was playing badly and started not even to worry about it. In the end, I was scarcely justifying a place in the second team, and decided to retire."

'Self-respect"

"I owe a lot to Moseley", continued Boyle. "They have given me back my self-respect, and I hope that I can put in at least a couple more seasons in return. Moseley's young side are making progress".

Boyle, a senior representative with Lloyds Bowmaker Finance Group, based in Gloucester, looks back to 1983 with a mixture of relish and regret. He won all his three England caps, and toured New Zealand with the Lions.

"I had a terrific time, but played so many matches in the year that I lost my edge for a while after that, even stopped getting the flutters before matches, and for me, that's a bad thing".

Now the flutters have returned and so has the form of Steve Boyle, who at 6ft 4in, and 17 stones has both the moustache and the joviality of the archelypal Edwardian village policeman.

Fitness surge

Boyle plans "to look up the ladder a bit" with his fitness surging back. "If England happened to need me at any time, they know where I am," added Boyle.

Ken Birrell, Moseley's match secrtary, and Gary Cox, the captain an dhooker, have enjoyed Boyle's presence on and off the field this season. Birrell said: "Steve is a tremendous personality and keeps everyone amused, even on the longest coach journey."

Cox added: "We have so few old heads in our team that Steve is especially appreciated. He is a real character, and seems to have modelled his lifestyle on another Gloucester and England man, Mike Burton."

Southern triallists will try again

By Our Schools Rugby Correspondent

IT never seemed likely that the postponed Southern Regional Trial of England's 18 Group could be held, as arranged, last Sunday and a second postponement was necessary.

The present arrangements are that the Northern Regional Trial, North v Midlands, will be held on Saturday at Loughborough G.S. (kick-off 2), and the Southern Regional Trial, South East v South & South-West, on Sunday on the National Westminster Bank ground at Beckenham, Kent (kick-off 2).

Hiscoke and Hunt of the Midlands team and four of the North, Hackney, Shearman, Mallalieu and Munro, represented England against New Zealand at Twickenham on Jan. 25 and must be in line for further consideration.

Hamer, who was ruled out by injury on that occasion, shares with Hunt the distinction of being the only players still available from last season's England 18 Group XV.

The squads for the Southern Regional Trial, already announced, include nine boys who were capped against New Zealand, but very few can be confident of retaining their places for the internationals in April.

Impressive record

Many schools have now finished their seasons, apart from Sevens and 15-a-Side festivals. Among them are Nottingham H S whose record over the last two seasons is particularly notable.

In that period they have won 31 games and lost only four. The four defeats were all by narrow margins, four points or less. The successes were in a very real sense due to a team effort, with 13 boys having represented Nottinghamshire either at 16 group or 18 group or both.

The current XV scored 564 points, the second highest total recorded at the school, and fine open rugby produced 103 tries in 17 matches, of which 15 were won.

F.A. Cup—Fifth Round

FASHANU AND McLEARY PUT LEICESTER OUT

By MICHAEL CALVIN

Millwall ... 2, Leicester ... 0

MILLWALL survived long periods of pressure at The Den last night, when they clinched an F A Cup quarter-final place at Luton or Watford with goals from John Fashanu and Alan McLeary.

The positive approach demanded by Gordon Milne, their manager, almost led to their taking the lead straight from the kick-off when Banks, put clear by Alan Smith, was thwarted by Sansome's smothering save.

That escape—and the Third Division side's resilience — enabled Millwall to take the lead on the stroke of half-time, when some supporters were still queueing to get into the ground.

The goal was a product of the strength and speed of Fashanu, who collected a clearance by Stevens, brushed aside two defenders, and scored with a fierce low shot from an acute angle.

To their credit, Leicester, only survivors from the Midlands, failed to allow that setback to unnerve them.

They adhered to the established pattern of playing direct, intelligent football and dominated for long periods of the second half.

Alert Lineker

Lineker, ever alert, twice went close and Sansome, in impressive form, produced a marvellous save to deny O'Neill's header from a Banks free kick.

The pressure was constant yet, in the 65th minute, Steve Lovell, Millwall's leading scorer, emphasised the potential of breakaway attacks by heading Hinshellwood's cross narrowly over the bar.

Millwall.—Sansome; Stevens, Hinshelwood, McLeary, L. Smith, Cusack, Lowndes, Fashanu, Chatterton, Lovell, Otulakowski.

Leicester.—Andrews; Feeley, Wilson, B. Smith, Williams, O'Neill, Lynex, Lineker, A. Smith, Ramsey, Banks.

STAINROD JOINS WEDNESDAY

By DONALD SAUNDERS

SIMON STAINROD, Queens Park Rangers' controversial striker, has returned to his native Sheffield to join Wednesday for £250,000.

Stainrod, 26, whose career began with Sheffield's other League club, United, has been unsettled at Loftus Road since a November dispute with Alan Mullery, who was then Rangers' manager.

Though Mr Mullery has since left, Rangers indicated their willingness to release Stainrod by signing John Byrne, from York, and Michael Robinson from Liverpool.

So Wednesday originally sought Stainrod's signature last month and renewed their quest after Rangers had been knocked out of the Milk Cup.

The move provides Stainrod with the opportunity to rebuild his career, which seemed to be going so well when he was included in the England squad for last summer's tour of South America.

Re-arranged

He must wait for Wednesday to play two games before lending his scoring power to their Championship challenge since he has still to serve a suspension for being sent off in a Milk Cup quarter-final replay against Ipswich.

The first of these matches has now been re-arranged for Hillsborough next Sunday, when Wednesday bring forward their April 20 fixture with Watford.

Both clubs are without a game next weekend when the League ordered Ipswich and Norwich to play the much-delayed first leg of their Milk Cup semi-final at Portman Road on Saturday.

Meanwhile, Ipswich hope to settle their postponed F.A. Cup-tie with Wednesday tonight, though all depends on a pitch inspection this morning.

If the game goes ahead, Eric Gates will return for his first appearance for Ipswich since injuring a calf against Rangers in the Milk Cup a month ago.

An afternoon inspection will be made at Plough Lane, to determine whether the pitch is fit for Wimbledon's F A Cup-tie with West Ham.

With Alan Cork, their leading scorer, recovered from influenza, Wimbledon plan to field the side who knocked out Nottingham Forest in the Previous round. West Ham also are unchanged.

About 8,000 York supporters are expected to make the journey to Anfield, where Liverpool are confident of staging their replay against the Third Division club.

CHELSEA OFF

After a referee's inspection last night, tonight's second leg of the Milk Cup semi-final between Chelsea and Sunderland was postponed. The new date is expected to be March 4.

ENDERSBY ERROR IS COSTLY

Blackpool ... 1, Swindon ... 0

SWINDON failed to crack Blackpool's unbeaten home record last night and the Lancastrians moved into second place in the Fourth Division with a late winning goal by Stewart.

Something resembling a thaw set in for the first game for more than six weeks at Bloomfield Road but at least Swindon found no snow at the resort in contrast to their own town.

Blackpool striker Stewart got his first shot four minutes into the second half but was narrowly wide from ten yards with an opportunity intelligently provided by John Deary.

For a spell the action petered out and incidents were few but in the 57th minute the seasiders failed to take a good chance. Dyer seized on a back pass but hesitated. The ball was taken from his feet and put over the line for a corner.

Scott Endersby made his only mistake of the game seven minutes from time when he failed to cut out a Stonehouse corner kick. Deary's shot was blocked but Stewart forced the ball through a ruck of players.

Swindon: Endersby; Gray, Baillie, Macari, Rowland, Cole, Henry, Coyne, Gordon, Dempsey, Nelson.

REES NETS HAT-TRICK

Walsall ...... 5, Derby 3
(Walsall 5-4 on agg.)

In an exhilarating Freight Rover Trophy match Mark Rees marked his return to Walsall's side after an absence of 10 weeks with two first-half goals to inspire the Saddlers and generally torment Derby.

It only took Walsall 17 mins to cancel out the single goal deficit from the first leg. Following sustained Derby pressure Walsall broke away down the left and Rees collected Elliott's cross to score the first.

Derby, parading their new £125,000 buy, Trevor Christie, retaliated in the 25th minute when Hart and Brazier, failed to clear their line. Christie, coolly glided his shot past Cherry.

Elliott's first

From the restart Walsall stunned Derby with a second goal from Rees who outpaced the Derby defenders and scored with a shot under Steele's body.

In the 35th minute Walsall went ahead on aggregate when Elliott collected a return pass from Handysides to score his first goal in 10 games since his move from Luton.

WEBB MAKES SAD RETURN

By A Special Correspondent

Bournemouth 2, Torquay 1

Dave Webb's return to the club that sacked him two years ago was not a happy one. And the Torquay manager had the added discomfort of his side going two down after just 22 minutes.

John Beck, back after breaking a collar bone, got both goals. His first of the season came after nine minutes with Bournemouth's well used strategy of despatching big defender, Roger Brown, into the goalmouth action, reaping its reward. Brown flicked on Paul Morrell's long throw and Beck hammered the ball in from about 10 yards.

Russell had the ball in the Torquay net again after 17 minutes, but unfairly said referee Alan Robinson.

Achampong nets winner on debut

By ROGER MALONE

Fulham ... 1, Oxford United ... 0

FULHAM'S burning determination in freezing conditions — spiced by a 62nd minute goal from Kenny Achampong, an exciting debutant — thwarted Oxford's attempt to regain the Second Division lead.

The pitch was cleared of snow, but the bone-hard surface meant a high bounce, with players often slipping and sliding out of control.

In such conditions—bar world class exponents—players need an extra split-second to master the ball. But time is not a luxury which Second Division sides allow each other.

Thus a scrambling, lunging contest saw the ball seldom under control for more than a couple of passes at a time. Clearly any goals were likely to be the result of a defensive mistake—or a flash of attacking inspiration.

Long range

Neither of these circumstances illuminated the first half. Early on, Langan's experience prompted Oxford crosses into the home box, but Hopkins and Lock cleared effectively, if awkwardly.

Then Fulham settled to periods of hard-running pressure, spiced with some nice touches from Achampong, 18, enjoying his League debut. But Oxford closed ranks and allowed Fulham only long range shooting opportunities.

The second half opened with Jeremy Charles, making his Oxford debut after a £100,000 transfer from Queens Park Rangers, missing out by shooting against a defender after good work from Brock, the England Under 21 midfielder.

Rosenior played the ball back across the goalmouth and Achampong collected a bravely taken goal. The tall English-born lad of African parents, hurled himself in amongst some flying Oxford boots to force the ball home.

Achampong continued, with adroit touches and fluid movements, to catch the eye. Oxford brought on Rhoades-Brown for McDonald for the last 12 minutes, but could not prevent Fulham from moving into the pack chasing the leading group.

Oxford. — Hardwick; Langan, McDonald, Trewick, Briggs, Shotton, McDermott, Aldridge, Charles, Hebberd, Brock.

England women lose golden chance

By A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT in Melbourne

ENGLAND squandered their chance for gold when they lost two important matches on the sixth day of the women's world bowls championships at Melbourne yesterday.

The triples team, Brenda Atherton, Betty Stubbing and Mavis Steele, lost a thriller in round 14 when beaten 17-16 by Hongkong after appearing to have the match won.

England led 14-7 after 12 ends but wilted in the 26C heat as Hongkong added 10-2 over the next six ends. Scores were tied 16-16 with one end to play with England holding three shots, and the jack four inches from the ditch.

Lost lead

Helen Wong, the Hongkong skipper, still had a bowl in her hand. Displaying cool nerves she drew between jack and bowl for game and a share of the triples lead with Australia. England lost their earlier game 22-11 to Scotland.

Norma Shaw and Jean Valls, the England pair, were also beaten 22-17 by Hongkong's Joan Humphries and Lona Sadick. The England pair faded again after leading 13-10 at the 12th and allowed Hongkong to take a winning break 12-4 over the next nine ends.

The only ray of light for England came in the next round when they won both the pairs and triples from Argentina.

Disappointing

Eileen Bell and Nan Allely of Ireland, defending pairs champions, also had a lean day. They lost their 13th round match 13-24 to Fiji's Maraia Lum On and Willow Fong, and never recovered from being down 1-15 at the 10th to Botswana in the next before losing 16-22.

The Ireland triples team lost their first match 11-24 to Fiji and then beat Botswana 16-13 and West Samoa 26-13.

FAVOURITES KEPT APART

The Yetton Trophy, the women's inter-club national bowls championship, reaches the decisive quarter-final stage tomorrow.

Tees-side, Folkestone, Falcon and Chelmsford, the strongest survivors, have avoided immediate clashes. Falcon, the 1971 winners, scraped home against the strong Norfolk and Norwich team and now meet Harpenden, who have yet to reach the final.

Twice winners

Tees-side, the 1980 champions, are without Norma Shaw, who is in Melbourne. But with Rayna Campbell, the current national singles champion, Phoebe Spence and Betty Johnson available, they should overcome Peterborough.

Folkestone, twice winners and twice runners-up in the past 12 years, look too strong for Nailsea, one of the west's smaller clubs. Stoke Mandeville clash with Croydon in the other quarter-final.

Teesside 98, Scunthorpe 66—Peterborough 85, Kettering 71—Falcon 69, Norfolk & Norwich 66—Harpenden 86, Barking 53—Stoke Mandeville 78, Wey Valley 70—Croydon 68, Cambridge Park 61—Folkestone 114, Isle of Wight 57—Nailsea 89, W. Cornwall 59.

Schools Soccer

London date is pointer to England strength

By OUR SCHOOLS SOCCER CORRESPONDENT

THE English Schools Football Association starts its international programme on Friday evening when England Under-15 play Northern Ireland at the Orient's ground, at Brisbane Road, Leyton (7.30).

The first match is always a pointer to the team's strength in a particular year.

This season followers of schoolboy football will be interested to see how boys from the Football Association G M National School, who make up six of the team, tackle their responsibilities.

The England team is:

Full programme

The schools international programme is full and varied. Last season England won all their matches except the two away games against West Germany, losing 4-1 in Berlin and 2-0 in Saarbrucken.

This year following the Northern Ireland match, W. Germany come to Wembley Stadium and then there are games against the Republic of Ireland, Scotland and Wales, befor the final match on June 8, again at Wembley, against Switzerland.

There is also a week's tour of Holland in May.

This week 30 boys are playing on snow-covered pitches at Lilleshall in the first of three trials to choose the 15 who will form the 1985 intake for the National School and coaching by Bobby Robson and his staff.

Most games arranged for this past week have been postponed or cancelled because of frozen pitches and the E S F A National Inter-School and Inter-County Cup competitions are running well behind schedule.

There is a large fixure backlog to be fitted in before the end of term when the festivals start and the ski parties set out for the Continent.

Following Aldenham's successful tour of Singapore and Hongkong in December, Oakham School, who only play football in the Lent term, embark on an ambitious 10-day tour at the end of March to Trinidad and Tobago.

This is the first time that any English school side has played in the islands and the two games against the Trinidad Under-19 and Under-21 teams are being played in the National Stadium under floodlights.

Snooker

Reardon & Thorne knocked out

By A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

THERE was little cheer for experienced campaigners Ray Reardon and Willie Thorne in the second round of the £250,000 Dulux British Open Snooker Championship in Derby yesterday.

Reardon, who has won the world title six times, failed dismally to take advantage of a 4-1 lead and slipped to a 5-4 defeat by Dave Martin, of Peterlee.

Thorne's defeat was even more spectacular.

Remarkable recovery

Reardon, wearing spectacles for the first time in tournament play, seemed to have everything in perspective when he won four of the first five frames against Martin.

But Martin, 37, then launched a remarkable recovery, compiling breaks of 44, 62, and 53, to level the match.

The deciding frame was an anti-climax. Reardon led briefly, but unaccountably conceded 25 points and three free balls with a sequence of foul shots—and Martin gratefully accepted his opportunity.

Thorne, seeded 12th, could have few complaints about his summary dismissal from snooker's richest tournament to date. Never able to find his touch, he allowed McLeod to dominate affairs and an opening frame break of 67 provided the Scot with all the confidence he needed.

Unhappy Thorne, who mustered only 151 points in the five frames said: "That was probably the worst I've ever played, but Murdo always seems to turn it on against me. Then again he always seems to play badly on television, so I hope he can sort it out this time. I wish him luck.

"Perhaps I am suffering a reaction from my first big win, but I don't really think so."

SECOND ROUND

M. McLeod (Edinburgh) bt W. Thorne (Leicester) 5-0. Frames: 80-26, 65-17, 99-34, 71-31, 64-23.

D. Martin (Peterlee) bt R. Reardon (Stoke) 5-4. Frames: 35-72, 37-69, 28-62, 98-15, 25-71, 67-13, 66-54, 64-49, 88-43.

Table Tennis

ENGLAND MUST WIN THIS ONE

ENGLAND, winners only once in five outings, face West Germany at Portsmouth tonight in their penultimate match of the super division of the European Table Tennis League, writes Dick Rutnagur.

Only promoted Holland trail England in the League table —and that on goal average.

Tonight's match seems doomed to be a financial disaster. The Mountbatten Centre holds 1,300 spectators and only 200 seats had been sold by last night.

However, a win would give England considerable protection against relegation, and yet it would not guarantee their staying up because Holland, whom they play in their final match, are capable of springing surprises.

Holland's hidden potential was demonstrated in their last match, in which they shocked Poland. In recent years Germany is the country that has most often gone up and down between the super and first divisions.

England have played two of their five matches hitherto without their No. 1, Desmond Douglas, who in his two matches won all his four singles encounters and three of his six doubles ties.

ENGLAND.—D. Douglas, A. Cooke, C. Prean, Miss A. Gordon.

Badminton

TOP NAMES AVOID NATIONALS

By D. J. RUTNAGUR

FOR the second year running, England's leading players will miss the National Badminton Championships at Coventry from April 12-14.

Nick Yates and Helen Troke, among the singles players, and Martin Dew and Nora Perry, doubles specialists both, will definitely not compete, though the closing date for entries has not been reached.

There is also a doubt about the appearance of Steve Baddeley, England's joint No. 1. He says he will compete only if he happens to be in the country at the time and Baddeley is believed to be negotiating terms to play in a foreign event on the same dates.

The tournament, which used to be staged just before Christmas, is a victim of the big money competitions in the Far East which arose when badminton went open three years ago.

Last season Baddeley, Yates, Miss Troke, Karen Beckman and Jane Sutton (then Miss Webster) missed the nationals because the tournament clashed with the finals of the Pro-Kennex Grand Prix.

Less inclined

To avoid a repetition of this situation they were moved from December to April, though it was always apparent the competition would stir little interest so late in the season.

Now players are less inclined to participate because they want to rest before the world championships in Canada in mid-June. Another consideration is the sharp drop in prize money, with the men's singles prize only £100.

Prize money has shrunk because the poor quality of last year's entry drove away the sponsors, Yonex, and the future of the competition, established 21 years ago, must be in considerable peril.

RACKETS

AMATEUR DOUBLES FINAL. — C. J. Hue Williams & J. A. N. Prenn bt W. R. Boone & R. S. Crawley 15-8, 15-2, 15-14, 17-14.

OR the second year running, England's leading ayers will miss the tional Badminton Championships at Coventry m April 12-14.

ick Yates and Helen se, among the singles ers, and Martin Dew and a Perry, doubles specialists, will definitely not compete though the closing date entries has not been hed.

ere is also a doubt about appearance of Steve deley, England's joint No 1, says he will compete only if happens to be in the country the time and Baddeley is ved to be negotiating terms lay in a foreign event on the e dates.

he tournament, which used be staged just before Christ is a victim of the big money petitions in the Far East ch arose when badminton t open three years ago. ast season Baddeley, Yates, Troke, Karen Beckman and Sutton, then Miss Webster, ed the nationals because the rnament clashed with the is of the Pro-Kenner Grand o avoid a repetition of this ation they were moved from ember to April, though it was ame apparent the competition id sti little interest so late he season.

ow players are less inclined participate because they want rest before the world champs in Canada in mid-June. other consideration is the op crop in prize money, with men's singles prize only £100. prize money has shrunk ause the poor quality of last ... entry drove away the ... sponsors, and the future the ... established 21 ... must be in considerable peril.

GUIDE BY HARVEY LEE

BBC-1

6.50 a.m.-9.20 Breakfast Time, with Frank Bough and Selina Scott. 10.30 Play School. 10.50-11.15 Gharbar—Surekha Vijh talks about her poetry. 12.30 News, Weather. 12.57 Regional News (London and S.E. only: Financial Report and News Headlines). 1 Pebble Mill at One—remembers the much-missed presenter Donny MacLeod, with film of his visit to Singapore. 1.45 King Rollo. 1.50-2 Bric-a-Brac. 3.48 (not London) Regional news. 3.50 Play School. 4.10 The Wombles, rpt. 4.15 The Puppy's New Adventures. 4.35 ★The Ring in the Rough Stuff, part three. 4.50 Captain Caveman. 5 John Craven's Newsround. 5.5 Seaview—Return of the youthful comedy set in a Blackpool b and b establishment. 5.35 Grange Hill. (Ceefax sub-titles.)

6 00 NEWS. WEATHER.

6 35 REGIONAL MAGAZINES.

7 00 WOGAN—The week's middle visit to Terry Wogan's schedule-filling chat show.

7 40 STEPTOE AND SON — Come Dancing. Welcome though poignant return to the scrapyard, where Wilfrid Brambell and Harry H. Corbett live on as Galton and Simpson's eternally at-odds rag and bone men. Repeat.

8 10 THE TWO RONNIES—Cabaret comedians Lockstock and Barrel (otherwise known as Barker and Corbett) become entangled with diamond thieves on board a cruise ship in tonight's filmlet, "Caribbean Nights". Elaine Paige is their singing guest.

9 00 NEWS, WEATHER.

9 25 "THE EIGER SANCTION" (1975). The Clint Eastwood season clips along with this scenic thriller, which our hero also directed for his own production company, Malpaso. He plays a hitman named Hemlock, lured out of retirement to dispatch someone halfway up the north face of the Eiger. George Kennedy also appears.

11 30 NIGHT COURT—A hooker takes a fancy to the cherubic judge in this courtroom comedy series. 11.55 Weather.

BBC-2

6.30 a.m.-7.20 Open University. 9.38-3 Daytime on Two. 3.50-4.45 Mrs Thatcher at Congress. 5.30 News, weather. 5.35 Arthur Negus Enjoys—Tea at Wilton, with Michael Smith, the television chef. Rpt.

6 00 "THE TALL STRANGER" (1957). A fraternal feud impedes the progress west of a wagon train bearing wounded Joel McCrea through his horrible half-brother Barry Kelley's land. Virginia Mayo provides another cause for rivalry.

7 20 100 GREAT SPORTING MOMENTS — Johnny Prescott v Billy Walker in 1963. The re-match is recycled tomorrow night.

7 35 OPEN SPACE—New Year, New Hopes. A check on the condition of some of the 17,000 "boat-people", who made it to Britain five years ago, and today celebrate the Vietnamese New Year. But the clash in cultures has begun to take its toll on traditional values, and there are still educational and employment problems to overcome. A rare glimpse through the bamboo veil, courtesy of the expatriate community itself.

8 05 BOOKMARK—Pieces by Victoria Glendinning on "Omar Khayyam" translator Edward FitzGerald, and Susan Cheever on her late Pulitzer Prize-winning father John provide a setting for a gem of an interview with the recently-discovered novelist Rosamond Lehmann, 84, who understandably feels "somewhat posthumous" by such belater reappraisal.

9 00 BLOTT ON THE LANDSCAPE—More of the deceitful comedy scripted by Malcolm Bradbury from Tom Sharpe, a master at pulling the strings of ill-fate from afar. In this chapter, the misfortunes rain down on Dundridge, the man from the ministry, doubly duped by Sir Giles and his confederates, and hotly pursued by the lascivious Lady Maud. Simon Cadell plays Dundridge with the corners of his mouth seemingly anchored to his knees. (Ceefax sub-titles.)

9 55 CABARET—Last visit to the smokey studio, where debonair Desmond Dingle (National Theatre of of Brent, director Patrick Barlow) introduces acts from the alternative cabaret scene, and A Little Westbrook Music, the latest incarnation of jazzman Mike Westbrook.

10 40 NEWSNIGHT. 11.25 Weather. 11.30-12.25 Open University.

ITV Thames

6.15 a.m. Good Morning Britain. 9.25 Thames News Headlines. 9.30 For Schools. 12 Button Moon. 12.10 Our Backyard. 12.30 Mr. and Mrs. 1 News. 1.20 Thames News. 1.30 A Country Practice. 2.25 Home Cookery Club—Savoury egg slice. 2.30 On the Market—announces the creator of the thriftiest daily menu. 3 Gems. 3.25 Thames News Headlines. 3.30 Sons and Daughters. 4 Button Moon, rpt. 4.15 The Moomins. 4.20 Do It. (Oracle sub-titles.) 4.45 The Book Tower—with Nicholas Fisk, author of the "Starstormers" series. (Oracle sub-titles.) 5.15 Blockbusters.

5 45 NEWS.

6 00 THAMES NEWS.

6 25 HELP! on Racial Harassment.

6 35 CROSSROADS.

7 00 WISH YOU WERE HERE . . .?—Judith Chalmers works on her tan in Eilat, Israel's Red Sea resort, and Chris Kelly reports from the Greek islands, leaving Scarborough to the Mackays, a civil servant and his family. (Oracle sub-titles.)

7 30 CORONATION STREET. (Oracle sub-titles.)

8 00 THIS IS YOUR LIFE—Another biographical trap sprung by Eamonn Andrews.

8 30 THERE COMES A TIME—There is little at first, or even second, sight funny about someone being told that his ticker is about to cease ticking and this first situation comedy by the hitherto solid playwright Wally K. Daly is indeed more grey than black. Andrew Sachs is endearing as the electronics executive somewhat bewildered by the unexpected outcome of his annual medical. (Oracle.)

9 00 THE LAST PLACE ON EARTH—Minor Diversion. Scott and Amundsen prepare in earnest for their race to the Pole, although at this stage, they are assumed to be heading in opposite directions. Martin Shaw and Sverre Anker Ousdal play the two explorers in chapter two of Central's lavish production. (Oracle sub-titles.)

10 00 NEWS AT TEN, followed by Thames News Headlines.

10 30 MIDWEEK SPORTS SPECIAL—World championship boxing (flyweight Charlie Magri against Sot Chitalada of Thailand), Cup soccer highlights and the darts final from Oldham. 12.15 Night Thoughts, with Rabbi Julia Neuberger.

Channel 4

2.30 "Overlord" (1975, b/w): Writer-director Stuart Cooper's film of the Normandy landings uses archive footage from the Imperial War Museum, and staged sequences with unknown actor Brian Stirmer as its ill-fated soldier hero, for added realism. 4 A Plus 4. 4.30 Countdown. 5 Alice. 5.30 The Mary Tyler Moore Show.

6 00 DANGER MAN (b/w). With Patrick McGoohan. Repeat.

6 30 THE LIVING BODY—Accident. The healing powers of the human body, as illustrated by a fallen skier.

7 00 CHANNEL 4 NEWS; at 7.50 Comment by a Plaid Cymru politician, and Weather.

8 00 THE DRAGON HAS TWO TONGUES—The Gentry Century. Wynford Vaughan-Thomas and Professor Gwyn Williams express divergent views over the role of the gentry in 18th-century Welsh history.

8 30 DIVERSE REPORTS — The Price of Coal. Eyes right, as Peter Clarke argues for the pits to be privatised.

ARMS CONTROL IS THATCHER'S TOP PRIORITY

By JAMES WIGHTMAN
Political Correspondent in Washington

THE Prime Minister travelled to the United States last night for a crowded three-day programme including talks and lunch with President Reagan today on topics ranging from East-West nuclear arms control to Britain's economic problems.

Before going to the White House Mrs Thatcher will address a joint meeting of Congress — the first British Prime Minister to be so honoured since Churchill in 1952.

In a country where the Press and broadcasting companies are constantly searching for "another Watergate," Mrs Thatcher expects to be asked, in a series of television interviews this morning, about the Belgrano secrets case and the claims by Mr Clive Ponting of a Government cover-up. She is ready to deliver robust denials.

The Prime Minister is accompanied by Sir Geoffrey Howe, Foreign Secretary, and Mr Heseltine, Defence Secretary.

As she flew to Washington by R A F VC10, it was stressed that there were several important matters but no serious differences to be raised with Mr Reagan. As she told an American television interviewer at the weekend, she is "his biggest fan."

Space defence

At the head of their agenda is the subject of nuclear arms control, including America's space defence plans.

Mrs Thatcher will receive an updating report from Mr Reagan following their talks at Camp David before Christmas and in advance of the arms negotiations to be resumed between America and Russia in Geneva next month.

The Prime Minister approves of research continuing into the space defence concept, officially called Strategic Defence Initiative. She would like British companies to win some of the massive contracts.

But she feels that the space-based, anti-missile system should not be produced or deployed without treaty negotiations with the Russians.

The perceived scope for progress on arms control will be part of a review of relations between the West and Russia.

The Prime Minister also wants to discuss the Middle East and international terrorism.

Although she is giving it lower priority than on some previous visits, Mrs Thatcher also intends to raise again the subject of America's huge budget deficit which affects British interest rates and the state of sterling against the dollar and other currencies.

Economic matters

She will have a further discussion about economic matters tomorrow with Mr Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

The Prime Minister's programme, which began with a briefing from British Embassy officials last night, is characteristically hectic.

Her day will begin with the first of four TV interviews at 6.45 a.m. and conclude around midnight after a dinner at the British Embassy. The dinner will mark the 200th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between Britain and the United States.

She will also receive an international award to mark her "contributions to world understanding."

The Prime Minister will have a half-day programme in Washington tomorrow and return to London early on Friday.

IRA CASH

By JAMES ALLAN and A. J. McILROY

ETA in Spain are also believed to have paid financial dividends.

In Ireland, IRA fund-raising activities have resulted in an unprecedented crime wave in the 26 counties where 11 policemen have been killed on duty, usually trying to prevent armed robberies.

The republic has had an average of 500 armed robberies a year since 1979, with the Friday hold-up of armoured vans carrying wages becoming a common occurrence, so much so that the wailing of police sirens is now known as "the Friday Angelus."

NORAID CASH

£229,000 a year

IAN BALL in New York writes: Noraid has said it raises an average of about $250,000 (£229,000) a year through fund-raising events organised by its 90-odd branches in the United States and Canada.

This is the sum publicly reported to the United States Justice Department, under the requirement that Irish Iorthern Aid register as an "agent" of a foreign organisation.

But British officials in the United States, and some Noraid-watchers in the Justice Department suspect that in addition to the fund-raising totals reported, substantial amounts of cash are moved by courier to support IRA activities in Northern Ireland or kept in the United States to finance clandestine arms deals.

CAR BAN LIFTED TO AID SKIN DISEASE MAN

Mr Kevin Lowes, 26, persuaded magistrates at Bracknell, Berkshire, yesterday, to lift a three-year driving ban imposed in 1982 for drink-driving, so that he can earn enough money to get treatment for chronic psoriasis, a skin disease.

Mr Lowes, of Fairview Road, Wokingham, Berkshire, wants to attend a private clinic in Israel which uses mud from the Dead Sea to treat psoriasis sufferers.

The self-employed builder told magistrates he had been unable to find enough work while unable to drive. Mr Richard Martin, his solicitor, said: "It would be a kind deed and an act of mercy to have the driving ban lifted."

SOLICITOR IS STRUCK OFF

Mr Graham Jenkins, a solicitor who practised from Wemyss Place, Edinburgh, and is a nephew of the late Richard Burton, was struck off the roll of solicitors in Scotland yesterday.

The Scottish Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal said that Mr Jenkins had acted "inexcusably" in dealings which last year led to an 18-month jail sentence for frauds totalling £225,000. The tribunal said he had arranged bridging facilities in fictitious names for the use of other clients.

Pledge to Europe on defence

By RICHARD BEESTON in Washington

PRESIDENT REAGAN, seeking European support for his anti-missile defence programme, will tell Mrs Thatcher today that he does not intend "to erect a defence umbrella over the United States and leave our friends in the lurch."

Any exploitation of the Space Defence Initiative programme, a senior official said yesterday at a briefing on Mrs Thatcher's visit to Washington, would be used to protect Europe as much as the United States, and that was the sort of issue that would come up in today's White House talks.

The official said Mrs Thatcher had overcome what he called "nuclear allergy" in her own country and could be "very helpful" in America's dispute with New Zealand over the ban on nuclear American warships visiting New Zealand ports.

The official said Mrs Thatcher "faced a situation in her own country over the rising protest about the deployment of nuclear weapons prior to her election in 1983."

"She didn't try to hide from the issue, she made it an issue," he said. "She made her resolve for the maintenance of a nuclear balance and credibility in nuclear deterrence an issue in the campaign and, as you know, she scored a resounding success in the polls.

"I think she is a very good example of standing up to these issues and getting the support of public opinion behind her."

Apart from East/West relations and the international economy, the official said, the United States would raise with Mrs Thatcher the issue of "the growing problem of multinational terrorism in Europe."

Budget deficit

Asked about America's record budget deficit and the soaring dollar, the official said the U.S. was ready to discuss these issues but this did not necessarily mean it was ready to make concessions.

"I would steer you away from the notion that there are any major disagreements" on these issues, he said. "On bedrock economic philosophy, the importance of a free international market I think the President and Mrs Thatcher see things in very much the same light."

He added: "There is no secret that she wants to discuss the strength of the dollar and the declining rate of the pound, but "it is very hard to prove that there is a direct correlation between the strength of the dollar and interest rates.

"There are other factors at work and one of those factors is the dynamism of the American economy. The fact that the American economy is growing, naturally attracts investments."

GANDHI RULES AGAINST RIOT INQUIRY

Mr Rajiv Gandhi, Indian Prime Minister, said yesterday that no official inquiry would be held into the anti-Sikh rioting in which at least 2,770 people died after his mother's murder by two Sikh bodyguards on October 31.

The Press Trust of India quoted Mr Gandhi as telling an election meeting in the central state of Madhya Pradesh that an inquiry would not be in the interest of the Sikhs.

"I am very keen to safeguard the interests of the Sikhs and do not want any anti-Sikh atmosphere to be built up again."—Reuter.

TORY BLUES ON OXFORD

By GODFREY BARKER

THE Tory rearguard actions to concrete over Oxford University, or to drop it on Nevada, donate it to Mr Mugabe or moor it off Bikini Atoll made progress in the Commons yesterday.

Honour (you know whose) was at stake again. Some of us counted our spoons.

The Prime Minister's Sir Walter Ralegh was Mr Harry Greeneway, M P for Ealing North. He is a fellow of clenched visage who fancies retribution.

Harry's style befits a magistrate and a former Head of English at Millbank School which he was.

ever, is deviant behaviour in

More perplexing to him, how institutions. From Mr Peter Brooke, Education Minister, Harry elicited what every schoolboy knows: that Oxford is useless at maths.

Pious lament

"The real increase in annual recurrent income in British universities from 1979/80 to 1982/83 is 10·8 per cent," intoned Mr Brooke (one fancied that the small print mattered). "That for Oxford is 9·3 per cent," though not precisely comparable.

Tories sighed loudly. So much for dumb dons who refused Mrs Thatcher her honorary doctorate because resources had been cut.

Harry, sic transit gloria writ large upon his brow, rose and lamented piously.

"Was it not deplorable," the tone was of experienced sadness, "that the Congregation refused an hon. degree for Oxford's most famous daughter on the spurious grounds of education cuts and without proper study of the facts?"

Mr Brooke, who has studied "La Condition Humaine" as a former president of the Balliol JCR and in a long night in the Whips' office, seems to have somthing different in deplorable behaviour from Harry.

"No cause be can considered lost until the University of Oxford has espoused it," was his cheerful answer.

Mr John Stokes now wept for England. He is Haileybury, the Queen's College and an old India hand. On his moustachoed features the sunset of the British Empire lingers

Elegant irony

Nowadays he specialises in elegant irony. "Is there a relationship," he mused, "between what taxpayers put into Oxford and what comes out?"

Mr Brooke proved to have pulled his answers from the Oxford Book of Oxford. That university's dominance in British politics derived from the better train service to London than that from Cambridge.

"But the House will recall Hazlitt," he wittered on, "that 'You will hear more good things on the outside of a stagecoach from London to Oxford than if you were to pass a 12-month with the undergraduates or Heads of Colleges of that famous university'."

Next in unvented spleen came Mr Roy Galley (C., Halifax) (blame him on Worcester College). In view of Oxford's declining reputation, why not shift its resources to northern universities?

Mr Brooke was in another world. "It is now 50 years since Cambridge had a man in Downing Street," he quoth irrelevantly.

"If the University of Oxford insists on committing hubris then we risk the nemesis of another Cambridge man."

Ah, the Dorian strain! Labour rolled around confounded. "He's very bitter, very bitter indeed," eventually deduced a scholar and an egghead.

No. 10 PIT TALKS

By JOHN RICHARDS

would be prepared to reword one paragraph to reassure both the NUM and Nacods that the future of all pits will be subject to consideration under a modified colliery review procedure.

But it would insist on the agreement making overt references to the NUM recognising that the interests of its members are best served by the development of an economically sound mining industry in which the Board has the right to manage.

The Board also wants the union to acknowledge that pits which cannot be developed to provide the Board, in line with its responsibilities, with a satisfactory basis for continuing operations will be closed.

If a formulation along these lines proves acceptable to the NUM and Nacods executive, it could still be a hard one to "sell" to the coalfield delegates,

OUR POLITICAL STAFF writes: There was a tempered mood for optimism at Westminster last night

The Government was cautioning against over-optimism, but senior politicians on both sides of the House were suggesting privately that the "coffee and biscuits" at No. 10 could only have done good.

The Prime Minister showed no hint of conciliation in her report of the meetings to the Commons. Although she stressed the Government's appreciation of the work being done by Mr Norman Willis and other members of the TUC.
